CONCERNING LARKS (Thrush).—(1) I expect your bird is coming into condition, and beginning to use its crest. Some birds are naturally a little bit square at the back of the head. I do not think you have anything to worry about. (2) Ragged and frayed tails are not by any means uncommon; you can either trim off the broken feathers or withdraw the stumps; the new ones may retain their perfect shape. Possibly your bird is one of unusually upright carriage, so that its tail naturally drags along the ground. Is the front of your cage (namely, the woodwork) very deep? If so, it may cause him to stretch and stand upright to see over. As he settles down to cage life it is just possible he will improve. If it troubles you, why not take a little bit off the end. This is easily managed with a pair of sharp scissors.

GREENFINCH AND CANARY (Beginner).—It is rather early yet to allow your birds to go to nest. I would advise you to part them and reduce the stimulating food, giving them canary and a third of German rape, with plenty of green food. If she lays within a week after separation, you had better put them together again, giving her a nest and building materials, but if she does not lay, keep her back by giving an aperient, and it would be just as well if you could remove the cock bird to another room out of sight and hearing. If you are obliged to let her go to nest, keep her in the warm kitchen, and do not think of moving her at least for another month. The mild weather and warm room is the cause of her being so forward, but I fear many hens are in the same condition.

CAGING BULLFINCH AND GOLDFINCH (C.P.).—I have kept these two together in a cage without any trouble, but it all depends upon the temperament of the birds. Some Bullfinches are particularly vicious, and become a nuisance in a mixed aviary, but as a rule the cock bird is less inclined to be "nasty" than the hen; she can be a "terror" if she feels that way inclined. I would advise you to place your two birds in cages near to each other and let them have a few days to become acquainted. After a time you could put them into the large cage. I do not anticipate that you will have any trouble, especially if you have no hen birds within sight or hearing.

GREENFINCH AND CANARY (Nimbo).—You will have no trouble to breed from your Greenfinch cock and one of the Canary hens, but I do not think you will manage to pair him with both of them. As a rule the cock Greenie is a very affectionate husband and does not like to be separated from his wife, and is very likely to be spiteful to any partner that you introduce her to. The young hybrids are not very valuable unless they are exceptionally large and of good colour.

TREATMENT OF BULLFINCH (Alpha).—I do not think you can improve upon your treatment of the Bullfinch, excepting that you might give it a few buds of fruit or thorn. Cut a small spray and stick through the bars of his cage. You will find he will soon strip it of the buds. Any of the fruit trees are good, but no evergreens. Failing these, he should have a spray of chickweed or groundsel. The bath is good for it, but I hardly think the lotion is necessary. (2) If you think of trying for Hybrids this year, you should procure your birds at once to get them used to each other and all their surroundings.

KEEPING SOFTBILLS (In Doubt).—You would have trouble if you tried to keep a Robin in with other softbills; he is not generous enough to allow others to share his board and lodging. If you can procure a common Whitethroat and a Blackcap, I think these will be the most suitable. They are both very nice subjects and are cheerful songsters. As you do not ask, I presume you know how to feed such birds. If not, either write again or perhaps you would like to procure the Softbill Part of the "British Bird Manual." You will there find a lot of information respecting the feeding and treatment of these charming birds.

CHAFFINCH HYBRIDS (H. Reynolds).—If your Chaffinch is a cock bird, he should certainly soon be in song. I do not think you stand much chance of being successful in breeding from it, as you are only a beginner. Neither the Chaffinch-Canary nor the Yellow Bunting-Canary have yet been produced. If your Linnet is a cock bird, why not try him with a hen Canary? You will by this means gain a little experience in the management of a hybrid pair, and then another year you could try something more difficult. All the Canary crosses with British birds are rather loud singers, particularly the Goldfinch and Linnet. The Redpoll-Canary is possibly the least noisy, although I have heard one of them make quite enough noise.

HAWFINCH-GREENFINCH (Ted).—This cross has not yet been produced, but it is just possible that it will be some day. As your birds are on such good terms with each other, I certainly would try them. If you are successful the young would be valuable. Give them the very largest cage you possibly can spare, and plenty of nesting material. An old Greenfinch nest would make a good foundation if you could manage to get one. Give the Hawfinch all the small insects you can manage to get hold of, and when not able to get these, let him have mealworms. Feed the Greenie on plenty of wild food. (2) The Bramblefinch has been mated with a Chaffinch, and the young ones exhibited. It is very doubtful if you could manage to get hold of one so late in the season that would be suitable. Perhaps you could hand-rear same during the summer, or procure a young one in its nest feather.

FEEDING FINCHES (C. Hutchings).—Make a mixture of equal parts Canary and teazle, with half as much hemp and a quarter of linseed and one-eighth of summer rape. This will be the staple food for the Goldfinch. For other seeds and treatment, read advice given to A.C.S. in this issue. Feed the Bullfinch on two parts canary, one of summer rape, and half of linseed, with a spoonful of wild seed mixture once a week, and a few sunflower seeds daily. Buds of fruit trees as advised to Alpha, with green food and wild seeds as procurable. You can feed your Linnet and Redpoll upon the same seed as the Bullie, omitting the sunflower, or only cracking a few for them occasionally, or in place of it a very little hemp. Have you our Nutshell Booklets on the Goldie and Bullie? If not, I think you would find them of great assistance.

GREENFINCH AND BRAMBLEFINCH (R. Boyce).—How are you treating your Greenfinch? You give no particulars of diet, cage room, or where he is kept. Perhaps you are feeding him too heavily, and he is over fat through want of exercise, or you may not be giving him green food. The Greenie is generally so exceptionally healthy that there is mostly something specially wrong with his management if he goes soft. I scarcely know how to advise you without any particulars, but anyway, you had better catch him, and if in good condition give him a dose of Glauber salts, as much as will cover a shilling in his drinking water for one day. If no better, write again, giving full particulars of management. (2) I do not think you can improve upon your method of steadying your Bramble, although you do not say if you handle the cage. This you should do daily, gently moving him from perch to perch.

Death of a Noted British Bullfinch.

Sir,—I regret to report that my winning Bullfinch is dead. I entered him for the Palace, but did not send him, owing to his illness. I sent a field-moulted specimen in his place, and anyone who had the catalogue would think it strange to see this was competing for Ramsden's Special. The dead Bullie took 1st under the following judges:—Messrs. Battye, Roe, Longden, Norman, Poole, Robson, and Moulton. His last victory was at Llanelly, where he took 1st and spl. for the best Finch in the show, also beating Mr. Jones' Bullfinch, which took 2nd at the Palace Show. A. E. Cheney.

The West of Fife C.B. League.

Sir,—I was rather astonished to see among the club reports last week a report of the annual general meeting of the West of Fife Cage Bird League, signed by Mr. R. Muir, secretary of Lochgelly C.B.S. I would like to know when he was appointed correspondenee secretary, also how he or anyone else could report a meeting that they never attended. Such a report is bound to be rather misleading. If Mr. Muir likes to look up the back numbers of Cage Birds he will see who won the specials; or the post card I sent him on the 15th January, gave full number of points scored, and special winners. But if he would like the secretarial duties to perform, he has only to attend the next meeting, when the officials for the next season are to be appointed, on March 7th, at 7 p.m., in Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath (new delegates please note). He will stand a good chanee, as nobody will oppose him. I would like to make it clear to all whom it may concern that the undersigned is secretary of the West of Fife C.B.S., and will be until March the 7th. Jas. Cordery.

[We have looked up the report in question. It is not in the handwriting of Mr. Muir, but bears his signature at the end.—Editor.]

The Disqualified Borders at Bethesda Show.

Sir,—Mr. Wellings' answer to my first question I consider merely quibbling with a schedule; if not, what is the use of our specialist clubs providing rules for the guidance of show committees? The answer to my second is, a "little experience" makes him think so. Well, there is an old saying that a little experience is worse than none at all, and I am afraid in this instance it meets the present case. May I inform Mr. Wellings that his little experience has led him very far astray, as he disqualified a bird which had absolutely been moulted on nothing else but plain canary seed, rape, and the usual green food. My third question Mr. Wellings says he supported to the satisfaction of those around. I am sorry I was not there at the time, but what I heard when I did get there was anything but satisfaction. May I ask Mr. Wellings is he prepared to support his decision by placing £2 with you against my bird (I consider this its value); I, on my part, am willing to send the bird for thorough examination to any Border specialist appointed by you. Re my reference to short entries, I don't quite understand Mr. Wellings' reply. Indiscriminate disqualification is the cause I was referring to; this is not the first of such, which we have had in North Wales this season. Now, Mr. Wellings, be a sportsman; either admit you made a mistake or come forward and have your mistake proved to you. A. W. Huxley.

The Clashing of Plymouth and Clapham Shows.

Sir,—It will be noticed by all fanciers on perusal of your Show Dates Fixed column that Plymouth (W.C.O.S.) and Clapham shows will clash this year. We in Plymouth feel rather sore about this, as we have kept to the same date for the past twelve years, and by doing so have hoped to avoid coming on the same date as the important shows. I wrote Mr. Hose, the Clapham sec., early in the year, but have had no reply. I am quite aware that the entry at both shows may not suffer a lot, as we are over 200 miles apart, but one or the other of us will lose specialist club patronage we might otherwise have both had. Plymouth wants club patronage because it wishes to have the best birds of the different varieties on view at its show, but I am afraid, judging by the result of the S.N.P.C. voting last year, that Plymouth will stand very little chance in 1914 for S.N.P.C. patronage, if Clapham cannot see its way clear to alter its date. In some specialist clubs, voting for patronage, like kissing, goes by favour, without any reference to prize money or entry fees of the shows, who make application.

Thos. Pope,
Hon. Sec. N.C.O.S.

Birds Shelling their Seed.

Sir,—Could any reader give me a cure for birds shelling their seed and the cause of same. I think this would interest others, too. I have a bird which sits and shells his seed all day long. I have tried various remedies, but all prove of no use. I hope some reader will take this up.

Yellow-Green.

A Rung Greenfinch Caught.

Sir,—It may be interesting to know that I caught a Greenfineh this morning with the nets when just outside the town (Seaham Harbour). It is rung Witherby, High Holborn, London. I took the ring off the Greenfinch and find J., 201, on the inside of the ring. Robert Walker.

Methods of Bird-catching.

Sir,—I have a desire to eateh my own birds, but I do not know how to go about it. Would any of your readers be good enough to guide me as to how I should eatch birds such as Chaffinches, Greenfinches, and Hedge-Sparrows. H. Colquhoun.

[An article entitled "Some Simple Methods of Bird Catching" appears in Cage Birds' 1914 Annual (post free, 8d.).—Editor.]

The Need of the Novice.

Sir,—I should like to endorse the remarks of "Novice" in last week's Cage Birds. I think it could be done. I myself am a novice, and I know what it is to buy birds away. When they live about 14 days, then die, that breaks the heart of a novice. Will not secretaries of local societies take it up?

M. Rainford.

Hen Hybrids at Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A. Snow.

Sir,—I see by report of meeting of above society (Feb. 10) that the classification is fixed up for their annual show, and that a class has been provided for the dark hen Mules or Hybrids. That is certainly a step in the right direction, but what is to become of the light or variegated hens, of which there are so many? I think it would be beneficial to the above society if they could see their way to amend this class, making it any variety hen Mule or Hybrid. I hope the officials won't take offenee at this, but seriously consider it at their next meeting. Now Kelty, lead the way. Equality.

A Recipe for Making Egg-Bread.

Further Information Desired.

Sir,—I am sure we are all obliged to Mr. Chiswell for the recipe he gave last week, and I should think it would make a very useful egg-bread. But what he does not state—i.e., whether it will rear young birds from the shell as well as will fresh hard-boiled egg and bread, or biscuit—is just what we breeders want to know. No egg-bread is of much real good unless it will do this for, of course, it is as a rearing food that fanciers have the most call for it. Perhaps Mr. Chiswell will kindly give us the result of his experience (if any) with his egg-bread as a rearer of nestlings. O. George Edwin.

Sir,—I read with interest in your issue of Feb. 21 the letter containing recipe for egg-cake, by Mr. Thos. Chiswell, and should like to know if he uses and advocates this to rear young from hatching. May I suggest that it would be a source of interest generally if some of your readers would kindly give particulars of any cake they may have used in rearing from the egg, and state what measure of success has been attained. If good results can be obtained by the use of a loaf, it seems to me that a great saving of labour would be gained over the egg and biscuit.

Boscawen.

The Clashing of Show Dates in Scotland.

Sir,—I am sorry that we, the Buckhaven and District C.B.S., have offended Mr. T. Arnott and his committee in regard to date of show. I think in the first place he misrepresents the case altogether. Buckhaven Society, as every fancier in Fife knows, has been too lenient with dates; they have shifted for the better, and have been clashed with, although first in the field. I may state Dysart Society also settled on the 31st Oct., as it was their old date, but since they knew that Buckhaven had taken the 31st, they let well alone. This is undoubtedly Dysart's old date, and Mr. Arnott may thank his stars that Dysart did not fight the date. Mr. Arnott says Kirkcaldy is on the main line; but is Buckhaven not as good as that? You are taken from the main line to Buckhaven in a few minutes. We must remind all fanciers that all fast trains stop at Thornton, only four miles from Buckhaven. Mr. Arnott and committee may rest assured that we will stick to our date and run the risk of suffering, as Mr. Arnott imagines we shall. We thank him for his advice, and if he has any more will be pleaso address the same to 105, Randolph Street, Buckhaven.

Are We Dissatisfied with the Winning Norwich Plainheads of To-day?

Sir,—From time to time there crops up dissatisfaction with the Norwich Canary as judged to-day from the so-called standard. How many judges have a standard? Frequently, we find 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize birds far from being of the same type, and I am sure no standard presents itself to the novice or casual observer from seeing such variety. The fact is, some years ago, a great (?) fancier, so crossed his stock that he got his birds so much out of proportion to the then beautiful Norwich shown, that he must of necessity agitate and (with a healthy purse) change the standard at that time unwritten, but fixed in the minds of all Norwich lovers—to fit in with his own stock. We are ever prone to follow great (?) men, and the Norwich Canary has suffered ever since, and novices have come and gone, whereas in those days they used to come and stay.

When a little boy my dear old father said to me: (I think at ——, Sunderland Show): "Ted, this is Mr. Mackley (Mackley Bros.), Mr. Neave, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Dixon, Mr. Irons, etc., etc.," and he took a pride in introducing his boy to these old fanciers, many of whom are still alive. Let me ask them which kind they would rather have, the then Norwich-cobby, neat, clean cut, clean headed, with a short thick neck, well fitted on to the body, good chest, nicely in proportion, legs firmly set well back, with body well over the perch, etc.—or the Norwich of to-day—browed and long headed, with crest-bred quite clear, and coppy, running down the back of the neck, long feathered, many of them all feathers, long ringed, long and heavy tailed, chests like 4d. rabbits, legs scarcely able to carry them, etc.

If these old stalwarts would stiffen their backs and say: "We will go back to the real Norwich again," I am sure the Fancy would benefit, and crowds of disheartened novices would rally for another try, and stay. Please allow me to ask all fanciers, young and old, to get out their scales and measure off a Norwich Canary to the scale I have enclosed. Let them criticise it or approve of it, but let them give their opinion, whatever it is, for I feel that if we do not get to grip this dissatisfaction cropping up at almost every show is going to kill what is very near a national hobby. All good wishes to Cage Birds.

Edward Floyd.

Sir,—As an admirer of the Norwich Plainhead I welcome the letters on the question of "lashing" or "browing." I think the time has come when this matter ought to be faced, as, so far from being the exception, it seems to be quite the mode to wear the hair low over the eyes; in fact, "Everybody's doing it." One must admit that we have now reached quite a remarkable degree of perfection in type and quality in other respects, and given a firm stand by the judges I think in a few years this growing fault will be unheard of, as instance the craze for neck size of a few seasons back.

The Cinnamon Canary as it is—And as it Ought to be.

Sir,—I would like to make a few statements in reply to your notes on the Cinnamon Canary classes at the Palace. Having been a breeder and exhibitor of this variety for a great many years, the faults you mention are not, in my opinion, altogether the faults of the Cinnamon Club, or of the breeders and exhibitors. A fair amount of blame must go to the various show committees and the judges they select to judge the Cinnamon classes at some of our leading shows. Also you have only to trace the schedules sent out and you will find 70 per cent. of them without any classes allotted to Cinnamon Canaries, and if there be any you will find them placed in many cases under judges who have never had any experience as breeders or exhibitors of this particular variety, which is another great fault in connection with the exhibiting of the Cinnamon Canary. It makes one think that when the various committees are placing their judges, they consider that anybody will do for the Cinnamon classes, which is a great mistake and does not give justice to the Cinnamon Canary. Should there be no classes for them the exhibitor must look if there be any allotted to the Crested Norwich, if so he may have a sporting chance in the A.V. class. But should there be no Crest classes, then the exhibitor of Cinnamons might as well keep his birds at home, as he will have no earthly chance of winning if any Crests are in competition with him, for a great many of our judges have eyes for no other exhibits. Should there be any Crested Norwich in the class, irrespective of quality, the Crest must be first. Why, I fail to understand, as each variety should be judged on its merits, as it would appear in its own classes had any such been allotted. I consider the Cinnamon, to get the right type and colour, which is wanted on the show benches to-day, a bird as difficult to breed as the Crest. Therefore, I think they ought to have as fair a share of merit allotted to them as any of the other varieties of Canary. The same thing applies wth regard to specials. There seems to be a craze among our judges to try and select a Crest for the disposal of specials, another drawback in exhibiting the Cinnamon. I would like to remind some that we have the same labour, the same entrance fee, the same expenses for carriage, etc., attaching to the exhibiting and keeping of the Cinnamon Canary as those who breed any other variety.

I am sure if some of our show committees would only consider a little, they would find fanciers who have been breeders and exhibitors of the Cinnamon, who are also among the first class in other varieties, and who would, if selected, give a very good account of themselves as judges at our shows. The various committees will generally find that, when they come across a Cinnamon exhibitor at a show, a share of the other exhibits belongs to him, helping to make other classes pay through the show committee having allotted classes for their favourites. With a little more consideration at the hands of our show committees and more competent judges, the giving of a fair share of attention to the breed which it honestly merits, would be one step towards helping to make some of our shows a financial success. The above complaints are heard from a great number of Cinnamon breeders but a little more energy put into its work by the Cinnamon club would again bring the Cinnamon Canary to the front. I am sorry to say at the present time a great many breeders of this particular variety are not members of the Cinnamon club. They would considerably help the breed if they would only rally and join in, as they are helping to kill the Fancy by keeping aloof. I am a lover of the Cinnamon Canary, whose wish is to see the breed take its place on the show bench as one of the leading varieties.

Sir,—As a lover of the Cinnamon I should like to enter my protest against the tactics pursued by certain of the exhibitors of the variety. I hear (it was talked of at the Palace Show, too) that these exhibitors refuse to enter any birds except at shows which have the Cinnamon Canary Club's patronage. Now surely this is a great mistake, and one calculated to kill the breed rather than help it along. I intend that every show which is good enough to provide classes for the Cinnie ought to get full and free support from lovers of the breed, to encourage other shows to do likewise, and to keep the bird well before the public. The Cinnamon is not in such a flourishing position by miles as it ought to be, and refusal to support shows just because they have not the C.C.C. patronage is absurd from every point of view. If we have some good classes, and a display at more shows, that would be the way to bring more breeders into the ranks of the club.

New Society for Halifax.

Sir,—A new Cage Bird Society has been formed for Halifax and the Yorkshire Union at the Trafalgar Inn, King Cross, Halifax, to be called Halifax King Cross C.B.S. Several fanciers have already been enrolled members, and I have been appointed Sec., pro. tem. A prominent local gentleman has kindly offered to provide a trophy for competition. A meeting will be held March 5, at the Trafalgar Inn, when all interested are invited to attend at 8 p.m., or give in their names as early as possible to me.

Ramsden's Autumn Show at the Crystal Palace.

Sir,—Observing Mr. Ramsden invites suggestions, I beg to make the following, that he considers the advisability of catering for hen Mules or Hybrids, that is makes a class for any variety hen, Mule, or Hybrid. There has been some correspondence of late re the above class, and I trust Mr. Ramsden will give this his best consideration, as it would not only increase the value of hen Mules and Hybrids, but would also tend to increase the enthusiasm of breeders in this very interesting and fascinating hobby.

Cup Running at Shows in Ireland.

Sir, I noticed in your issue of February 7 a letter from "Hard Hit" re above. As another novice who competed at the various shows, I would be glad to know in what way your correspondent suffered, as the letter, to say the least of it, is somewhat vague. What about the "junior cup" already in existence? If he has been really hard hit, I feel sure he has only to state definitely how to obtain the support of the other novices in Ireland should he take any steps to have abuses that he thinks exist rectified. I would advise "Hard Hit" to speak out, and give some facts to support his nom-de-guerre.

CUP RUNNER.

Sir,—"A Contented Novice" states there is no justification for statements made by "Hard Hit" that novices are neglected. I say there is. The so-called lectures and discussions never came off, so I am sure he was a good attendant! It has been a pleasure to some of the champions to render assistance to the novice. I did not, nor do I, state that the long pocket fancier enjoys the good advice of champions; but it is evident that he enjoys a monopoly of their stock. What I would wish the Council to do is to define the novice in a way that L. P. will have to breed and stage his own for the show bench. The inducement of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland was good. They depend on other societies to make the show a success, and I say that the patronage should not be given where they don't get entries. A. C. N. evidently does not know the length and breadth of Ireland; take the show held in the North to the one in Cork; it is nothing like three hundred miles. It would mean a little trouble, which would be well repaid. I am and shall be hard hit, until the novice is properly looked after. A. C. N.'s information re spoon-feeding might have been used with advantage to his own stock last season; although a contented novice and a long-pocket fancier, he failed at cup running. It is very little he knows regarding the trouble and expenses of this game. Is the best possible inducement given to novices and champions? No lectures, no discussions, and want of energy on the Council's part. The novices under the present state are neglected, and will be until they get on the Council and use their right to make a rule that none but breeders are on the same.

HARD HIT.

A Hawfinch in a Class for Softbills.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Carlisle, I ask why he makes reference to Garston B.B.A. members' show, when writing about the Amalgamated show, as one is managed by its own committee, the other by two delegates from each society. On the schedule, which I have enclosed, it states that all protests must be laid before 5 o'clock on day of show, and be accompanied with 5s. Mr. Carlisle did not protest in writing, and, to be accurate, it was after 5 o'clock when he spoke to me about it. I never mentioned the judge, and I think it is an error on his part when he refers to favours. Everyone cannot win a first prize. Why did he not, before sending to the Press, come to our general meeting if he had any complaints to make against the secretary, where it could have been answered before all the members?

A. T. MULLOCK, sec.

Sir,—The Hawfinch won 3rd prize because the two classes (hardbill and softbill) were amalgamated. This show fell on Christmas time, and some of the classes were amalgamated to make competition, instead of having to send birds back again. This applied to the Yorkshire Cinnamon (yellow and buff) and all the Norwich were put into one class. When Mr. Carlisle complained he was told that the classes had been amalgamated. If he will look up he will find, too, that they could not enter his Larks at Garston show without putting them into Finch classes. When he made his protest it was nearly closing time of the show, and as he came to me, I told him the bird was mine, and I would have nothing to do in the matter—he had better see what some of the other delegates said. Mr. Carlisle was told why the bird was in the class. The judge only did what he was told to do, the same as in the other amalgamated classes. I have written the sec. of Garston Club, saying I will come to their next meeting if he will write Mr. Carlisle, and perhaps this matter will be cleared up.

Recollections of some Birds I have kept.

A Grand List of Talented Singers.

Sir,—I am rather surprised to see, from Mr. G. Margaritis' notes of last week, that he has not been able to keep a Pekin Robin for any length of time. I have kept some for over six years, and never found them very troublesome to cater for. On the contrary, they are easily kept in good health on an insectile diet, but, in addition, they require fruit daily; such as a little baked apple, or sleepy pear, or chopped currants, or ripe banana, and, further, they greatly relish a little sponge cake mixed with grated raw carrot, or moistened with milk; and as they are partly seed-eaters, some Pekins appreciate a little millet seed now and again. I feel sure, if Mr. Margaritis keeps his Pekins on such a diet and gives them a roomy cage (as they are fond of exercise) his birds will live as long as mine have. Of course, like all softbills, they are very fond of mealworms—mine get three or four a day, sometimes six, when in full song. I cannot imagine a more beautiful and sprightly bird, and would never be without one, as they sing nearly all the year round. Another small softbill, that I do not think is sufficiently appreciated as a cage-bird, is the Blackcap. He will thrive on the same diet as the Pekin Robin, and will gladden you with his joyous notes for nearly seven months out of the twelve. The song of these two birds blend harmoniously, and it is delightful to hear how they will outvie each other. Neither of these birds need be kept in a high temperature during the winter months. The warmth of a living-room will do for them. At the present moment I am enjoying quite a concert of softbills, and have now in full song the following:—Blackcap (caged eight years), Blue-throated Warbler (two years), Garden Warbler (one year), two Pekin Robins, Redstart (three years), Rock Thrush, Shama (six years), Sprosser (three years), Whitethroat (five years).

The Importance of Cleanliness.

Sir,—Some bird-keepers do not seem to realise the importance of clean cages and water glasses, but a bird with a clean cage and fresh water is sure to be a healthy, well-set-up looking bird, and that is the kind that is wanted for breeding and selling. A little attention in this direction is worth the short time it takes. Cages should be washed out twice yearly in disinfectant, and aired outside. Fresh water should be given every day, but if this is not always possible, you can do a lot by thoroughly cleaning the glasses when you do attend to them. The open kind are easily treated, but the conical "fountains" present difficulties. The best way is to half-empty them, and, having put some gritty sand inside, put your thumb over the mouth, shake up vigorously. This makes them clean and bright. A bath improves a bird's plumage, and is beneficial to its health generally. MARY H. SCOTT.

A Wail from Aintree.

Sir,—It is quite evident from the tone of Mr. Skilling's letter that he is suffering from hallucinations. He has missed his "mark" this time. I advise him to practise a little more in "mud slinging." With reference to the lack of interest shown by our members, I did not intend to specially infer that the "birdy men" were to blame. Mr. Skilling is a bit too hasty in jumping to conclusions, but if the cap fits him he is quite welcome to wear it. Mr. Skilling asks the question if several bird fanciers forfeited their prize-money to assist the society over the difficulties, and to this query I answer yes, with the exception of your correspondent, Mr. Skilling. Mr. Skilling holds the society's points challenge cup, which he won in 1912, and as the committee decided to wind up the affairs of the society, I was requested to write this gentleman asking him to kindly return the said cup, so that it might be put up for sale with other of the society's properties, to endeavour to wipe off any liabilities incurred during the year 1913. Although I have written him twice, so far he has not had the manners to acknowledge my letters, or fall in with the committee's request. The cup was originally purchased for the society from subscriptions kindly given by several members, including Mr. Skilling, who at our last general meeting had the effrontery to ask the society to return him the amount he subscribed towards the purchase of this cup. I leave your readers to judge whether Mr. Skilling has the welfare of the society at heart. The person entitled to hold the cup for most points scored during 1913, is Mr. E. Wilkins, who is debarred from holding it under the circumstances already stated. What steps the committee intend to take to regain possession of this cup from Mr. Skilling I am unable to say at present, but I am afraid the outlook is anything but pleasant for your impetuous correspondent. Throughout the year 1913 I have been placed under extreme difficulties in my efforts to make the society a success, and have had to carry on the work on a starvation balance, several very indifferent members failing to pay their annual subscriptions, others failing to send entry fees for our members' shows, and expecting the secretary to pay out prize-money, and even asking for their fees to be deducted from their prize-money. Can you wonder why the society's usefulness has been so early terminated—solely by the indifference of a section (not all) of the members, not necessarily fur or poultry members, but by "birdy men" in equal proportion. I am as much a bird fancier as I am a fur fancier, and will always endeavour to keep to my hobby, but not expect my hobby to keep me, as many present-day fanciers do.

London Federation of Cage Bird Societies.

Sir,—In reply to a letter by Mr. Jefferys in your issue of February 7 (which was read to the Council of the Federation on Friday evening, 13th), I can only say that, while we recognise that a National Federation is desirable, and will undoubtedly come into being when the need for it is really felt by individual societies, we are bound by our rules, until the next annual meeting in January, 1915, to the area of the "Metropolitan Police Radius," and we shall find quite enough work for this year in organising the societies in the area. I would point out, however, that the Federation will consider the necessity of altering its rules, or enlarging its scope, if sufficient body of opinion is expressed to justify the step; but in any case the rules we are now under will be very strictly adhered to in every particular until the time provided for possible changes comes round, viz., 1915.

Communications of opinions will be welcomed if sent either to our secretary, or myself (during the illness of our chairman), and they will be placed before the council. Also the Federation would be willing to carefully consider, and recommend (if approved) improvements or innovations in foods and appliances, or in other respects appertaining to the Fancy, in which case it would be desirable that samples, etc., should be in our hands at the time our opinion is asked. Permit me to emphasise that the Federation is out to be of real use to affiliated societies, and their members, and it is our desire that they will communicate with us whenever they feel that advice or assistance can be usefully tendered.

Timely Tips for Tyros.

By JAS. LYON (Aberdeen).

IT is not advisable early in the season to force the birds on too much, especially the hens, which, as a rule seem to come into breeding condition sooner than the cocks. Dandelion leaves, when procurable, are excellent for both cocks and hens, provided that they are free from frost. A little egg food given every second or third day is also of value as a conditioner.

If you find that your hens are coming on too fast, a pinch of Epsom salts should be given in the drinking-water, and the extras should be withheld for a few weeks. One great cause of unfertile eggs is the fact that hens are usually more forward than cocks.

It is a good plan just before mating up (which should not be until the middle or end of March) to put the cock and hen each in a compartment of a double-breeding cage, with a wire slide between them. This saves the stamina of the birds, which is often seriously impaired by the quarrels inevitable if the birds be placed together without previous acquaintance.

If both birds are in good condition the cock should soon be seen feeding the hen through the wires. When this takes place, you may safely place both birds together, and provide the hen with a nest-pan. The nest-pan should be lined with felt, and placed between the perches, with the top rim about an inch higher than the perches.

The hen may be given nesting material, when she will probably at once build a nest. If nesting material is not given her, she may take to pulling feathers from her mate, and once having learnt this habit, she may remember it when she has young ones.

If a hen, at this stage, is seen sitting with her feathers puffed out, and looking listless, you may expect her to lay next morning. If in the morning she should not have laid, and it is seen by her appearance and actions that she is probably egg-bound, catch her and hold her gently, taking care not to damage the egg, the shape of which in the abdomen may plainly be seen. If broken, it may mean certain death to the hen.

Hold her in the palm of the hand, with thumb over neck, second finger over breast, and third and fourth fingers over tail. Warm a little olive oil; take a small, soft camel-hair brush, such as is used by artists: dip it in the oil, and gently "lubricate" the vent by turning the brush gently round.

Then place her over a jug of hot water, covered by a piece of thin muslin placed over the top, and allow the abdomen to be well steamed. She will perhaps drop the egg on the muslin, but if not, place her in the nest, where she will probably soon lay and be as lively as ever. If she does not soon lay after the treatment, it must be repeated.

Take away the eggs as soon as laid, and place them in bran. On the evening of the day she lays her third egg, place three eggs in the nest, and let her sit. The fourth egg will be laid next day.

Before setting, or pairing up, a hen, it is better to examine the claws, and if long, reduce them to a normal length.

When the hen has sat about a week, it is possible to tell whether the eggs are fertile. If fertile they will be black (almost entirely opaque) when held up to the light. If transparent, the eggs are unfertile.

The eggs will be due to hatch on the thirteenth day after the hen has been set. Place some egg food in the dish the night before (for the hen should not be given egg food when sitting) so that she may feed her young when they hatch.

Show held Foresters' Hall, Feb. 7. Entries were lost on 199, being rather less than usual, but not lacking in quality. Grand birds were staged in the trimpt section. Novice classes were not so well patronised. The P.O.S. medal was won by Jos. Pyke, who had staged some grand birds in the green section. Messrs. Issott, Cleminson, Cottam, and Marsh were chief scorers in the champion section, and J. Knowles won medal for most points in novice section, Mr. Catterall being the runner-up. Mr. Tom Seed, of Rishton, was judge, and gave very satisfaction.

Successful show held Feb. 18, at All Saints' Schoolroom, North-street; 194 birds were staged. Quality all through was good, especially in Norwich novice. Yorks. champion classes were a failure, only one class standing, but British were a grand lot, some of the old winners having to stand down to birds making their first appearance on the bench. Pres. Mr. A. Richardson has promised a silver teapot for best bird bred by a member during 1914. Mr. Marshell, chairman, has given a good special for most points gained by a member joining since December, 1913. In addition to which we have three E.P. cups for three highest birds in each section and several other specials. The attendance during the evening was very good. Mr. W. C. Annual table show and judging competition held Kinnaird's Hall, Kirkgate, Feb. 14. Entries were a shade down, but quality was of a high order. The Scotch Fancy class was cancelled, which is a pity, as bringing them to such shows might induce fanciers to invest in a pair of that variety. Mr. J. F. Dewar judged. While he was judging, monthly meeting was held in the side room. Agreed to hold annual show 2nd Saturday of Nov., same hall as last year. Also agreed to insure staging and screens to the amount of £20 against loss by fire. Sec. Intimated a donation of £1 1s. from Provost Smith. Mr. Dewar was awarded a hearty vote of thanks for his services. Afterwards the members took their turn at judging, and Mr. Wm. Walls was declared the winner with a total of 68 points, entitling him to hold the Dewar Challenge Cup for a year; 2, Mr. Mainland, 64; 3, D. Moffat, 59. LEICESTER.

The Leicester Hand-in-Hand and the Leicester C.B.S. held a combined show of Canaries, hybrids, and British and foreign birds at the Vaughan College, Feb. 14, in aid of the Children's Hospital. There was an entry of nearly 300, and many well-known winning birds were staged. Norwich and British were of great interest to the many fanciers who visited the exhibiton. Mr. E. Nonkes judged Canaries, and Mr. W. Judd the remainder.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Feb. 12, "Duke of York," when F. J. Weaver presided over a good attendance. First item on the agenda was the settling of dates and judge for open show. It will be held Jan. 21 and 22, Mr. J. Robson judge. Officers elected for the year: Mrs. H. Stanley Hill, pres.; F. J. Weaver chair; R. Willoughby, vice-chair; E. Canfield, treas.; W. Harrison, sec.; and J. Gibbons, Press corresp. Mr. F. J. Weaver, the chairman, next presented the members' cup to winner, J. Gibbons, and said how sorry he was to hear of secretary's retirement, but was pleased to note that Mr. Harrison was willing to fill the gap. J. Gibbons, on receiving cup, responded, and said he regretted to have to give up secretarial duties, but business pressure compelled him to do so. Two new members were elected: Dr. Morris (Wednesbury), and P. C. Hepworth (Albrighton). This brought a good meeting to a close. J. Gibbons, Press Corresp.

SKIPTON C.B.S.

Last show of season held Feb. 21, Friendly Society's Hall. Over 60 were staged, and some excellent quality was to be seen. Mr. J. Miller won cup most points champion, and Mr. R. Hudson cup most points amateur, the silver cup for best young bird bred by a member having been previously won by Mr. J. Hodgson. Mr. W. Moorby exhibited best Yorks., a grand buff cock; Mr. R. Hudson, best Norwich, a fine buff hen, also best foreign; Mr. E. Smith, Bradford, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Annual pair show held People's Hall, Tanner's Hill, Deptford, Feb. 5, and proved very successful, 97 pairs being staged. Borders as usual were the feature of the show, the two novice classes bringing out 26 pairs. Novice Norwich also did well with 21 pairs, and in these and the champion classes some very fine birds were on view. Special for best in show went to the Rev. Soames, with a nice pair of Borders. Owing to the illness of Mr. Meades, the awards were made by Mr. G. Hill, who gave every satisfaction.

PUDSEY & STANNINGLEY C.B.S.

Annual presentation of prizes at the "Fleece Hotel," Stanningley, Feb. 14. There was a good company of members and friends present, and a good evening was spent. Mr. A. Noble (pres.) was unable to be present, being ill in bed. Chair was taken by vice-pres., J. Towler. The secretary read the report of the past show season. The entries have not been as good as in 1912. 265 birds have been shown by 16 members, an average of 16 per member, and 50 per show for each of five shows. Norwich section has been poorly supported, only two birds being shown during the whole season. W. Richmond wins 1st prize for the fourth year in succession, with 101 points. W. Ackroyd, 2nd 90 points; and H. Raistrick 3rd, with 72 points. First prize novice, Master H. Noble, 27 points; C. Noble, 2nd, 21 points; B. Wood, 3rd, 18 points. Prizes were presented by Mr. J. Chambers (Leeds). A vote of thanks to Mr. Chambers was proposed by Mr. J. Butler. Messrs. Noble, Casson, Tetley, Ingham, Etherington and Hargreaves kept the company alive with songs, etc. Mr. Emsley Sharpe accompanied.—H. Raistrick, Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Annual pair show, held in Queen's Hall, Wimbledon, Feb. 16. Entries were exceptionally good, over eighty pairs being staged. Yorks. and Bord. were most in evidence, Nor. being only poorly represented in numbers, but making up for the deficiency in merit. Yorks. were divided into two classes, the winner in the yell. cock class being staged by Mr. J. Heath. It was a grand bird, and had a big, romping buff hen for partner. Messrs. Owen and Son were close up, with another good pair. In the buff cock class Mr. H. Smith, the popular secretary, held the trump card. The hen in this pair was very much admired. She had a grand lengthy partner with her. Another bird that took the fancy was Mr. Bailey's yell. hen in the nov. class. She was considered by many to be as good as any in the hall. The champion Bords. numbered eighteen pairs, Mrs. Thyune staging the winners. The class was particularly remarkable for the various types of birds put down, which is very confusing to young fanciers. No doubt the Southern B.F.C. will soon decide upon a model, then breeders will know what to breed for and exhibit. A few good Hybrid pairs and British made up an interesting collection. The special for best pair went to Mrs. Thynne's Crests and C.B. Mr. Robson judged. The show was well attended by visitors.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T PAGE F.Z.S

GREEN PARROT (C.W.C.). It is not easy to assume the exact nature of the sweating, but if they are hard, painting daily with tincture of iodine, so long as the skin remains unbroken, should give relief. It will be well at the same time to keep the bowels moving quite freely by occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia or one teaspoonful in the drinking water as often as may be required—at the same time the excreta must not be allowed to remain watery loose. When not giving the magnesia, put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. You state nothing as to how you are dieting the bird. In addition to seed mixture it can have ripe fruit, nuts, plain cake, biscuit, stale crusts, dry potato, and green food (lettuce, seeding grass and cereals as in season), grit and cuttlebone must also be regularly supplied, as also should be pieces of wood for the bird to cut up. When using the iodine be careful that it neither runs into the ears or eyes, at least it should not be used freely enough to run at all. Report progress in a month.

MORE HANDSOME THAN FESTIVE (A.J.). You must pardon me, but I did not go the full length of your statement. I wrote: "Words fail me to eulogise suitably this gorgeous species, although it is rivalled in beauty by over forty species of the same genus." When one names such as Black-throated, Superb, Tri-coloured, Back-backed, Black-cheeked, Sported Emerald, Turquoise Blue, Yellow, Dr. Marent's, etc., all belonging to the genus Calliste, and all equalling, if they do not surpass (matter of individual taste, this) the Festive, even such extravagance of expression as that quoted is fully warranted, for it is no exaggeration. I take it you want a beautifully-plumaged and interesting cage pet; if such is your need, without hesitation. I say a Gold-fronted Green Fruitsucker. It is a bird of gorgeously beautiful plumage, tame and confiding demeanour, for it soon becomes finger tame, can be allowed a considerable amount of liberty, and possesses a good power of imitating the songs and calls of other birds. It's a case of taking them when you can get them; watch our adverts., or claim one at some show, or get one from the Southport Zoo. If I have not fully met your need, please repeat query.

WHAT PARROT (E. W. Moss). It is, so far as one is able to judge of a young bird, a Red-fronted Amazon, which is a very uncommon species. The bird may, however, develop a changed plumage when it matures, and if you send me details after the next month, I will either confirm or correct. All Amazons require similar treatment, and the following seed mixture should form the staple dietary: One quart each canary, white millet and oats; one pint each hemp, sunflower and paddy rice, and half-a-pint of shelled pea nuts, the whole to be well mixed together. Also ripe fruit daily, pieces of biscuit, plain cake, stale crusts, and a little green food—a walnut or Brazil nut also forms an agreeable change. Grit, cuttlebone, water, and pieces of wood must be regularly supplied. As yours is a young bird, I should boil a tablespoonful of maize daily; this only keeps fresh one day, prepare as follows: Boil till soft, but each grain should remain whole, drain away all water, dust with flowers of sulphur and supply to the bird when cool. A half-teaspoontful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking-water will also be beneficial, every other day while the bird is growing. The bowels should be kept moving freely, not watery loose, by an occasional laxative; one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water is as good as anything, but making the water just saline with Epsom salts will meet the case. When tame and quite at home with you, a daily fly round the room will be to its benefit.

WHAT IS IT? (Constant Reader).—It is a Ring-necked Parrakeet, a species among which occur many talkers, but they usually require a lot of teaching. So soon as the bird is properly tame, and it is not scared at all when you are round about its cage, fuss about with it, at the same time offering it some dainty, talking to it the while, and repeat distinctly some word or short sentence as a beginning, and when it has picked upon it, then start upon another; some individuals are months before they respond, but, once their interest is fully aroused, they pick up many things for themselves. The range of the dietary covers: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, biscuit, plain cake, stale crusts, and greenfood; grit, cuttlebone, water, and wood for it to exercise its beak upon should be treated as part of the daily menu.

BUDGERIGARS (Bird Lover).—I should say your bird has had a chill and had some difficulty in getting rid of her egg; if she is no better when you get this reply you had better give her two drops of castor oil direct to the beak, and subject her to a dry heat for a couple of days, then keep her in a fairly warm room till March is past, when they should all go to nest and duly bring up young. Note, the above special treatment is only required for the ailing bird. You should have told me just how and where you were keeping them, and the extent of their accommodation, as it is impossible to give a really helpful reply without such data. Keep a millet spray hanging in her cage; this will find her exercise in picking out the seeds, and do not omit to supply grit, cuttlebone green food, and water regularly. If you have not our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," get it, it will help you, 2½d. post free from our Manager.

IS IT AN AVADAVAT? (Beginner, Wealdstone).—You are evidently unacquainted with the cocks of both Avadavats and Golden-breasted Waxbills; in such case the size should help you, as the former is half as large again as the latter. However, from your description, I should say there is little doubt but that it is a hen Avadavat, but the above test should enable you to verify it; though both are small birds, the difference in size of the two species is most marked, and the Golden-breast is a much greener-brown above than the Avadavat, in which the green tinge is very slight.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Sudden.—Bird died as the result of haemorrhage from the lungs, induced probably by fright.

76 FIRSTS, 56 SECONDS

Fifty-five thirds, and over seventy specials and diplomas, at all the leading shows this season with Yorkshires only, not all varieties. I have also won the Yorkshire Canary Club Challenge Cup, the Green Marked Trophy, and gold medal, second in Yorkshire Union Competition, and other honours too numerous to mention this season. This is not a one-season's wonder, as I have won far more firsts every season for years than any other exhibitor, and have sold birds to my customers that have won continually at all the leading shows. The numerous repeat orders I receive are ample testimony of the birds I send out. Read following, received Feb. 29/14, from 21, Albert Bridge-rd., Belfast: Birds received in grand condition. I have had several pairs from your city, but none please me so well as these. Kindly send another pair for enclosed amount, and shall send all future orders to you.—J. L. Gibson to L. Dykes. Another, from Birkwood-st., Dalmarnock, Feb. 20. Please send another pair of Yorkshires. The pair I had some weeks ago give every satisfaction.—A. Hamilton. Another, from 1, Burrow-rd., Preston, Feb. 21. I received birds quite safe, and am pleased to say that they are quite up to expectations.—J. C. Higinbotham. These are only a few samples of what I receive from almost every customer. I have still a fine collection of high-class Yorkshires, bred from and related to my noted winners, that for type, style, length, and quality cannot be equalled. Champion Yorkshire cocks, on full song, yellows or buffs, at 6/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each, upwards. Fine feathered racy hens, just the stamp to breed winners, yellow or buff, at 4/-, 5/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Pairs, properly mated to breed winners, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. Clears, ticked, or marked, and all cold room bred and kept. Travelling cage, 3d. extra. Inspection invited at any time. Or birds sent seven days' approval, at my risk; cash or deposit with Editor. Kindly state wants; easy payments to any reliable fancier: L. Dykes, Reliable Aviaries, Shann-st., Bolton Woods, Bradford.

OGDEN BROS.

There is no doubt we have them, again bang at the top, winning the Yorkshire Union Competition, also winning outright the Yorks. challenge trophy, 1913, also winniug "Cage Birds" competition at Union shows; see Palace reports, 2 1sts, 2 2nds, and champ. diploma for best C.M. Yorkshire in show, also winning the Crystal Palace silver cup for best Yorkshire, and other trophies too numerous to mention; our winnings during the past ten years have never been accomplished by any other exhibitor. Note.—The above competitions have been won with birds of our own breeding, so write direct to the most reliable strain in the world for producing winners; for proof read the following, just one out of thousands filed for inspection.—"216, Duke-st., Barrow. Dear Friends.—You will be pleased to hear I have won cup for best bird in show. I got 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in yellows, 1st in marks, 2nd in buffs. These are all bred direct from your strain.—S. Woodward." We guarantee same strain as our winners, at 10/6, 15/6, 21/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. Odd cocks or hens proportionately; inspection invited, or birds sent seven days' approval at our risk. Some of our noted winners for sale at half their value: Dudley-hill, Bradford.

Now is Your Chance!

Owing to Health, I have decided to sell out all my birds. Will also sell my Palace winners to best offer. I have also about 40 Pairs for sale. Appliances and everything for sale.—W. BINNS, 9, Albert-terr., Blackpool, N. (1327)

Small Cost Great Value

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

A birdkeeper cannot afford to be without this birdy manual. It contains information of the greatest use and interest for everyone who keeps birds.

Note the following Summary of Contents—

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden. A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS. By W. H. Gibb. The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRD-CATCHING. By J. W. Steel. A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make bird-lime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

MISTAKES BIRD-KEEPERS MUST AVOID. By Claude St. John. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby.

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP AND BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS. By F. Meakin. This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES. By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

Lovely Coloured Plate of Yellow and Green Borders.

Many Art Plates and other Illustrations. Much general information of a highly useful nature.

ALWAYS USE OUR
DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5. A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE. When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7. FRESH TRANSACTION. In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9. PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.
It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

There is Money for the Advertiser in "CAGE BIRDS."

The extraordinary demand made upon our advertisers continues. Thousands of people carefully read the advertisements in "Cage Birds" every week, and it is not surprising, therefore, that our advertisers are able to transact immediate and satisfactory Sales (or Exchanges) through these advertisements.

The following letters are convincing proof of this:—

MARCH 1, 1914.—Please thank all those who answered my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS for cages. I have had so many replies that I could not answer them all.—E. T. Haines, 30, South Road, Bournemouth.

MARCH 2, 1914.—I have sold 64 Norwich Canaries through my small advertisement in CAGE BIRDS.—H. Gater, 6, Jones Square, Troedyrhiw, Glam.

MARCH 1 1914.—Thanks to the advertisement in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I soon sold the birds advertised. Kindly insert enclosed advertisement.—Rawsthorn, 20, Beech Grove, Seaforth.

MARCH 2, 1914. I had very good results from my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. Letters came from Scotland, and Wales.—D. Belty, Lydstep House, Goodwick, Pem.

Do not fail to take advantage of the exceptional qualities of "Cage Birds" as a quick and sure market.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

HULL'S LEADING SPECIALIST AND JUDGE

Write me for Hawfinches, Grosbeaks, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Waxwings, etc. I sent 14 cock Hawfinches away last Friday; still a few left, good, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6 each; hens 5/6. I have a real good hen, can win anywhere, 7/6. Mr. Buckley, 147, Darnall Road, Sheffield, searched the town here last Saturday for Waxwings, and could not find any half the size of mine. I thank him and his friends for their patronage, also the Newcastle gentleman who took 3 Hawfinches and 1 Waxwing, and Mr. Medley, 2 Hawfinches. Please state wants; correspondence a pleasure. Look, African Grey Parrots, 32/6, 40/- each: Fred Allen, Direct Importer, Porter-st. Aviaries, Hull. (1412)

GENUINE SIBERIANS

Bullies, Goldies Siskins, Waxwings

I bring these birds to England myself, therefore by dealing with me you save a middleman's profit, and get much better value for your money. I only buy the very best birds to be obtained. Satisfaction guaranteed. For prices, etc., see previous issues: R. Dalby, 43, Jalland-st., Hull. (1395)

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING COME AND SEE THE MAN OF THE WORLD

the most popular man in the trade; everybody welcome to come and hear the finest strain of quality singing in the world. My book of secrets tells you how to make Linnets sing at one another with their wings down; how to train them for contest singing; how to moult them; how to make Larks, Thrushes and Blackbirds sing with full loud voice on fine days, also Nightingales, and how to save Goldfinches from dying and make them sing, and the rules under which the champion Linnet of the world won all his contests. I have just got another 4,000 books printed. Muling pairs, birds I have put together are true pairs; beautiful Siberian cock Goldfinch, with a large Russian hen Bullfinch, 10/-; Siberian cock Goldfinch, with a beautiful yellow hen Canary, 8/6 and 10/6; beautiful cock Siskin, with hen Canary, 7/6; large yellow cock Greenfinch and large German hen Bullie, 5/-; large muling Linnets and hen Canary, 5/-; beautiful cock Chaffinch, and hen Bramblefinch, 3/6; large Mealy Redpoll and English hen Bullie, 4/-; yellow cock Greenfinch, with hen Canary, 5/-; the above are properly paired, and in the pink of condition. Large muling Goldfinches, singing hard, 4/- each. I hold the world's record for mulers; extra large muling Linnets, 2/6, 3/6, and 5/-; I have the finest stock of singing Larks in the world. Larks, singing, daylight and gaslight, with full loud voice, as steady as rocks, and perfect in feather, a treat to hear them sing, 1/6 and 2/-; a few handreared ones, will sing indoors or out, singing with full loud voice, daylight and gaslight, right for contest singing, 3/6 and 4/6; one a real champion, cannot be beaten, 6/-, with cage 7/6, he is a topper. Thrushes and Blackbirds, singing hard, 3/- and 3/6; hand-reared ones, 5/- each, can be heard singing 100 yards away. Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, with new cage and my book of secrets, 3/6 and 4/6. I challenge the world with this class of bird. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, singing a treat, can run as long as German Canaries, they will sing anywhere, only 2/6 each; guaranteed to mule pure Seifert Roller hen Canaries, 3/6 and 5/-; German hen Canaries, 2/6; German hen Bullfinches, 3/-; Russian hen Bullfinches, 4/- and 5/-; English Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/-, all grand birds, all sent out in wicker cages; Linnet Mules and Goldfinch Mules, will sing anywhere, 10/-. Everybody welcome to come and see and hear what they are buying; best meeting place for trippers is Harry Allen's Bird Stall, Bird Market. I have more Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Linnets, and Larks than any man in the trade; 2,400 birds in stock; no waiting; postcard before birds. Thanking you all for your kind patronge. Send to Harry Allen, The British Bird Champion, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (1411)

A Marvellous

collection, which must be seen to be appreciated, and I mean both in quantity and quality; besides, you can save

15% to 50%

By Purchasing Your Norwich Direct from Me.

Compare the quality with anything you can get elsewhere, at much higher prices. It is not what bought-up birds at absurdly high prices have done that matters to you, even if led to believe that they are not so procured. What you want to know is where you can get the greatest value for money. I sell the Winners, and can easily save you money, and at the same time give you birds that others would reserve.

Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6. Hens, 3/-, 3/6. Pairs, 8/6, 10/6. High-class Cocks, fed, 10/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/-. Hens 5/-, 7/6, 10/6. 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- to £5 per pair. Many of these include some giants, very strong in head properties. If you don't see what is required, write to me. Detailed list free.

MAKE A COMPARISON. Cages 3d.

FOUR grand stock pairs of my champion Norwich, own breeding, and related to my big winners, 40/- per pair, worth double; also (1) wing and head marked unflighted yellow cock, immense size, grand head, a grand bird, 40/-; (2) unflighted variegated yellow cock, rare shape, short flights and tail, bird with a future, 25/-; (3) unflighted clear buff cock, big winner, this one 30/-, not requiring him for stock; (4) ticked head buff cock, 1912 bred, a big one and no mistake, champion stock bird, 25/-; (5) clear buff cock, 1912 bred, fine stock bird, 15/-; (6) marked buff hen, perfect head, good size, 15/-; (7) variegated yellow hen, fine shapely stock hen, 15/-; the best blood living, you know that; approval: Judge Silk, Whitstable. (1413)

MR. A. L. HAWKES offers at great sacrifice the following Buff cocks; these are of exceptional merit, and such specimens rarely, if ever, offered in these columns. Not having the hens is cause of selling; massive framed slightly grizzle, marked one flight only, otherwise clear, unflighted rich fed Buff cock, giant of a Norwich, with deep chest, massive head, short neck, thick-set, chubbiest specimens one ever wished to see; accept 40/-; worth £5; full of quality, winner. Also another typical, rich deep colour-fed Yellow unflighted Norwich cock, winner, real gem, accept 20/-; also unflighted very rich colour-fed Buff cock, with grand substance and of Bullfinch type, winner of four honours, 15/-; another exceptionally good all-round Buff cock, very chubby and thick-set, 2nd Stratford, Newtown, 12/6; also another rich fed Buff cock, nine months, plenty of size, large broad head, short neck flights, tail, and deep-chested specimen, full of quality, 10/6; great sacrifice; approval; such specimens seldom offered: 26, Pretoria-rd., Leytonstone. (1413)

400 Champion Rollers in Stock.

I have just received a magnificent collection of pure Seifert Rollers, consisting of 400 cocks, and a large number of hens. These birds have not been picked over. They have come direct from the rooms of some of the best breeders in Germany, and include some exceedingly good birds. They are in full rolling song, with a good variety of tours, and are sure to give complete satisfaction anywhere. Kindly note the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Hens, same pure strain, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each. Genuine schoolmasters, specially trained for contest singing, 20/-, 25/- 30/-, 35/-, 40/- each upwards. Travelling cages 3d. extra in all cases.

I am also offering a limited number of hens bred from some of the best strains in England, at 7/6 and 10/- each. These are worth treble to any breeder. All B.R.C.C. rung. I invite fanciers requiring Rollers to come and hear these birds, and make their own selection. To those who cannot come I offer to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on 10 days' approval, and undertake to return cash in full, if not absolutely satisfactory. Is it possible to make a fairer offer?

YOU CANNOT SAY

you have heard the best breed of Rollers going, unless you have heard a Leipzig Roller. Of course most people own one, but there are still a few that have never heard one. I want those people to allow me to send them one on trial for a week, so that they may hear it in their own home. I do not mind if they have no intention of purchasing, all I ask is that they will deposit price of bird with Editor of "Cage Birds," until bird is returned. Has it never struck you that unless the Leipzig Rollers were all that I claim for them, that it would be sheer folly for me to make such an offer as above? I have just received my last consignment for the season of these Webers Leipzig Rollers, all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark or any other objectionable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, and are very soft and mellow in tone, 10/6 and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed exactly same strain, 3/- each, two 5/6; few lond free singing Hartz cocks, in full, vigorous song, 6/- each; Hartz hens, 2/3 each, 4/- couple; travelling cages, 3d. extra in all cases; singing box cages, 1/6 each; special Roller cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 3/- each. It will be noticed that I give you full particulars of the notes, which make up the song of the Leipzig Roller. I guarantee this description to be absolutely correct, and send all on full week's trial, either on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor, and take all risk during whole time. If any person likes to have one on week's trial, and if it is not as I guarantee, or if it does not realise every expectation, it only has to be returned, and the whole of money is promptly return. The following letters (although not a twentieth part of those recently received) plainly prove that the Leipzig Rollers are far in front of ordinary Rollers for singing ability. "20, Acton-rd., Rock Ferry, Birkenhead. Feb. 23. Sir,—Received Roller safely. He is a splendid singer, sang all day following arrival.—Yours, J. Povall." "41, Brooklyn-st., Crewe. Feb. 21st. Sir,—Roller arrived safe, and am well satisfied. He is singing grand.—Yours, P. Jones." "Chemistry Cottages, Wortley, near Sheffield. Feb. 23.—Sir,—Birds arrived safe. Many thanks for such a jewel of a Roller. He is a marvellous songster. He is worth all the money I paid for the three. He is the best I ever heard.—Yours, J. Rolls." "24, George-st., Burnbank. Sir,—I bought a Leipzig Roller from you seven years ago; it lived six years, and was as good when it died as first day I had him. He actually died singing.—Yours, T. Armstrong." "18, Blights Terrace, Rudruth.—Sir,—Hartz cock is quite a gem in every respect, and as you state, grand value for money.—Yours, W. Myners." "47, Goldhey-st., Blackburn.—Sir,—Leipzig Roller I had from you is a grand songster, and I know, because I breed Rollers.—Yours, J. Brown." "14, Queen-st., Shotton Colliery. Sir,—Leipzig Roller I had from you three years ago started singing five minutes after arrival, and is still singing as good as ever.—Yours, A. Steele." "8, Ladham Bank, Galashiels. Sir,—I have a Leipzig Roller that I got from you four years ago, and is now better than ever.—Yours, T. Hislop." "Providence Place, Bath-street, Ilkeston. Sir,—Please send me Leipzig Roller. I had one from you six years ago, and he is singing yet.—Yours, J. Holmes." "156, Bede Burn-rd., Jarrow. Sir,—Please send me Leipzig Roller. I got one from you three months ago, which is singing lustily. This will be fifth or sixth from you, and all have given utmost satisfaction.—Yours, J. Davison Young." "15, Queen-st., Derby. Sir,—Many thanks for bandmaster; he is a grand songster, and old Canary men here are astounded at his lovely song, and say the best ever heard. In fact, many of our shop customers well used to Canaries say never heard one to approach yours.—Yours, L. Greensmith." Some of the foregoing letters prove conclusively that the Leipzig Rollers do not sing for one year only, but maintain their true song right through life. All birds are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber Leipzig," and as I am sole importer of this strain, no other dealer can sell them, unless he first purchases from me. As this is last consignment, early application is imperative to avoid disappointment. (1385)

SILVER CUP,

4 Firsts, 2 Thirds, Etc.

Once again my birds have wound up the show season by securing highest honours at the Great National Show (see report of Palace Show in this issue). That they have won consistently all through the season is shown by the fact that they have secured 76 Specials, 89 Firsts, 74 Seconds, and 60 Thirds This Season and have been shown in open champion classes only, in hottest competition at all the leading shows. They have also won the N.P.C. Champion Trophy, the O.N.P.C. Champion Trophy, 3rd in Y.C.C. Competition; also several Silver Cups and Bowls, Gold and Silver Medals, Diplomas, and numerous other trophies.

I have also supplied birds that have won highest honours for my clients, including winners of this year's Palace show, in very strong classes. I have letters filed here for anyone to see in proof of this; also a large number of letters from fanciers who have bred winners from stock bred and sold by me.

These are FACTS, needing no comment. They speak for themselves, and they cannot be disputed. I am now offering marvellous value in the following varieties:—

CHAMPION NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN.

Grand, short, thick-set birds, cocks or hens, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards. Matched pairs, personally selected by me for breeding, winners, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- to 100/- per pair. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and I am prepared to give a written guarantee that the above are bred by me from my noted strain of winners. I have also a few real good cobby birds bred from other well-known strains at the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Grand cobby hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand, lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, with good position, and in full song, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/- each. Erect, racy hens, feathered to perfection, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Matched pairs, personally selected, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair.

EXHIBITION YORKSHIRES.

An Unusual Invitation

Call and see the wonderful stocks that are "Talked About"—anyone of them, I mean. Then call and see mine. In most cases you will be met with the "old tale" "not at home." I do not want the opportunity of this excuse, so drop a card when coming. My time will then be your time. I will guarantee not only to open your eyes, but show you such a sight as you have never before seen. What you will see (?) elsewhere—well, I will leave it at that and ask you to read one opinion, and when you favour me with a call I will prove that I have not a few more but thousands. My books shall show more consignments of Canaries than any other person or firm, past or present. My books do not lie, for they will correspond with the Railway Companies books. This, I think, speaks actions, not small talk and empty "brag."

"WORTH DOUBLE."

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Annual show, Feb. 24, Dartmouth Hotel; 88 birds putting in an appearance. Nor. and Brit. were the feature of the show; some grand specimens in both sections were on view. Yorks were a failure in point of numbers, although the few staged were up to the usual standard. A good number of fanciers was present, and the show proved one of the best ever held. Mr. G. Baker (Birmingham) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Monthly meeting and show of matched pairs held Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, Feb. 13, Mr. A. Hendry presiding over a good attendance. A grand lot of business was got through in good time. Prize-money to the amount of £7 16s. 8d. for annual show Nov. last was divided amongst members exhibiting and each share in proportion, was paid out to members present. Seven new members were enrolled: J. Booth, J. Glass, G. Hislop, T. Mackay, A. Law, A. Mitchell, and J. McGarry. Entries for matched pairs were as good as previous years, and the quality par excellence, some grand outstanding birds being amongst them. Mr. John Young (Rutherglen) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Many thanks to him for his obliging kindness in coming to judge. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Pair show, Feb 28, "Lamb Hotel." Borders came up very strong, and some splendid pairs were staged, both in champ. and nov. Mr. Madagan and Mr. Short were the chief winners, putting down some beautiful birds. We were glad to see more Crests than at recent shows, and noticed several excellent pairs, especially the winning pair of Mr. Hamlin, who showed a wonderful Crestbred cock which would have held its own in any company had it been sent out during the season. Norwich were not up to the average in quantity except in the Nov. section, where competition was fairly keen. Mr. Pounsett undertook all arrangements, and had everything in capital order for Mr. Payne, who judged. The attendance during the evening was very good, and the society is very fortunate in having such a splendid room for its shows. Birds were nicely staged at convenient heights on green covered staging, which shows up the colour of the exhibits.

BATHGATE.

GRAND FINAL GATHERING OF BRITISH.

Held Feb. 28 in Corn Exchange, an ideal venue, and on this occasion looking extra well, being tastefully decorated with flowers, etc., the residue of a ball held the previous evening. Entries were well up, being well over 500, which for a show catering almost exclusively for British must have been gratifying to the management, than whom a more painstaking and energetic crew could scarcely be mustered, each vieing with the other in his zeal for the welfare of their various sections. The worthy president, Mr. Bald, had perforce to take the duties of adjudicator, owing to a sudden and painful illness of the allotted judge, Mr. McQuiston, Mr. J. Maddison, of Newcastle, taking even numbers after he had judged classes 1 and 2 during wait for a judge. The genial secretary, Mr. Nicol, had everything well in hand, and cards were up and marked catalogues out in good time. Situated as Bathgate is between the Lothians and Lanarkshire, the show is always well patronised by visitors, and on this occasion it must have eclipsed all previous records, but the floor space quite precluded overcrowding, and the plentiful provision of seats might be copied by many managements, as they were indeed highly appreciated. Quite a few well-known winners were here relegated to the ranks of the also rans; no doubt some were showing the results of a strenuous season and were not looking their best, but in some instances surprise was expressed at such recognised toppers going down. Bathgate enjoys a reputation for Greenfinches, and these again topped the list, a total of 86 being forward, of which 33 in the field-moulted class topped the record in strength.

LIGHT MULE (8): 1, 2, 3, 5, Martin and Archer, well known cl. Linnet leading, rather frayed in wings, yet a good win, greatly admired; 2nd, light var. Goldie, better feather, looking its best here, well placed; 3rd, Greenie, peculiar foul marks, smoky tinge, pity, as this mars an otherwise champion, grand size and condition; 4, Heron, wing mkd. Goldie, very massive, put down in grand order; 6, Hughes Bros.; 7, Brown. HYB. (7): 1, Martin and Archer, well-known Greenie-Chaffie, in grand order, its 26th 1st; 2, Dr. M. Wilson, Canary-Bullie, hot one, nice cobby shape, in grand order, must have pressed; 3, 7, Juman, Goldie-Bullie, excels col., satin-like texture, topper of this cross; 4, Heron; 5, Hughes Bros.; 6, Allan. DARK GOLDF. or LINNET (11): 1, Gilchrist, well known Goldie, rare flush, excels body, with a little more skull might be considered the acme of Mules; 2, Bell, Linnet, often described, hard to find fault with, A1 order; 3, Roy, Goldie, fails col. and subs. to leader, excels cond.; 4, 5, Dr. Wilson; 6, Husband; 7, Heron and McNairn. A.O. DARK (12): 1, Lyall, Siskin, rare size and subs., young breeder's first attempt, Glasgow winner, will improve; 2, Dewar, Greenie, teems with col., grand shape and cond., well placed; 3, 5, Dr. Wilson, Redpoll Can., rare size for cross, well balanced, topping order; 4, J. W. Heron; 6, Roy; 7, Webster. BULLF. CK. (16): 1, Dr. Wilson, grand density and expanse of cap, good subs. and col., in A1 order, excels shape; 2, Sykes, even better subs., hardly depth of breast, hard to separate, shining order; 3, Jameson and Johnson, slightly broken in breast colour, nicely cut cap, excels wings, could be improved; 4, Roy; 5, Palmer; 6, Wallace; 7, Henderson. HEN (7): 1, Nicolson, grand size, nice tone and cap, wins well, excels cond.; 2, Strachan, another nice one, beaten head and front here, yet not disgraced; 3, Hawkes, excels shape, too dark in tone, indistinct, in good order; 4, Caunt; 5, Watson; 6, Ewing; 7, White; a somewhat disappointing class for here. SISKIN, NON-FED or F.M. (19): 1, Gentleman, nice spangle cap, excels tone and flanks, no bib, in grand order wins; 2, White, had been having a bath; 3, Hope, good size and shape, fails col., drops wings a bit, excels cage; 4, Jobling; 5, Muir and Adamson; 6, McCallum; 7, Brownlei and Cook; No. 11, gem of a hen, we made wrong class, pity. FED (11): 1, Calder, good all points, often described, wins nicely; 2, Stuart and Dalling, nice one, beaten flanks and wings by leader, excels cond.; 3, Conkeil, gem for col. and cond., nice body, bit pinched in head; 5, Henderson; 6, Irvine; 7, Sykes. GOLDF., H.M. (15): 1, Wallace, nice face, good subs., excels moonings and tans, in good order; 2, Guthrie, very similar, beaten expanse, quite equal condition; 3, Chalmers, best tans, fails depth of blaze, good wings; 4, Jeffreys; 5, Allan; 6, Stuart and Dalling; 7, Brown; No. 9, Pringle, best blaze in class, rather thin, but might have led some here, National and Palace winner (?), if so, not up to form here. F.M. (18): 1, Strachan, nice size, excels moons and depth of blaze, steady; 2, Metcalf, better shape of blaze, grand tans and wings, pressed; 3, Jobling, nicely squared, good tone, rather pinched in head; 4, Bell; 5, Irvine; 6, McKizen; 7, Nicholson. LINNET, H.M. (18): 1, Strachan, right away, nice cone shape, good size, excels tone and pencilling, A1 order; 2, Junnan, another nice one, beaten front, work and subs., nice bloom; 3, Stuart and Dalling, shade dark, yet excels pencilling, rare bloom and condition, our choice for 2nd; 4, Dr. Wilson; 5, Campbell, might have gone up; 6, Calder; 7, Sinclair, some real good birds cardless here. F.M. (25): 1, McGavin, good shape, excels breast work and cond., refuses to face front of cage; 2, Stewart and Milne, nice colour, rather open front, good cond.; 3, Irvine, better size, rather open front, fails work and tone; 4, Robson; 5, Harper, monster; 6, Calder; 7, Sinclair; some good birds cardless also, many liked No. 6. Brown, for a prize card. GREENF., COL. FED (8): 1, Stuart and Dalling, well-known, often described, with a little rise on skull would be ideal; 2, Henderson; scarcely subs. of leader, rather frayed left wing, excels col. and head; 3, McGregor and Boyd, hot one, better condition, hardly subs. or skull of 2nd; 4, 5, Cowan; 6, Law; 7, McLean. NON-FED (16): 1, 7, Sykes, leader grand shape and subs., excels tone and cond., well placed; 2, Pickles, hardly equal subs. or col. of leader, in grand order; 3, Jeffreys, better col., rare bars, just beaten skull, yet we preferred; 4, Gentleman; 5, Doolan, some fancied to go up, a good one; 6, Muir and Adamson. F.M. (33): 1, W. P. Campbell, fair size, shape and col., bit lucky to win in such a class; 2, Gibb, better shape and subs., nice wings, pinched in skull; 3, Showler, better head and colour, excels cond., wild; 4, Allan; 5, no name; 6, Law; 7, Palmer; a grand lot of Greenies out of the cards. GREENF. HEN (13): 1, Craig, good size, prominent sharp keel; 2, Sykes, rare size, teems with quality, we liked for 1st; 3, Gentleman, another good one, better than leader in all points but size; 4, McGregor and Boyd; 5, Nicolson; 6, Irr; 7, Campbell. MEALY 'POLL or TWITE, H.M. (13): 1, Conkie and London, Twite, rare tone, nice breast, size and cond., well placed; 2, Johnstone, 'Poll, big one, might be better in flank markings; 3, Nicolson, Twite, falls work to leader, better head, bit sluggish, nice size; 4, R. F. Campbell, 'Poll, good size, teems with work, A1 order, our choice for 2nd; 5, Gentleman; 6, Quinn; 7, Hdham. F.M. (26): 1, 3, Nicolson, Twite leading, nice tone and pencilling, rare order, very steady for a F.M. bird; 3rd, 'Poll, big one, excels cond.; 2, McGavin, 'Poll, rare cap, excels bib and lacing, well placed; 4, Bell; 5, Juman; 6, R. T. Campbell; 7, Craig. LESSER 'POLL, H.M. (11): 1, Conkie, wee gem for col. and subs., nice shape, excels work, well placed; 2, Stuart and Dalling, nice one, just falls flanks, in grand order; 3, Brownlie and Cook, best head in class, nice flanks, beaten by leader in bloom, but our choice for 2nd; 4th, Dale; 5, Sykes; 6, Dr. Wilson; 7, Doolan. F.M. (25): 1, Jeffreys, right away in all points, a model 'Poll; 2, Davidson, another good one, hardly size or bloom of leader, well placed; 3, Lyall, little don, just falls size, hard to separate, a good 3rd; 4, Lloyd, better shape, rare bloom, just beaten work and bib; 5, Connochan; 6, Gentleman; 7, Palmer; really good class. BUNTING, H.M. (10): 1, Law, good col. natural, nice head marks, fails subs.; 2, Dr. Wilson, Meadow, rare tone, delicate markings, splendid order; 3, Henderson, black head, fails mantle and tone, good cond.; 4, Stuart and Dalling; 5, 7, Russell; 6, Strachan. CHAFF., H.M. (11): 1, 2, 3, Sykes, well known trio; 3rd drooping wings a bit; 4, Spence, grand breast and cond., rather pinched front of head, excels bloom; 5, Dr. Wilson; 6, Jeffreys; 7, Elliott. BRAMBLE, H.M. (9): 1, 2, 3, Sykes, famous trio, often described, leading well here; 4, Linton; 5, Jameson and Johnston; 6, Conkie and Loudon; 7, Robertson. SMALL SOFTBILL (4): 1, Cowan, Bearded Reedling, nice order, well staged, Continental specimen; 2, no name, Blackstart, good col., hangs wings; 3, Anderson, Black cap, nice order, well staged; 4, Erskine. LARGE, A.V. (6): 1, 3, Sykes, Chough leading, looking well and improving greatly; 3rd, grand Hawfinch, needs no description; 2, Brucc, Song Thrush; what a trio of toppers, how happy we could be with either; 4, Henderson, grand Waxwing, eclipsed in such company, well put down; 5, Connelly; 6, Malcolm. HARDBILL HEN, SMALL (14): 1, Craig, Corn Bunting, nice size and breast work, steady, excellent order; 2, Gentleman, Yellow Bunting, rare size, grand work and bloom, well placed; 3, Nicolson, Corn, hardly up to size or bloom of leader; 4, Strachan; 5, Metcalf; 6, Carr; 7, Jeffreys; some cocks in this class, properly passed. SMALL HARDBILL, F.M. (17): 1, Allan, Bramble, strangely tame for a F.M., good subs., excellent flanks and breast, well placed; 2, Pointer, Corn Bunting, another miracle, quite a pet, nice breast work, feather perfect, good 2nd; 3, Sykes, Chaffinch, rare breast col., excels cap, A1 order; 4, Nicolson; 5, no name; 6, Forster; 7, Hayter. NOV. BRIT. (5): 1, Crawford, Hawfinch, not large, rare tone and condition, steady, well placed; 2, Hardie, Goldie, nice face and tans, rather rakish; 3, Strachan, Greenie, nice size and col., fails condition; 4, Hardie; 5, Mitchell. MULE or HYB. PAIR (11): 1, Nicolson, nice Siberian Goldie and yell. varieg. Nor. hen, latter could do with more subs., we preferred 2nd, Strachan, Goldie-Bullie, both Siberians, former rare col., size and cond., on good terms; 3, Steven, Canary-Bullie, latter best foreign in class, an ideal pair, Canary fails to 2nd, Goldie, well placed; 4, no name; 5, Gentleman; 6, McGavin; 7, Brown. FOR. GOLDF., H.M. (6): 1, Henderson, grand tone and expanse of blaze, excels size and cond., well placed; 2, Pringle, close up, beaten tans and tone, no disgrace against such a topper; 3, Sommerville, scarcely square in blaze, beaten subs.; 4, Guthrie and Son. F.M. (8): 1, Wallace, nice blaze, massive size, in good order, wins; 2, Henderson, even better subs., hardly tone of leader, good 2nd; 3, Shields, fails shape and cut of blaze and size, good order; 4, Roy; 5, Brown; 6, no name; 7, McKizen. FOR. SMALL (13): 1, 2, 4, 5, Arnott, well-known Purple Sugarbird leading, in grand order, wins nicely, the centre of attraction; 2nd, Tricolour Tanager, often described; 4th, Gold-fronted Fruitsucker, in good form; 3, Montague, Sugarbird, scarcely fit. FOR. BULLF. (7): 1, 6, Brown, ck. leading, good size and depth of breast, grand skull, yet we preferred 2nd, no name, hen, giant for size excellent shape, nice tones, well defined; 3, Muir and Adamson, ck., nice cap and col., fails size; 4, Ildham, similar stamp.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

First members' show, Feb. 25, Kingsland Assembly Hall. The hall, a very comfortable one for a show, was hardly large enough for the number of visitors who visited it during the day. 150 birds were staged, quality was good, and competition very hot. Some grand birds were seen in the Yorks. section, and in the For. class Miss M. Bousfield's (Bournemouth) Superb Tanager was much admired. Mr. Martin Cook (Bournemouth) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

Annual members' show held St. Paul's School, Bennett Street, Jan. 31. The room is an ideal one, being lofty, free from draught, and well lighted. Entries numbered 248—a big improvement, no doubt brought about by the spirited competition for the silver cup presented by the president, Mr. S. T. Oldham. Mr. F. Hayward, the sec., quick and ever courteous, always there when wanted, untiring in his efforts, and attending to every detail in quite a masterly fashion, is decidedly the right man for the secretarial office. Mr. J. Raynes and the worthy president also rendered valuable assistance. Stewards, who worked efficiently and judiciously, were Messrs. J. Ascroft, J. E. Massey, and F. Robinson. Management throughout was excellent, and everything passed off smoothly. Prize money was paid out at the show. Special winners were: Messrs. S. T. Oldham, J. A. Vint, W. H. Tansey, J. McTurk, and E. Raper. Special for best bird was won by Mr. S. T. Oldham with his noted hybrid, shown in the pink again. Mr. W. H. Battye judged, and gave general satisfaction.—W. H. Tansey, Assist. Sec.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

By J. TOMLINSON

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

ON the other hand, were two birds mated, each bred from parents singing different faults, it would be introducing faults of both parents into the blood of the progeny, and what is in the blood will come out in the song. An instance in contradiction could be given to this on the cock's side, and would be where it had acquired the faulty passage by being kept in company of others that were singing it, and in this case its offspring should not sing it unless they also get it by tuition.

There is another matter of equal importance to the above, and much heartburning will be avoided, together with a great deal of inconvenience, where it is desired to purchase two cocks. In addition to health and age, due consideration should be given to the faults these two cocks are singing, because it is undesirable that the contemplated purchases should have different faults, unless you could keep them apart, and entirely out of each other's hearing.

The majority are quick to acquire anything objectionable, adding it to their own song, and so deteriorating, rather than maintaining, their market value. In case this should not be explicit to any, I will assume your desire is to purchase two cocks, and you choose one that sings an Aufzug, and the other bad flutes. Now, if these two birds were to be kept together in the same room, or in separate rooms where they could distinctly hear each other's voice, they would ultimately learn to sing each other's faults, and you would then have two cocks both singing an Aufzug and sharp flutes.

What is the result? Your birds are not so valuable as when you purchased them, because each one is singing two faults, whereas at the time you bought them, they only sang one; and unless they had an extra good variety of tours they would not be suitable to use as tutors. You would not then be working on the correct lines to cultivate or better the quality of your birds' song, and you would show a deficit on your year's working instead of a profit. Consequently, I would advise that if two cocks cannot be procured that have the same objectionable song passages, be content with one bird, and choose the best the purse will allow.

I was asked by a friend a short time ago, "Did I consider myself a bit of a fad on bad faults?" I explained that I was quite willing to accept a fault in a bird that had a variety of tours to compensate for it. But there are faults and faults; some are more objectionable sounding than others, and if I could minimise the fault or obtain in another an equally good variety of tours with a less objectionable fault I should be better satisfied. But I would not lose a good bird, or even a good tour, to eradicate a fault unless it was most objectionable.

I have pointed out that there is not much to choose from in purchasing cheap birds, as there is much of a sameness about them, and the price leaves little scope for fancy song points; and as the majority of these birds are imported from the Continent, nothing can be learned of their parentage. Similar methods would be employed to cultivate the song of these, as would be used for better class stock, the advantage the latter have is that some idea can be formed beforehand what they would be likely to produce, whereas with the cheap imported birds the only policy is to "wait and see."

The first step will be to notice whether any of the young cocks are able to sing equal to, or a little better than their sire. A great improvement cannot be expected in the first cross, yet it may be that the young are able to sing the good tours of their sire; in this case the good qualities of the old birds would be evenly matched. On the other hand, should any be found that are superior to the sire on any of the other good tours, you would desire to ascertain from which side this has been derived.

The following year pair this young cock to its dam, in the event of there being more than one young cock, then a nest from each in turn should be taken. The young hens bred in the same nest as this selected young cock should be paired to their sire, and a note should be made from which parents the good qualities are again obtained.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S

Annual supper and concert, Feb. 21, "Horse and Groom" Hotel. After supper, company settled down to an excellent programme. A large and able company of amateur artistes had kindly offered their services. The chair was taken by Mr. Gibbins, who made a few remarks on the society's progress. Mr. F. W. Everett, a splendid accompanist, presided at the piano, carrying each singer through in grand style. Mr. C. Warren led off with a capital song, "Nobody's Satisfied," which was well received, and for an encore gave "My First Derby" (in character). Our veteran member, Mr. J. Allen, who was on his top note, sang "Tailor on the Spree," receiving a hearty encore, with which he complied. Mr. E. Brooks sang "Isle of Wight." This gentleman has a fine voice, and knows how to use it. Mr. E. Hulse recited with fine dramatic effect. Mr. W. Miller sang "Mother Love," and as an encore "Comrade's Sake." Mr. F. W. Everett obliged with "Glorious Devon," and Mr. W. Richardson with "Tipperary," both securing a storm of applause. Messrs. McCarter, Rice, and others also gave us good entertainment. A vote of thanks was given to chair, artistes, and to Mr. C. B. Day, who arranged the concert. "Auld Lang Syne" ended a most enjoyable evening.—A. Freestone.

SOUTHERN B.F. CLUB.

Meeting Feb. 26, Mr. Norman presiding, and a good number present. Five new members nominated for election at next meeting. Letter received by Mr. Madagan (Cheltenham) from sec. of Swansea show, re the disqualification of one of Mr. Madagan's birds was read, and sec. instructed to write to Swansea for further particulars. Letter read from Pres., Rev. H. A. Soames, and sec. instructed to thank him for accepting Presidentship and for the interest he is taking in the club's welfare. Applications for patronage received from Mr. J. W. Ramsden for his autumn show, and from Bournemouth C.B.A. Decided to let both applications lie until next meeting, when it is hoped to fix up all patronage. Applications should be forwarded at once to Sec., at 91, Forest Road, Dalston, giving names of judges, amount of entry fee and prize money fixed. Decided to extend the classification for current year, and clubs desiring patronage will be asked to put on the following classes: Champ., cl. or tkd. buff ck., yell. ck., buff hen, yell. hen, uneven mkd. yell. or buff ck. or hen, Gr. or Cinn. ck. or hen. Nov., A.V. buff ck., yell. ck., A.V. hen. A discussion arose as to the advisability of drawing up a model for the guidance of members. The chairman kindly offered to draw up and submit designs, and to collaborate with Mr. Plank, who kindly gave us the diplomas last year, so that the model selected might appear on this year's diplomas. Discussions arose on various schemes for the benefit of our "Wee Gems," and it is evident that the members intend to spare no efforts to place the club in a prominent position this coming year. Vote of thanks to chair brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—F. W. Burton, Hon. Sec.

WOOD GREEN F.S.

Programme for 1914, four table shows, four lectures, young stock cage birds July 4th, annual show Nov. 21, judges Messrs. Hodder and Shakespeare. Four members elected, Feb. 24. W. H. Shillito elected treasurer. Subs. due for 1914; new members invited, sub. 2s. 6d. If any small error should appear in my reports there is no need for anonymous "informers" to rush into print, as I am not infallible.—T. Callegari.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Meeting headquarters Feb. 25. 12 evening shows arranged for 1914. Valuable cash specials, knives, spoons, and medals offered for points in various sections. New members: Messrs. C. W. Mead, J. L. Giles, G. C. Firth, A. W. Davis, and J. Simmons. First evening show of cage birds, March 25, judge Mr. C. H. Cooper. Mr. G. A. Parker offers 2/6 special for most points. May 27 lecture by Mr. J. S. Clarke, on "Bird Life." Secretary pleased to correspond with fanciers with a view to joining.—A. Wasey, hon. sec.

WOOLWICH F.S.

Meeting, Feb. 26, headquarters, Mission Hall, Rippolson Road, Plumstead. After usual business a nice show of cage birds was staged, Mr. W. Hazell judging. Judging competition by members followed, finishing up with a very interesting and instructive lecture by Mr. W. Pavey. Vote of thanks to judge and lecturer was carried unanimously. Next meeting March 19th, headquarters.—Geo. Eves, hon. sec.

SANDY LANE C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 24, Victoria Hotel, Sandy Lane. There was a splendid muster. Officers elected for 1914: (Pres.) A. Hanson, (vice.-pres.) S. Ratcliffe and S. Hardaker, (sec. and treas.) S. Moore, (assist. sec.) M. Moore, (auditors) S. Ratcliffe and J. A. Whitwham, (delegate) J. Wilson.—S. Moore, sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Annual show, Naish Royal Stores. This was one of the best shows ever held, the quality and number in Nor., Yorks., and Bord. being exceptionally good. Many well-known winners were on view. The British section was a failure. This is hard to understand in a city like Cardiff. There was a keen struggle for best exhibit in the show, Mr. Maggs winning with his well-known unflighted Nor. yell., Mr. Dugmore's unflig. yell. Yorks. being runner-up. Mr. Maggs also won sp. for best pair, Mr. Smith, sp. most points; Mr. Raymond, most points Nov. Yorks.; Rev. C. B. Jolliff, most points Nov. Nor.; and Mr. Peterson in Nov. Brit. Total entries were 145. Mr. J. H. Payne judged.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Pair show, Feb. 26, Trinity Schools, Woolwich. There were the same number of entries as last year, and a fine lot of birds. Great credit is due to the nov. section, and with a fairly good breeding season there ought to be some very keen competition at our annual show. Mr. Campbell judged, and gave every satisfaction.

STOCKSBRIDGE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, National Schools, Feb. 14; Mr. Wm. Moore chair, and a good number present. Three new members were enrolled. After business was over pres., Rev. W. C. Edginton, took the chair, and the question of holding an open show was gone into. Finally decided to hold one in Nov., if possible, date being left with the sec. to avoid clashing with other societies in district (Now fixed for Nov. 28.). Decided to have the date announced in "Cage Birds" Dates Fixed Column. Pres. promised a donation of two guineas towards the show fund. He also promised to arrange a lantern lecture in March, proceeds to be given to the fund. All Canary classes were guaranteed by the members. Sec. promised a silver cup, value five guineas, for most points in nov. Yorks (to be won outright). Sec. was instructed to obtain various judges' terms. Officials elected: Pres., Rev. W. C. Edginton; chair, Mr. R. Bradshaw; vice., Mr. F. Bainbridge; committee, Messrs. F. Bainbridge, W. Webb, J. Evans, F. Clapham, F. Hodge, E. Oates, W. Hoyle, F. Elliott, Geo. Drabble, F. Hoyle, H. Day, — Webster; hon. secs., G. H. B. Sampson and Wm. Moore. A hearty vote of thanks to the president concluded the best birdy meeting ever held in Stocksbridge. Geo. H. B. Sampson, hon. sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting held Feb. 18, Mr. R. Topping chair, before a good number. Mr. J. Morrinson, Newcastle, and Mr. J. H. Hutchins, Dudley Colliery, elected members. Medals were selected, and the following are to receive same: Champ. cup and gold medal, W. H. Butler; silver medals, F. W. Laidlow, J. Pierson, H. Wellsbury, C. Snowdon, and W. M'Ginn; Nov., R. Topping, gold medal; S. Lindsey, J. Wood, J. Lumley, J. G. Hodson, R. Hope, silver medals. In respect of the fund for a young bird cup, and specials for novices, a letter was read from our worthy president, Mr. W. H. Butler, enclosing a cheque for two guineas towards the fund—a splendid start, and the thanks of all were given Mr. Butler for his generous gift. The cup to be competed for as follows: Birds to be 1914 bred, and to be bred by exhibitor, to be won three times before becoming the property of exhibitor. Value of cup left over until later date; if any member can help us subscribing towards same, however small, sec. will be pleased to receive; also funds towards getting a novice trophy to encourage the novices of the Norwich Plainhead in the north. We give an open invitation to all Norwich fanciers in the northern counties to join us, as that is the only way we can help the variety by joining together; anyone wishing to join us can do so by sending along to me at 55, Colston-street, Benwell, Newcastle, or to any of the members. Pair show held, Mr. W. M'Ginn judge. Mr. R. Topping gave 2s. 6d. for most points, which was won by J. Morrinson. YELL. CK., BUFF HEN: 1, Willsbury; 2, 3, Morrinson; vhc, Holden; hc, c, Pierson. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN: 1, c, Morrinson; 2, Wellsbury; 3, Pierson; vhc, Curry. The judge gave satisfaction to all, and thanks were given him. Next meeting (annual) March 18.—F. W. Laidlow.

BRAMLEY O.S.

Prize distribution and successful smoking concert held Globe Inn, Bramley, Feb. 21, when about 40 members and friends were present. Mr. H. Mitchell, chair. After songs by Messrs. Dickenson and Eastwood, the Chairman introduced Mr. Rudd, who had kindly consented to present the prizes. Winners were: 1, Mr. W. Richmond; 2, Mr. F. Page; 3, Mr. B. H. Willson; 4, Mr. W. H. Steel; 5, Mr. H. Mitchell; 6, Mr. Palmer; 7, Mr. R. Hetherington; 8, Mr. R. Jones; 9, Mr. Baldwinson. At the conclusion of the prize-giving, Mr. Rudd stated that he hoped to see the time when Bramley O.S. would be able to hold another open show, for which he offered his entire support, being backed up by another old-time fancier, Mr. J. Hargreaves. After these generous offers the concert was proceeded with. The following gentlemen contributed songs, etc., throughout the evening: Messrs. Leggot, Palmer, Eastwood, and Dickenson; and Mr. Fidler gave some selections on gramophone. Mr. Fowler officiated at the piano. Mrs. W. Thornton rendered "The song that reached my heart" in excellent style, and, in response to loud applause, she gave "In the days of long ago," in which she again brought the house down. As time was now getting far advanced, Mr. Mitchell proposed that best thanks be given to Mr. Rudd for coming to present the prizes, also to all those who had contributed to the evening's entertainment. Mr. Palmer, in supporting, hoped that a ramble could be arranged during the coming spring, and asked all members, with their wives and friends, to join. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought to a close one of the best evenings the Bramley O.S. has ever held.—F. Page, Sec.

HALIFAX O.S.

Annual tea, whist drive, and social, Feb. 21, West Ward Liberal Club. Close upon 120 members and friends sat down to a substantial tea provided by the steward, Mr. W. Spencer. After a few games of whist had been played a capital programme, including dancing, songs, and a piano solo, was enjoyed by all present. Afterwards there was a presentation of prizes won by the following members during a series of shows: Messrs. Burdekin Bros., Townsend, Wilkinson, Saville, Mottram, Helliwell, Heap, Corney, Lord, Child, Ogden, Jackson, Barnes, Mann, and Thornton. Mr. MacAndrews sang in first-class style, "It's a Long, Long Walk," "Hush-a-bye, Baby," and "Father"; Mr. George Dawson gave "My Little Chicks," and "Old Farmer John"; and Miss Lloyd contributed a piano solo which was well received. Mrs. Dunn presented the prizes, and Messrs. Clegg and Ingham made efficient M.C.'s. Messrs. Sweeting and Barker were responsible for the arrangements.—H. Clegg, sec.

The claim made by Mr. J. Thomas, the well-known dealer, of Ambler Thorn, Halifax, to have won a very considerable number of prizes during the past season, was amply borne out by the contents of a large box which he sent us last week. It was simply packed from lid to floor with prize cards (most of them 1sts, or other money awards) and diplomas secured at leading shows, including three or four very handsome ones, won for best birds in various sections at the Bradford National show. At the last Palace Show Mr. Thomas won a silver cup, in addition to many other prizes.

A White Robin.

There is a white Robin not far from Hartlebury Station, which has attracted a good deal of local attention: it is perfectly white, writes Mr. G. J. Dalton, to the "Birmingham Post."

A Fine Result.

I have just wound up my first season of showing birds, writes Mr. F. Sampson, of Bedminster, Bristol. I have won 2 diplomas and 2 10s. specials from CAGE BIRDS, 6 firsts, 9 seconds, 4 thirds, 6 commercial cards, and 5 special prizes. I may say I have found much help from your paper, CAGE BIRDS.

Striking Defence of Bird-Keeping.

Professor Ray Lankester's Views.

"A bombshell has fallen amidst the ranks of the sentimentalists." In "The Daily Telegraph" of March 3 the distinguished scientist and naturalist, Sir E. Ray Lankester, K.C.B., F.R.S., gives his views on the question whether birds should or should not be kept in cages.

Upon the appearance of the article, I sought an interview, and the reply to my telegram was an appointment to call at Sir Ray Lankester's charming house at Putney.

It was not the first time I had had the pleasure of meeting the great scientist, for it was my privilege to conduct Sir Edwin around the British and Foreign sections at the Crystal Palace Show, but I explained that I had called as an ordinary journalist on behalf of CAGE BIRDS to get an interview for publication.

"Very well," said Sir Edwin jocularly, "if you come as a stranger, I won't offer you a cigar." Nevertheless, a box of Coronas was immediately brought in, and the "stranger" notion vanished into smoke. Indeed, no one could feel a stranger in conversation with Sir Ray Lankester. He has a personality so genial that in conversation with him one almost seems to forget that one is talking to a great man, who has done more for the enlightenment of humanity in general than all the poets, novelists, and sentimentalists that have come into this world since the Creation.

"You do not keep birds, Sir Edwin?" I asked. "No;" was the reply, "but I am thinking of so doing. It is my intention to remain in this house, and I shall erect an outdoor aviary, and probably convert a fernhouse into an indoor aviary for a few pet birds."

"What first interested you in the ethics of bird-keeping?" "The letters of Mr. Thos. Hardy and others in the 'Times,' and your own replies thereto." "You are satisfied, after what you saw at the Crystal Palace, that cruelty is not necessarily involved in cage-bird keeping?" "Perfectly; as I have just said in 'The Daily Telegraph'":—

"Cage-birds do not beat their wings against the bars of their cages, except when an untactful person approaches them. They have no power of reflection upon the limitation of their freedom. Their one great trouble in a free life, viz., the insufficiency of food, is removed. Moreover, they are protected from the attacks of their natural enemies who feed on them, and from fierce competition with one another. As to the life of which it is supposed that they have been deprived—the fact is that life is actually conferred on them by their lodgment in a cage, and that had they been left as young birds in their native wilds more than nine-tenths of them would have perished before reaching the adult condition. I maintain that the keeping of little birds as pets, tenderly guarded and furnished with abundant healthy food and water, in fair sized cages or aviaries, is not only one of the most decent, natural, and widely-spread sources of human enjoyment indulged in even by some of the more primitive half-civilised races of man but is one of the not too numerous means by which man enters into friendly intimacy with other living things, and should receive approval and sympathy rather than condemnation from Nature lovers."

In the course of the interview Sir Ray Lankester spoke freely of his impressions of the birds at the Palace. He said he had been pleased beyond his expectations. But, as one outside the world of bird-keeping, he said, he could scarcely appreciate the ambitions of fanciers in the direction of producing abnormally feathered specimens, such as the Dutch Frills and the Crests, or such curiously shaped birds as the Belgians and Scotch Fancies. Neither could he see why in Mule and Hybrid breeding it should be the goal of the fancier to produce clears. He thought the Goldfinch-Canary a prettier bird than either of its parents in markings, and considered it curious that fanciers should endeavour to produce a clear Mule, which was so like a Canary that it needed a fancier to distinguish it from the Canary itself.

I ventured to point out that bird fanciers had a lot of human nature in their composition. It was human to strive after the difficult. Florists tried for black tulips, blue roses, and red daffodils; gardeners hankered after beans 3ft. long; and in every creative hobby it was the difficult which was held to be the most desirable.

Sir Edwin smilingly agreed that there was something to be said for this point of view, although he was unable to alter his own opinions concerning it. These were expressed in "The Daily Telegraph" as follows:—

"The true member of 'the Fancy' has arrived at a point when he cares more for the exhibition of his own skill or luck in breeding strange and often repellant varieties of birds, according to some arbitrary demand set up by judges employed to devise and determine the competitions decided at annual shows, than he does for the natural beauty and qualities of the species of birds made use of. These competitions and the arbitrary puzzles set before the contending breeders are only an excrescence—a serious and vigorous one, it is true—upon the hobby of the lover of 'caged birds,' as are the similar proceedings of horticulturists to the hobby of those who love a garden, and of dog-fanciers to the hobby of those who love dogs."

After a delightful two hours' conversation, I left the pleasant company of the renowned naturalist whose writing had prompted my visit, and I was fully satisfied at the ultimate effect of Mr. Hardy's letter to the "Times," this being the prospective accession to the ranks of kindly bird-keepers of such a celebrity as Sir E. Ray Lankester.

Every reader of CAGE BIRDS should make a point of obtaining a copy of "The Daily Telegraph" of March 3, and of reading the most stringent refutation of the arguments of the sentimentalists that has ever been committed to paper.

H. J. FULLLAMES.

The Palace Show Number beats all records—the report is splendid.—W. H. Simpson (Streatham).

1914's First Swallow.

The correspondent to the "Field" was not the first to see the Swallow this year. I saw three on Feb. 2; one pair had just come across the Channel. I have seen several single ones since.—G. Rosser, Brixham.

The Roberts Cup.

This splendid trophy, offered for competition by C. Roberts, Esq., of Blackpool, so far back as 1903, has now been won outright by Messrs. Evins Bros., of Exeter, writes Mr. John Tyson, hon. sec. of the Crested Canary Club. It was decided at the annual general meeting of the C.C.C. that, in the absence of any protest received in the meantime, I hand over the cup to Messrs. Evins Bros. on the 18th March.

Jealousy at Wood Green.

Some small-minded person, jealous of the success of our society, has written an anonymous letter to the press because I made a small mistake in a report, writes Mr. T. Callegari, of the Wood Green F.A. I would take no mean advantage, and always help the press, in my small way, in their good work. I have run all our shows except two, and attended all monthly and committee meetings for five years, and am now subjected to this treatment. I regret there should be such bad feeling in the Fancy.

Winners for Canada.

I have sold (to Mr. A. N. Smillie, Toronto, that champion unflighted clear buff Norwich, winner 1st Sheffield, 1st Nottingham, 3rd sp. Scottish National, etc., writes Mr. Albert Hirst (Accrington); also buff cinnamon-marked Yorkshire, 1st Stoke, 1st Accrington (members), 3rd Paisley, etc. Mr. Smillie has received these birds, and is highly pleased with them, and states that several of the fanciers declare the former to be the best Norwich ever sent to that country. They take CAGE BIRDS out there, and I have got this particular connection through my advt. in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

I was delighted to see my Goldie-Mule on the front of CAGE BIRDS; many thanks for the honour. The £10 10s. prize was a greater surprise, but that all comes of reading your valuable paper, in which every branch of the hobby is catered for. I wish you even greater success with your scheme next year.—W. Levick.

The publicity in your correspondence columns re Roller branch of our society, writes Mr. J. Whitehead, Sec., Ashton-under-Lyne O.S., "met with a hearty response, and I am pleased to say that lectures, etc., appertaining to this particular branch are being arranged. The committee hope for still further support, as we hear that the district contains fanciers of this variety who are not as yet connected with any society.

We have received the syllabus of the Walkley C.B.S. Something interesting seems to be provided at each meeting. Besides four table shows, N.F. show, and annual show, arrangements are made for egg-food and colour-food competitions, lecture by Mr. P. Walsh on British birds, paper by Mr. C. Tomlinson on "Seeds and their uses," and other attractions. The hon. sec. is Mr. C. Tomlinson, 95, Winter Street.

The Canary's Egg Explained.

Metropolitan fanciers have an opportunity on Monday next, March 9th, of gleaning information, which, we understand, promises to be instructive and somewhat unusual, concerning the mechanism of an egg, when Mr. G. E. Weston lectures before the City and Suburban A.C.B., in the hall of the Church Institute (the society's headquarters), 60, Paddington Street, off High Street, Marylebone (near Baker Street). The subject is "The Egg Within the Bird," and will have special reference to the egg of the Canary, reasons for its fertility and infertility, etc. Part 2, "The Bird Within the Egg" will be given at a later meeting. Commence 8.15 p.m.; visitors are cordially invited. As the breeding season is so close upon us, Mr. Weston's topic should prove specially attractive.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Geo. Dix, that I have to announce that one of our oldest fanciers, Mr. Geo. Baker, of Belgian fame, and the pioneer of the Belgian Fancy in the West, lost his wife on Feb. 23 after a long illness. I am sorry to state that Mr. Baker is, and has been, in ill-health for a number of years. I am sure all who know Mr. Baker will join me in offering the deepest sympathy to him and his family in their sad bereavement.

An Express Tragedy.

The driver of the Flying Scotsman from Euston to Carlisle had a remarkable experience in the early morning of Feb. 19. While the train was travelling at sixty miles an hour near Leighton the look out glass on the engine was suddenly smashed to atoms. Pieces of broken glass flew in all directions, one wounding the driver under the eye. The startled driver had not far to look to find the cause of the accident. Lying at his feet was the dead body of a large Owl, which, dazzled no doubt by the lights of the engine, had flown in front, and crashed through the plate-glass.

BIRD-ROOM APPLIANCES EXPLAINED.

By H. NORMAN (Carshalton.)

IN the fitting up of the single-breeder the first thing to consider is the wire front, some of these are not made quite to a fancier's liking, they are sometimes put together by men who are not practical breeders, for instance, some I purchased once were made with the doorway so small that it was impossible to take the nest-pan out without tipping it on one side, the consequence was that in doing so I unfortunately managed to break a couple of eggs from a choice pair of Canaries. After that experience I felt that I was strong enough with the aid of a billet of wood to smash those fronts to save other breakages. The ordinary nest-pan measures three and five-eighth inches, therefore the doorway should not be less than four inches, in order to allow one to pass the pan in and out quite freely.

The position of the door in the single-breeder should of course be in the centre, and if the Fancier is a breeder of Yorkshires he should see that the cross-bar is not placed very high, so that the perches which run from back to front will be rather low, thus allowing plenty of head room for the birds to keep a good position. Some makers of breeders have a separate slot at one end on purpose for the egg-drawer, others place them under the door, Fig. 6 shows both in position. Many Fanciers prefer the side slot, as the one under the door is rather in the way when a bath is hung on for the old birds to take a dip. One should see that the perches are easily removable to allow for cleaning purposes, and a duplicate set, although not absolutely necessary, is nevertheless very useful

There is a type of single breeder made rather larger than the one described, this generally measures twenty-two or twenty-four inches in length, and is constructed on a little different principle (Fig. 7). It generally has two doors in the wire front, one of them in the usual place, and the other on the left-hand side above the cross-bar; the purpose of this is to allow free access to the nest pan.

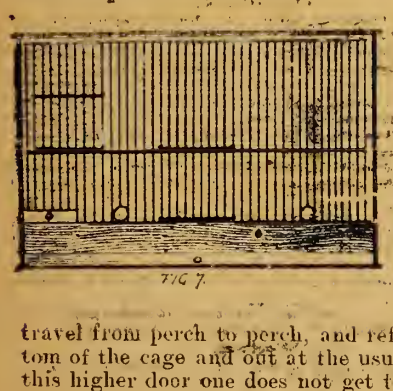

FIG 7.

The side door is also extremely useful when it is required to run a bird into a small cage; he hops easily from the perch to the door opening, and thus into the new cage. Some birds are very tiresome when being changed over; they will continue to travel from perch to perch, and refuse to go to the bottom of the cage and out at the usual doorway, but with this higher door one does not get this trouble; being on the same level they easily find their way to it.

In every well arranged bird-room one should find one or two flight cages, either put together in the usual way as part of the stock furniture, or made so that they can easily be taken to pieces. Now in the construction of flight cages there are one or two things that require particular consideration. The main object of a flight is to allow young birds to develop their frames by exercise, therefore our perches should be placed with a view to the birds taking full advantage of the size of the flight. When in other fancier's rooms I often see the perches in a flight placed in practically the same position as they are in the ordinary stock cage; consequently the birds get no more real exercise than they would if left in them. Place the perches at each end, then the birds have a real good fly from one to the other, and this undoubtedly does them a world of good, develops their frames and improves the wing carriage.

Fig. 8 is a drawing of a flight I recently saw in a breeder's room. It was 6ft. in length, and placed underneath the breeding cages, and so constructed that it could be divided into four compartments, the end one near the door being particularly useful for catching the inmates or running them into a small cage.

In these large flights one should be very careful to have plenty of seed hoppers and drinking vessels, or some of the less sturdy birds will soon lose flesh and go back instead of forward.

Fig 9 is a flight use in my own room, and is easily constructed. It is 60 inches long, 24 high, and 16 deep, and is made out of ordinary tile battens with a width of floor board nailed on the two sides, one end being boarded up, and the other covered with an old wire front, the door raised an inch to allow the birds to get at the seed hopper, which is hung opposite. The frame is covered with half-inch wire netting, and in my case is usually placed on the floor of the bird room, it has no bottom to it, but of course one could be easily put in if desired. When not in use it is placed outside in the garden to sweeten The wood work is creosoted so that the weather does not hurt it. The wide floor board all round the bottom prevents the draught getting to the birds.

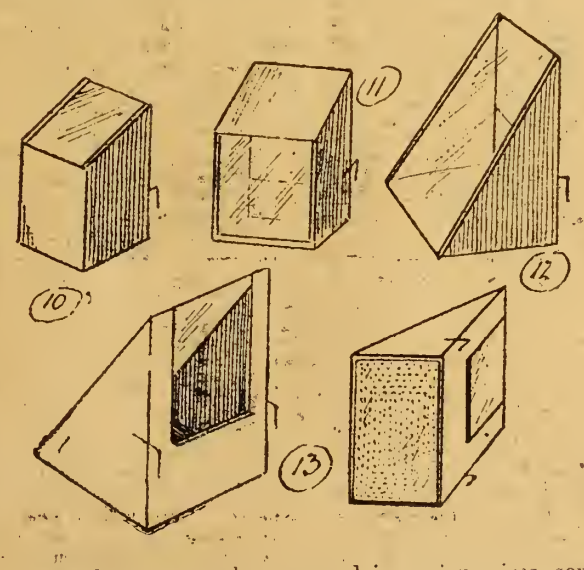
Of seed hoppers there are many kinds, some made of metal, others of wood and glass, each admirable, and generally well made. The oldest of these is the wood and glass as depicted in Fig. 10. Unfortunately the red mite sometimes take a fancy to it, and use it as a breeding home, so of late years various patterns of metal feeders have come into use.

Fig. 11 shows one with a glass front, so that one can see at a glance how much seed the hoppers contain. Fig 12 is another pattern somewhat more simple in construction; the glass front slides up to allow of getting at the interior for cleaning purposes.



These hoppers can be procured in various sizes, some of them long enough to be used for two cages or compartments. This saves time when attending to the birds. Admirable as all these are they are not quite perfect, the great fault in them is the waste of seed that constantly goes on, and at the present price of canary seed this is a big consideration.

Fig. 13 shows a hopper that meets this want, but is not obtainable from any maker that I know of, unless one asks specially for it, and sends a description or drawing. It will be seen that it is constructed with an extra piece of material up each side of the opening, this prevents the seed being thrown out at the sides, and a small "lip" in front also stops it from getting between the hopper and cage front. The bottom is a piece of perforated zinc, and allows the dust from the seed to fall through. The front is glass and slides out in the same manner as in Fig. 12.

For the large flights and aviaries we require something upon a rather larger scale—birds in flights should never be short of seed. There is the self-filling hopper which can be bought at most bird shops, it is constructed on the following principle:—As the seed is taken away from the bottom, other grains fall from the top, and take its place so that the birds have always seed in front of them, while there is any to fall down. The condition of the hopper is seen at a glance through the glass front. Fig. 14 shows the hopper, with a sectional view depicting the principle upon which it acts. These can be either made by the fancier or purchased in different sizes.

A GROUP OF BEAUTIES FROM FOREIGN CLIMES.

TRY to imagine a feathered Sprite, less than five inches in length, with a crown of apple-green; cheeks, back, wings and tail of turquoise-blue; throat and underparts of clear lemon-yellow, with a band of delicate orange across the breast! His mate, who follows him so faithfully and listens to his pitiful song so admiringly, has the greens and yellows in softened, indistinct hues. Altogether they are charming little birds, living in a region where their beauty falls only upon the unappreciative eyes of Vultures and Crows."

So far it has not proved so hardy as the better-known Nonpareil and Indigo Buntings, but would do well in a natural garden aviary during the summer, going into indoor quarters for the winter—doubtless it could be successfully wintered out of doors, providing the aviary had a snug shelter into which it could be driven and shut during winter's cold nights and any specially arctic period. It does well as a bachelor in a roomy cage on quite a simple menu; the following will be found to meet all its needs:—Canary, white millet, Indian millet, spray millet, and a pinch of some good "finch mixture" thrown on cage tray for them to pick over; green-food, a couple of mealworms daily, also spiders and smooth caterpillars, when obtainable. One is tempted to linger over personal experiences, but space forbids, and I have written sufficient—more would be wearisome.

The Long-Tailed or Giant Whydah (Chera procne).

Our last figure is a bird of another type, and the only African species on the plate. It belongs to the huge Weaver group, which indulge in a specially gorgeous garment for the breeding season, being somewhat commonplace in appearance during the winter months, when they are spoken of as being out of colour. My notes of this species need not be lengthy, as though not common, it is pretty well known, and its requirements fairly well understood; moreover, Mr. Goodchild's fine drawing skilfully portrays all the details of its nuptial or breeding plumage. I need merely remark that the long tail plumes, only worn during the breeding season, vary from 16 to 18 ins. in length. In winter, when out of colour, the male resembles the hen, a streaked brown bird, somewhat about the same size, and also pattern of plumage, as the English Corn Bunting. It does well in a cage, but it must be a large one when the bird is wearing its long tail-plumes, and the menu is a very simple one, as they touch little but canary and white millet, or visit a millet-spray; they take a little green-food, and are usually very fond of mealworms, of which they may have several per diem; mealworms may be given more liberally during the moult and when they are donning breeding plumage.

Though Whydahs are hardy birds, I have found it better to bring them indoors when our worst winter weather begins, for they usually moult during this period, and if not thoroughly fit in every way (few birds are at moulting time), there is a risk of them going under. Mr. W. E. Teschemaker has successfully bred this species in his Teignmouth aviaries, and Mrs. Anningson has bred the Pin-tailed and Red-collared Whydahs in her Cambridge aviaries. They are very obstreperous birds when in full colour, but usually do no more than disturb; however, to turn a Whydah in full dress into a mixed aviary is to create a wild panic, which does not soon pass away either; therefore, it is best to leave them to assume their nuptial dress in the aviary, and the birds thus gradually become accustomed to it.

In a state of nature these birds frequent marshy ground, or the near vicinity of water, where reeds are abundant, and build a nest in the grass or reeds near the ground. Travelling naturalists report them as roosting together in the reedy morasses in huge numbers, and that the females usually outnumber the males ten to one. Now my task is finished, and I trust these rough notes may interest and prove of some little practical help to some of my readers.

Special Canary Breeders No. NEXT WEEK

A Noted Fancier of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries Interviewed.

Mr. J. C. Barnes, of Sheffield, the well-known judge, breeder, and exhibitor tells of his method and management.

WHEN it is a question of amusing oneself Sheffield is about the poorest imitation of Paris one might come across in a wide experience. But if it cannot claim to be a gilded city of pleasure it is not without a certain attractiveness for bird-lovers. The cutlery capital prides itself on the great number of bird-breeders in its midst. It is proud of the splendid annual show, and of its fine feathered gems which never fail at the various members' functions. Many "toppers" have first seen the light of day in its neighbourhood, and we can only hope that there are others yet to come. But the "soupy" atmosphere of "Steelopolis" fed liberally by the many factory chimneys induced the writer to leave its murky precinct for an outlying district where the air was more respirable.

Mr. J. C. Barnes was the fancier I proposed to track down. This gentleman is not only well-known as a popular and versatile judge, but also as a most successful breeder and exhibitor of Norwich and Yorkshires. I had the good fortune to find Mr. Barnes at home when I knocked at the door of his house at Walkley—a breezy district reached by a short tram-ride from the city.

He greeted me in a most fancier-like spirit, and after showing me his imposing collection of plate and other trophies, gained at one time or another at shows all over the country, led the way to the bird-room. On entering a truly fine sight presented itself. What a spectacle to be sure! one I shall remember for many a day to come. I was quite prepared, knowing the success Mr. Barnes has everywhere met with, to see a fine stock of the "chubby" and "lengthy" ones, but it would be heavily on my conscience if I failed to record the wonder with which I looked upon so many beautiful creatures. Such marvellous symmetry, such delightful feather, and colour, combined with abundant substance, surpassed my most sanguine expectations. It was truly a noble collection.

In the Bird-room.

The word "unique" would hardly be out of place in describing the bird-room. It is about 20 feet long by 14 wide, and has a large window facing south-east, and is thoroughly up-to-date as regards ventilation. The floor is covered with green oilcloth, and upon the walls, distempered salmon-pink, I noticed a number of Cage Birds' plates.

The cages are excellent—60 single-breeders of uniform size, viz., 21½ x 16½ x 11ins. They are enamelled a bluish-green inside, the outside being decorated imitation walnut. Along with these there are 16 very large flights, with green interiors and stained mahogany outside. These are capable of accommodating some 30 birds each, still leaving ample room. There are plenty of bath and nursery cages, and many other accessories pertaining to bird culture are ready for use.

The Norwich Plainheads.

Now to the birds. Let us take the Norwich Plainheads first. One is almost at a loss to describe adequately so superb a stud. Men have various ambitions. Some are satisfied with moderate attainments. Not so Mr. Barnes—nothing but the highest and best is good enough for him. The result is that his stock fills with admiration the most exacting critic. The cocks were in every way a magnificent collection. Massive build, exquisite shape and carriage, fine depth, and bright colour—all these proclaimed them to be in the best possible form. Not a bird did I see that was not in the pink of condition. No one need wonder that with so much good blood to experiment with Mr. Barnes is able to produce the right stuff.

Most of the large flight cages housed the hens. In one cage I noticed twelve of the grandest yellows (mostly clear) that it was ever my privilege to see. They were an illustrious body of beauties and no mistake. In another cage were thirteen unflighted hens, yellows and buffs, of a loveliness that was fascinating. Moving towards a further cage I saw twelve elegant buff hens. There was not a mediocre specimen among them. A matter of ten variegated yellows and buffs tenanted another compartment—all good—as exquisite as were their neighbours, some greens.

Replying to my various comments, Mr. Barnes dwelt very strongly upon one point, i.e., that good hens are essential—far more important than the cocks for the production of good progeny. Of course if one has the advantage of possessing good cocks—so much the better.

The Yorkshires.

It was not without some reluctance that I moved away from the Norwich Plainheads and turned my attention to the Yorkshires. Among them I observed some of rare length (more than seven inches) and possessing clinking position. They were feathered as though chiselled out of marble. Rich colour, sweet heads and expression, well-filled necks, tapering wedge-shaped bodies, grand backs without hollowness, delightful carriage of flights and tails, solid fronts without frills, long legs showing plenty of daylight between them—these were the points which distinguished Mr. Barnes' Yorkshires. They were a sight to see—a truly choice lot.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

For Rules see last week's issue.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SITS MOPING (R. H.).—The bird is suffering from digestive derangement. Treat as follows for three or four weeks, if necessary, until it resumes its normal appetite. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape in the seed-box. In addition give separately a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and also a pinch of maw seed every second day. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle seed. Give a small spray of watercress, if available, four times a week. Limit the diet to this for the time being. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another fortnight.

FIVE IN ONE (E. B.).—(1) The bird has probably had its foot caught and held fast temporarily by some object, and caused a little strain in struggling to free itself. Do not attempt any interference, but keep bird as quiet and restful as possible until it resumes the normal use of its foot. Keep an eye upon the foot to see if the toes show signs of curling underneath, and if they do, write again and describe just how they are. (2) With a bird in normal health, and liberty to fly about a room, there is no harm whatever in allowing it to bathe daily if it desires to do so. (3) Depends upon what the tit-bits consist of. Flesh, fat, dripping, gravies, rich, spicy, sweet or fat cakes or biscuits, etc., are much better avoided. Green salads, sweet fruits, plain biscuits, egg, sponge cake, bread and milk, raw or boiled carrot, or other vegetables may be given in limited quantities, and rather more freely, to a bird with liberty to fly about room than to one more closely caged. (4) Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple, and in addition a little of one or other of above safe tit-bits as may be seasonable. A little mixed seed, such as you buy in packets, may be given once or twice a week as a change. (5) The slight looseness is of no importance. Should it become unduly loose give half a teaspoonful of good, sound hemp daily for a few days.

INJURED LEG (A. W. G.). If not actually broken it is most likely the leg has been badly strained, probably through the bird getting the foot temporarily fast around the wires or a perch. In any case bathing will do no good, and it is much better to avoid all handling or manipulative treatment. See if the claws are overgrown, and if they are trim them back to a proper length. Then keep the bird caged alone for a few weeks, and see that cage is fitted with nice soft wood perches of a proper size and shape for bird to grip easily; that they are placed quite conveniently, and firmly fixed so as not to wobble about when bird moves on them. Having done this, keep bird in a quiet place and disturb it as little as possible until it begins to use the leg again voluntarily.

BARE PATCHES (X Rays).—You should certainly remove these birds and the cage they occupy from your birdroom. Keep them in a bright and healthy place. Examine birds closely for the presence of grey lice. Whether the latter pest is present or not handwash the birds twice, with an interval of a week between, and in the first two waters used mix a little creolin, obtainable from most chemists, in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of water. Whilst the birds are drying, thoroughly wash out the cage with a solution of creolin twice the above strength. When birds are dry, slightly moisten the bare places with sanocyllin, and apply it close up to margins of bare spot, but do not daub plumage unnecessarily.

HEN ALWAYS SOFT (H.M.T.).—Limit the diet solely for a fortnight to canary seed, with a good sized spray of watercress, or two crisp dandelion leaves daily. During the first week add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day. For the next fortnight afterwards give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. If this does not cure, write again and refer to this reply.

IS HE TOO OLD? (A. M. F., Novice).—(1) No, the Norwich cock which is in good health and vigorous song is not too old to mate at eight years old. Many birds older than this breed very successfully. Health and condition are of more importance than mere age, and your bird seems to be all right in this respect. (2) As regards the waste of seed, this may be due to the growing excitement of the approaching spring, or to slight digestive trouble, assuming, of course, that your seeds are of good sound quality, and sweet. Try giving a morsel of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a week. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and each day two crisp young dandelion leaves.

MOVING STOCK DURING BREEDING SEASON (Nemo).—As you appear to be quite certain that the necessity to move your stock to the outdoor room will come about early in the season, I would advise you, if at all possible, to prepare the new room and move the stock when you are about mating them up for the first round, even if it is not quite compulsory to move them just at that time. By doing this you might save yourself much worry and anxiety, and the birds should do very well indeed if moved during a spell of mild weather at the end of this month or early in April, which is quite early enough to start breeding. If you wait until you are compelled to move them, there is no reason why it should put them off breeding at all. Cover over the cages when the birds have settled down to roost, and quietly transfer them to their new quarters, removing the covers an hour or two later. If the birds are in good breeding condition, and the hens good feeders, they will resume their duties, at whatever stage they may be, at sunrise next morning.

BARE HEAD AND NECK (Mrs. L. Mills).—These cases are often most persistent, and difficult to cure, but there is no reason why the hen should not breed successfully, beyond, of course, the risk there may be of perpetuating the trouble in the progeny. Many of these hens breed well and make excellent parents so far as performance of duties goes. You might try the following treatment for a month, but stop it before mating the bird, in case you do mate her. In addition to the staple seed diet give a little egg-food slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days dissolve as much chlorate of potash as will cover a three-penny-piece in the water. Give a little green-food four times a week, and a pinch of mixed seed twice a week. Stop all other items you have been giving. Slightly moisten the bare skin twice a week with sulphur ointment, but avoid unnecessarily daubing the plumage.

STILL SQUEAKS (Idwal).—(1) I take it you have done all you can to remove the exciting causes of this condition, as mentioned in last reply. Continue the same method of feeding for a few weeks. Add twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water daily for three days, and after this substitute five drops each of glycerine, oxymel of squills, and syrup of tolu every second day for a fortnight. A mealworm a day, if available, would do good. Unless the bird gets quite rid of this wheeziness I cannot advise you to breed with her at all. (2) This bird will doubtless soon become louder in song. You may give half a teaspoonful of egg food with half the quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure mixed in it every second day for a week or two. The only way by which you can hope to improve his song is to let him hear a good free singer for the next few weeks.

IN SOFT MOULT (A.T.).—I have not a copy of "Our Canaries" handy at the moment, but I think you would certainly find full details of treatment for this trouble therein. See that the bird is quite free from cold draughts and damp. In addition to seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three until the feathers cease dropping.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

WHAT SEED? (G. Dove).—I am not particularly well up in dried seeds, but the sample sent appears to me very much like the seeds of the corn marigold, a daisy-like plant growing among the crops, particularly on chalky soil. Nearly all our captive birds will eat it.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (Broadrake).—I would advise you to turn in any of the British Finches and Buntings all cock birds, or in pairs, and if the latter only one pair of each, as accidents sometimes cause odd birds, and these quite upset the harmony of the aviary. If you would like to have a few Foreign birds, try some of the Waxbills, Avadavats, Orange-cheeks, St. Helenas, Cordon Bleus. I have lost the dimensions of your aviary, but as a general rule a bird to every two feet of ground space is not overcrowding.

WHITE BLACKBIRDS (Robert Mills).—White Blackbirds are not at all uncommon, and are frequently exhibited at our leading shows. The light plumage is caused through lack of colouring pigment in the blood. (2) They are bred in a wild state in this country.

GREENFINCH HYBRIDS (Chag).—Yes, remove the eggs as laid until the hen has laid three and commenced to sit, when replace them. (2) Colour-feed the young hybrids in the same manner as Canaries; particulars are printed upon the tin containing the colour-food. Commence to give it some time before the moult. (3) You can please yourself about colour feeding your Greenfinch. I do not think it improves him myself; but then tastes differ. If you do colour-feed, do not give much.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (B. K.).—I would not advise you to put the Robin into your aviary with the other birds. Why not add some hen Canaries, and another cock bird or two, say Siskin and Redpoll; you would then be almost certain to produce something. They all make good singers, and are saleable, and there is the possibility that you might produce a good show specimen.

GREENFINCH AND BRAMBLE (R. Boyce).—Give your Greenfinch plenty of young dandelion leaves and the seed pods as they ripen. Can he exercise and bathe? (2) You must have patience in steadying your Bramble; continue to do as advised. If you feel you cannot be troubled, you had better give him his liberty.

GOLDFINCH-CANARY (Hardbill).—Yes, you can put your Goldie with the Roller if you only want to breed singers, as the young birds will probably be too small for exhibition purposes. You had better not put them together until the Goldfinch is quite fit. That is, singing to the hen, and his beak quite clear. The hen should be bouncing about the cage from perch to perch, and in fact ready to nest. Tie a piece of string on the wire front when the Finch is ready; if the hen is also, she will tug at the string and want to build with it. You could then draw the slide of the cage and let them run together, giving nest box and building materials. They need not remain together many days, and during that time you must feed the Goldie in the usual manner. The hen will, of course, eat some of the seed, but that you cannot prevent. It will be a bit stimulating, but that will not matter just then. Put her on her usual diet when you take him away.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (Crabshaw).—Full grown mealworms turn into small beetles; these lay eggs which in time hatch out into mealworms. If you breed more than you need, you can always sell them. There is a steady demand for them among the Softbill fanciers. They are bred in boxes with layers of sacking, brown paper, meat, crushed oats and bran, the sacking and paper are sprinkled with beer, and some of it slightly saturated with treacle. A pint of worms are then tipped in and placed in a warm corner until they have gone through the cycle of reproduction.

FEEDING WAXWING (A Novice).—The food you are offering your Waxwing is hardly suitable as a staple food, but will do nicely for a change. Procure some brand of well-known insectile mixture, damp it with a little scraped raw carrot or boiled potato. Occasionally add a little chopped hard-boiled egg or a spoonful of preserved egg flake. A little chopped lettuce or watercress will sometimes make a change in the mixture. He will eat plenty of fruit, bananas, sweet orange, apple, chopped figs, dates, etc. Be careful that he does not get too fat and keep perfectly clean; let him have a big cage and a bath frequently. Mix the currants and raisins in with the soft food. He will eat it in time, when he gets the taste. The flights will be richer as the bird comes into condition; you could improve them by giving a little colour food at the next moult.

HYBRID MATTERS (J. W.).—Your suggestion re live food is quite the correct thing, nothing better than green fly and live ants' eggs, given as they are, the squeezed mealworm makes a good substitute to which you should not object if you aspire to rear Hybrids. Very young Hybrids are not so easily fed by the Canaries, they require careful watching without interference to see how they are progressing, if badly, transfer to other hens, or assist by hand feeding. Yes! your Siskin will probably breed, if healthy and in full song, the best sign of vigour.

THRUSH ILL (J. W. P.).—You have omitted to send your name and address, as per rules. Will you please do so on a postcard. The cause of the trouble with your bird is in the feeding. The food you are giving is all very well for a change, but hardly good enough as staple food. You will find best quality chicken meal or crushed puppy biscuit better. Take sufficient for the day and add a spoonful of meat meal, soak in hot water, and give when cold. Procure some high-class insectile food and mix with scraped raw carrot; let him have this three times a week. Give him an aperient once a week until better. Dissolve as much glauber salts as will cover a shilling in his drinking water, and give early in the morning, removing at night. Let him bathe frequently. Our Nutshell Booklet No. 4 on the Thrush would tell you how to keep him in song.

BIRDS IN AVIARY (F. R. B.).—I certainly think you have been too venturesome in putting your birds outside so early. The first week in April would be quite soon enough. I would advise you to catch up the hens and keep them inside, or you will very likely lose some of them either from egg-binding or other causes. We are having good weather now, but we may get something quite different before the month is out. You appear to me to have an excess of cock birds. You will find the half-dozen Linnets practically useless; a single bird would be much more likely to fertilise eggs, and then probably with only a single hen. Cannot you take out the other cock Linnets and introduce a Siskin-Greenfinch or Redpoll, and remove them for your second round, as you suggest, as by that time all your Goldies may be particularly "rank," and when in that condition would probably fertilise plenty of eggs for you. A good Goldie will pair with several hens. Your idea about the Bullfinch hen is a good one.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (Goldfinch-Redpoll).—Yours is a large aviary to be devoted to Hybrid breeding, and unfortunately the size of the place does not always assure one of success; in fact there are more good Hybrids bred in cages and large flights than in aviaries. If your Goldfinch and the two hens were the only inmates it is quite possible that he would put both of them to nest. I think you will do well to procure a hen Bullfinch, and then put in a cock Greenfinch and a cock Linnet. You have room for several more pairs, but I hardly see how you are going to make them up; the difficulty is that if you have two cocks of the same species (say Linnets, as an instance), they fuss about after each other and neglect the hens. You could turn in a couple of Norwich Canaries if you like with a view to breeding dark Canary Hybrids.

BULLFINCH MOPY (R. S.). No matter how well you treat your birds, you are bound to have an individual among them that is difficult to manage and maintain in the pink of condition, and the Bullfinch is not the easiest bird in the world to do for. I fear all your trouble is caused through an indifferent moult, but if you can manage him well during the coming summer, he should regain his health, pass through his next moult, and be a fairly robust bird. Your management should consist of a roomy flight, frequent bathing, and wild seeds ad lib. Now as regard seeds, you give me no proportions, but I presume they are as frequently advised to readers. You appear to be rather shy of sunflower, which I have found to be almost the most useful seed for the Bullfinch; I would advise you to increase it, especially as you will be giving him plenty of green food. As regards the latter, you can now collect plenty of fresh young dandelion leaves, and a little later on the seed pods, of these you cannot give him too many; and then there is chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, and a host of other good things coming on. If you can manage to get hold of the cuttings of gooseberry, currant, or any other fruit trees, he will relish the buds. You say he will not bathe properly. Take away his drinking water and hang in the bath and let him drink from it, then some sunny morning put a known bather in the cage with him, he will no doubt follow the good example set him by the other bird. A course of Chemical Food would be beneficial to him now. Give a small teaspoonful in the usual drinker. Boil the water first.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S

YELLOW BUDGERIGAR (Crawford).—I must assume that the bird has been kept in a cage, as lack of flight exercise often brings on a similar state of affairs. Give two drops of castor oil direct to the beak on receipt of this reply and repeat this as often as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely without being watery-loose. Keep the bird in a warm place, lying on hay or peat moss litter, till it regains the use of its legs, and bathe these in hot water (not hot enough for discomfort); dry with a soft cloth and paint with neat whisky daily while the trouble lasts. Keep the food vessels on the ground alongside it; it must have access to grit and cuttlebone. Supply the usual seeds, and, if it will take it, let it have a little sponge while ill. Give it two drops of cod liver oil once or twice daily till it is on its legs again, and put half a teaspoonful of sprup of phosphates into the drinking water daily. If you keep a millet spray lying on the cage bottom by it, it will be able to get easily at it. Report progress about a fortnight hence, but if it is really paralysis, I fear any improvement will be but temporary.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (S. R.).—I think you might stop the syrup of buckthorn now and give it one drop of tincture of opium direct to the beak daily for three days, and then after another three days repeat if necessary. The stimulant in drinking water is quite in order. I should keep the bird warm for a time, but the heat should be as regular as possible day and night. Give it two drops of cod liver oil daily, for a fortnight at least, and in the meantime supply the ordinary diet, with the addition of a little sponge, if it will eat the latter. I should give the bird room a sweep up and wash over with a carbolic acid solution, and the cage the bird occupied with others should be thoroughly scalded out in every part and washed over with carbolic solution, and then given 24 hours at least in the open air, then when dry it can be used again. You may have revived the ailing bird in time, but if any of the others show signs of sickness promptly put in sick quarters and treat as above. As regards the ailing bird, it would be well to remove voidings at once and burn. Should be pleased to hear how bird progresses.

CONSERVATORY AVIARY (W. G., Watford).—I should make the aviary the full length and the full height, with the exception that the aviary should have a wooden top and be six inches below the glass roof of conservatory. It will be better if you can let base overhang the stage three inches and thus give you a floor space two feet wide. You will have to cover all glass in the aviary on the inside with wire netting (half-inch mesh). The whole front should be wire netting, but it would be better to cover the back (conservatory glass) with wood, say, three boards down from the top. It will most certainly be best to put an outside extension, but the extension should go down to the ground outside and reach to the same height as the inside enclosure. You will have to reach a conclusion as to what kind you will keep—in such a narrow aviary you must not keep Budgerigars, Lovebirds and Finches together, and you must not overcrowd for breeding. Here are two selections. You cannot mix them; you must choose one or the other:—(1) Pairs each of Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar and Black-cheek Lovebirds, and a cock Red-crested Cardinal. (2) Zebra Finches, Cutturoats, Silverbills, Bib Finches, Avadavats, Gold-breasted Waxbills, and Alario Finches. For No. 1 you would have to supply hucks and small barrels for nest receptacles; and for No. 2 rush nests and small boxes.

BUDGERIGARS (G. R. Cooper).—I gather you have not kept these birds before; if not, then get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free from our manager. It will give you all details. All the items of diet you name are correct, but you must also supply grit and groenfood (lettuce and sweet apple now; flowering and seeding grass later), and, of course, water. Give them a large cage, and they should do well, but they would be better in a sitting-room than the kitchen, as in the latter the temperature is usually very variable. Make their drinking water just saline with Epsom salts for one day, and repeat same once a week till they are toned up a little. It will also be well to put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water every other day, but not at the same time as the salts. Madagascar Lovebirds and Budgerigars will agree together if the cage is large enough, but you must not mix the above with Finches in a cage. The Budgies and Lovebirds are more mischievous than malicious, but usually maltreat the Finches when confined with them in a circumscribed area.

LEMON-CRESTED COCKATOO (B. H.).—The first moult in this country is usually a very protracted one, and after it has once thoroughly moulted out things may become normal. If it will eat boiled maize, give it about one tablespoonful daily. It only keeps fresh one day—boil till soft, but grains should be whole. Drain off all water and then dust with flowers of sulphur. Keep the bowels moving freely, not watery-loose, by giving an aperient as required (one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water is best), and on other days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water for a month at least. In addition to the regular seed mixture, supply such ripe fruit as it will eat, nuts, pieces of biscuit, plain cake, dry crusts, and keep grit and cuttlebone continually in the cage, also wood for it to cut up. The latter finds it occupation, and it also helps to keep its beak in order.

FOR OUTDOOR AVIARY (Inquisitive).—(1) The two best ramblers for the purpose are Hiawatha (crimson with white centre—single flower), Dorothy Perkins (double pink), and the White Dorothy—all are strong growers, floriferous, and highly decorative. Honeysuckle, hops, and wild clematis are also all good. (2) Cockatiels and all other Parrakeets, when confined in an aviary, will mischievously cut to pieces (strip off leaves) every tree and bush in their enclosure; only ground herbage (grass, cereals, etc.) is allowed to live. (3) Yes, the birds will use them providing they are tall and bushy enough to provide cover for them; put in bushes 5ft. high, such as privet, cupressus, fir, euonymus, box, elder, etc. (4) Yes, over a score of Red-headed Finch and Cutthroat hybrids were reared in English aviaries last year, (5) The Red-head is very variable in different aviaries, ready enough to go to nest, but bad incubators, and only a small proportion of eggs laid are hatched out and young reared; when they hatch out supply them freely with live food—gentles, live ants' eggs, mealworms, beetles, spiders, caterpillars, etc.—and you will have a fair chance. In some aviaries, by the vagaries of luck, they have done well. It is the unexpected that happens mostly.

WHAT PARROT? (Barridge).—It is a Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo; the price varies according to number on sale, about 7s. 6d. upwards.

RIBBON FINCHES, ETC. (P. H. C.). (1) Yes, but it is not much favoured by the foreign Finches. Indian (French) millet and spray millet is a more agreeable variety for them. You can supply red millet, but only use it in a proportion of 1 in 20. (2) The cage is very narrow and you must not keep many in it if you want any to breed. Perhaps the best course would be to put in six pairs of small birds and leave nesting results to chance. Zebra Finches, Cordon Bleus, Avadavats, Gold-breasted Waxbills, Firefinches, and Bib Finches would be a pleasing variety, both as to colour and demeanour. Enamel the interior of the cage pale sea green; then cover the back with fine birch (or similar) twigs. Hang up on the back of cage, behind the twigs, about a dozen small rush nests. When stocking your cage with birds, it should be kept in some quite warm room till the birds have become established, after which no special heat is required. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d., and Nutshells, "Avadavats" and "Waxbills," 2½d. each, all post free from our manager, would assist you and give you full directions as to treatment, etc.

GREEN PARROT (F. R. H.).—When a bird begins to get thin there is generally something seriously wrong with it, but you give me no details as to how you have been keeping it, etc., and it is almost impossible for me to assist you without. You had better repeat query with full details so soon as you see this reply, and in the meantime give the bird three drops of castor oil direct to the beak from the end of a quill, so as to move the bowels freely; one dose should suffice. Give four drops of castor oil on a small piece of bread, biscuit, or sponge cake, according to the bird's taste two or three times a day. Put half a teaspoonful of the following mixture—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine—in the drinking water daily till you get the biter reply. You must not use a metal drinker when giving drugs.

AILING AMAZON (N. F. A.).—Before I can give a really satisfactory reply I must know how the bird has been fed and generally treated how long you have had it, etc. I can only say keep it warm, cover up the sides of its cage at night. Give four drops of castor oil on a small piece of bread, biscuit, or plain cake, according to the bird's taste; one dose should suffice. By the same means give four drops of cod liver oil twice daily. From the end of a small stick put a little honey and borax into its mouth twice daily, also ten drops of oxymel of squills into the drinking water, till you get further directions in response to your details. You must not use a metal drinker when giving drugs. Vide rules re replies by post.

WILL THEY LIVE OUTDOORS? (R. B. C.).—Yes, all you name will live out of doors all the year round, providing you do not live in the extreme North. You would, however, require quite a roomy aviary for them all to live together, and the Parrakeets you name would have to be in a separate aviary, and even then Parrakeets are not very amiable with each other at breeding time. Note.—If a pair of Turquoisines were to suddenly appear on the market they would be worth considerably more than their weight in gold; it has been some years since these have appeared, save a very occasional stray one. Foreign birds need more accommodation (room) than Canaries if you are to have breeding luck with them.

IS IT A TALKER? (Mr. Sherratt).—It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet, and most of these birds talk more or less; some become really talented. Get a bottle of Dinneford's Magnesia and some syrup of phosphates from your chemist, put one teaspoonful of the former into the drinking water once a week, and half a teaspoonful of the latter on other days. Get the following and mix them well together for your seed mixture: One quart each canary, white millet and oats; one pint each hemp, sunflower and dari; and half a pint of shelled pea nuts. Also supply any kind of ripe fruit it will eat; pieces of biscuit, plain cake and stale crusts. Cuttlebone, grit, and pieces of wood must be treated as part of the daily menu. Report progress in a month.

AFRICAN GREY (F. Baxton).—I should keep this bird in a warmish room for a time, and cover the sides of its cage up at night while the cold weather lasts. Get some glyco-thymoline; for use, dilute with an equal quantity of water, and bathe or spray the nostrils twice daily for a fortnight. Get the following mixture—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts; use half a teaspoonful of the mixture to a fluid ounce of water (sufficient for a day's supply) till the breathing becomes easier. Keep the bowels moving quite freely by giving an aperient as may be required, but the excreta should not be permitted to remain watery loose. Report progress in a fortnight, unless there should be unfavourable developments, in which case write again at once with full details.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Nemo.—The birds which were to be coloured by our readers in the painting competition were Norwich, Lizard, Yorkshire, and Crested Canaries.

F. A. Southerley.—Your letter is well meant, doubtless, but contains matter which in the present state of the law of libel it is not possible to publish.

Anxious.—To say that "Canaries breed consumption" is absolutely nonsense. As a matter-of-fact no case of consumption occurring in Canaries has ever been established. The proper keeping of birds entails no danger of any kind whatever to the health of human beings.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the fee will be the sender's.

"Concerned."—Canary was suffering from inflammation of the bowels.

W. H. Williams.—Bird died from rupture of a blood vessel on the brain, induced by a fit. It was a much too plethoric subject, full of fat, and in a condition conducive to arterial disease.

A Society for Altrincham.

Sir,—A preliminary meeting, of which notice was given in your columns, was held on February 16th, at 4, Shaws-road, Altrincham, and was well attended, about 30 bird fanciers being present. A discussion took place on the advisability of again forming a C.B.S., and good business was done. A further meeting was arranged. At this second meeting there was a good attendance, and all present were made members. Officers for the year were afterwards elected. The meeting was fortunate in having Mr. T. Harrison, the well-known fancier and judge, amongst those present, he being unanimously elected to the chair. Mr. A. Broadbent as treas., and Mr. C. Bailey as sec., were also elected. Before closing, a meeting was arranged for March 11 at 8, in the Rigby Memorial Schools, Navigation-road, Altrincham, to discuss general business, club rules, etc. Those who were notified and did not attend the second meeting, and any intending members, are heartily invited to be present.

A Hawfinch in a Class for Softbills.

Sir,—I thought it an understood thing now that a bird found to be in its wrong class should lose whatever prize it might have won. I know there is a rule to this effect at the Palace Show. Perhaps we are not yet sufficiently enlightened in Liverpool to follow such an excellent rule. I agree with Mr. Carlisle that it should have made no difference because the judge happened to have gone home. I think he has been badly treated if no notice has since been taken of the matter—he promptly drew the secretary's attention to the error.

Who Won the Shield of the Sheffield C.B.S.?

Sir,—Will Mr. Woolhouse, or some official of the above society, please say, through your valuable paper, who won the shield presented by Mr. Jones, the president, for most points gained in any sections at all the season shows, including all table shows, nest feather, open, and members' shows, as I see no mention of it in the report published Feb. 27th?

Jim.

The Need of the Novice.

Sir,—Please allow me to ask M. Rainford what a local secretary of a Cage Bird Society can do in helping the novices? Has a secretary to go to every fancier in his town or city and knock (or walk in), and say, "Hey, Bill, art thou a novice?" I am afraid he would soon be told to mind his own business, and, perhaps, something else if he was bigger than the secretary, or his wife a suffragette. The general cry of the novice is about professionals showing in novice classes, but this cry of Mr. R.'s is something quite new. As for the birds dying, surely it is not only novices that lose birds? An expert on birds informs fanciers in last week's Cage Birds of the death of his winning Bullfinch. Now, Mr. R., when next time you buy a bird from a distance use Cage Birds deposit system, and if you think it is not healthy return the bird, and the Editor will return your cash; a sure safeguard for a small fee. But some novices are never satisfied; they get a decent bird off a good strain, and if it is not a world beater—my word, the seller is in for a ragtime! Some won't be said, led, or driven, but sell their best birds just when they should be holding on to them. Again, if secretaries had to be their advisers, one would be saying to the other, "Hey, Jake, Secretary Smith is pulling Harry Jones's leg."

John O'Gaunt.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Rainford, my advice is for a novice to get a few pairs of surplus stock, and breed with them for a year or two, gaining experience as he goes along, not like a lot of novices, paying a big price for birds which he knows nothing about, and putting them on the show bench thinking of winning all before him. If he fails he is then selling out, and giving up disheartened, and he tells his friends that bird keeping is not a paying hobby. I have known novices pay from £1 to £3 for birds not worth 5s. each, all for the want of experience. I should say that if a novice gets two pairs at 7s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. a pair, this is quite enough. Also buy Cage Birds weekly (there is a lot to be learnt from it), and get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," then novices might sail on a little further without sinking.

A Recipe for Making Egg-bread.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. George Colwin and Mr. Boscawen, I have used this egg-food for years, rearing 32 youngsters from their eggs, Yorkshires and Rollers, last season, but the food must be used sparingly, and you can add colour food, or a little maw seed, or a few drops of Augier's Emulsion. To dry the egg-bread for keeping, after you have baked it in a moderate oven for three hours, cut it in four lumps or pieces; put a wire through each and hang it on a nail to dry for a week, then grate it on a sheet of paper. When it is grated it is nice to the taste, and smells sweet. The longest I have kept this bread is three years, and it was then still sweet. It will keep 12 hours after being moistened for the birds. I give all my birds this egg-food at least once a week. Being a cake and biscuit baker I know the value and keeping properties of this egg-bread. It has been a well kept secret of mine for years, for although I have made some up for one or two fanciers, this is the first time I have made the recipe known. I find my two Linnets, which I hope to Mule with, are very fond of this egg-bread. In 1911 I reared on this egg-bread a nest of young Dippers, which I found on the bank of a stream.

Thomas Chiswell.

Sir,—I would like to give my experience with egg cake, as "Boscawen" suggests. A year or two ago, in your paper, someone gave a recipe for making a cake with Indian meal, and it set me experimenting on my own. I first made one or two with pollard and Indian meal, mixed equal parts, 1½ cupfuls (breakfast-cup), 1 cupful of sugar, and a tablespoonful of honey, and two eggs. This did not bake very nicely. A good part of it would not crumble up. Anyhow, I fed my hen Canaries up with it, or as much of it as would break up, and it had no bad effects. The next one was made from oatmeal and Indian meal in equal parts, again with a spoonful of honey, about half-cupful of sugar, and two eggs. This made a much nicer cake, cleaner looking than the pollard. We had this one baked longer to make it hard, and my word it was hard; we had to break it with a rolling-pin, and then roll it to crumbs. With this one I have fed young birds; it was mixed with the usual hard-boiled egg, in place of bread or biscuit, and damped with milk, if too dry. I fed them altogether on the cake, well softened with milk, after they were a week old. The Indian meal alone (made as No. 2) makes a nice light, crumbly cake, but I thought was not nourishing enough for young birds; it suits the old birds all right, in small quantities, same as egg-food, or as a medium for colour food. The trouble with these cakes is to get them the proper consistency, so that they will crumble easily, like sponge-cake, or bread. They are always either too solid or too sticky. Perhaps some baker or confectioner would tell us how to remedy that. My wife was about tired of wasting good stuff, at times, making these for me. I would not be in the least afraid to use a cake made anywhere like bread, light and easy to crumble. I think the best cake will be made from oatmeal, and wholemeal, eggs, honey, and milk, quantities to suit, which I am going to try this coming season, and hope someone more able will find the true quantities to make an excellent cake. I can assure anyone it will be both safer and more economical than the ordinary egg-food. Both grains are natural foods for birds, so why not find ways to use them?

Ragtime.

Everbody's Satisfied.

Sir,—In my letter, "Our Busy Season is at Hand," a week ago, I advised fanciers who had any surplus stock to dispose of to insert a small advt. in our valuable paper, Cage Birds, and it would do the needful. In the same issue I had a "small," and the advice I gave "came home," or, to be correct, the money asked "came home." The bird has been disposed of; the buyer has written saying he is satisfied; I am writing to let you know I am satisfied; on receipt of this card you will be satisfied; future advertisers will be satisfied; in brief, everybody will be satisfied. And being in this happy frame of mind, we can look forward to the coming breeding season with satisfaction and with hope.

The Status of the Novice Exhibitor.

A Novel Scheme Proposed by The Crested Canary Club.

Sir, For some time it has been felt that the generally accepted definition of the status of a novice has been seriously prejudicial to the progress of the Crested Canary Club, and I am requested to publish what is believed to be a much more reasonable definition, and to solicit the co-operation of all specialist clubs seriously to consider the advisability of adopting the new suggestion. It was the idea of my select committee, which met last Tuesday that, in the absence of any governing body, the respective specialist clubs combine and depute, say, two from every club, to meet and discuss any items of general interest to the Fancy. That a governing body is necessary is certain, but as to its constitution opinions may be divided; anyway, it seems to me that the specialist clubs are the proper persons to act, as under such an arrangement no variety would receive greater consideration than another. The following is the new suggested definition of a novice, viz.:—

1. That a novice shall exhibit in this section for a period of three years.

2. Any member at the end of three years whose birds, in his opinion, are not of sufficient merit to compete in champion classes may apply for an extended period in the novice section.

3. Any member having competed unsuccessfully in the champion section may apply to the C.C.C. for re-admission to the novice section. The only exception to this rule shall be where a member's birds are obviously of sufficient merit to compete in open competition, in which instance any novice member may appeal to the committee of the C.C.C. to have such member promoted to the champion section.

On the question of revising the counting of points, as suggested by Mr. G. C. Ley, the select committee, after considerable deliberation, decided to suggest the following for confirmation by the general committee, viz., That specials, value 42s., 21s., 15s., and 10s. be offered for those making most entries and scoring the least number of points. No member eligible to compete unless he exhibits at least at four patronised shows.

The following specials are also suggested: That specials, value £3, 30s., 20s., and 10s. be given for most points throughout the show season, and no member can win the £3 oftener than once in three years. The following is suggested for novice competition only: That a special, value 10s. 6d., be offered for most points scored at each supported show, and that no member win more than one during the season, and that there must be not less than three competitors for any special to be awarded.

It was decided that the draw specials be abandoned, the feeling being that they had not proved to be of any advantage. In view of the fact that all specials are offered solely with the idea of increasing entries at all supported shows, it has been decided to abandon the insurance scheme. Before these items are submitted for the confirmation of the general committee, I shall be very pleased to have the opinion of any existing or prospective member, or, as a matter of fact, any suggestions which might have a more advantageous effect than the foregoing.

The Value of Milk Powder.

Sir,—If you want to do amateurs and readers of Cage Birds a really good turn, recommend the use of dried milk in powder form, mixed with the ordinary egg and biscuit-food. I have received a number of good tips from Cage Birds, and out of sheer gratitude tell you the above. I reared a grand collection of Norwich last year, not losing even one, and all as strong and healthy as possible. In fact, the results are marvellous. I got the idea from continually seeing bread and milk recommended in your paper, as a panacea almost in all cases for sick birds. I am so well pleased at the result of my season's experience that I give you the information freely for the benefit of your numerous clientele, and I venture to say that no one using dried milk will have cause to regret it, and you will have given an invaluable tip to those who cannot afford fancy prices for patent foods. Dried milk can be bought at most chemists in tins at about 9d. a pound.

The Border Fancy C.C. and Rung Birds.

Sir,—I noticed in reading the report of the annual general meeting that a resolution was passed to the effect that "any member exhibiting birds wearing rings should be disqualified." In view of this, and in the interest of fanciers, I should like to submit the following question:—If a society should have the patronage of the above club, and also of the Green Canary Association, what would be my position, if as a member of both societies I exhibited birds wearing rings in the Green classes? To my mind I consider that the mark has been over-stepped in making such a drastic rule. I think, personally, that it should be left to the discretion of the breeder as to whether or not he rings his birds. Again, I contend that a vital matter like this should be submitted to each individual member before anything decisive is arrived at. I feel confident that out of the 300 or more members at present on the books, there would not be one-third who would have any say in the matter, as it is not a question for one or two, but for the club generally. I think that a ballot should have been taken, and the views of members who could not attend the general meeting properly ascertained, before making a final decision. I would also like to ask those who are opposed to rung birds competing, what their objections are? Members who had the opportunity of attending the general meeting will perhaps give the less fortunate their opinions. I think it would be appreciated by many.

Anxious.

Early Youngsters.

Sir,—In a holly bush in a cemetery just outside London I found, on February 22, a nest of young Thrushes. The birds were then some four or five days old. I am requested not to name the place, as the church authorities are very anxious that the young birds should not be interfered with by the boys of the neighbourhood.

A Constant Reader.

The West of Fife C.B. League.

Sir,—I was greatly surprised to read the letter under the heading of "West Fife C.B. League," and I must congratulate my friend Mr. Cordery for introducing me to the Fancy in this piquant and breezy fashion. The meeting in question was, I believe, held under the auspices of the West Fife C.B.L. Unfortunately I was not present; I am indebted to the assist. secretary, therefore, for anything which was reported. Since appending my name to the said report I have found out that Mr. Cordery was present. The general idea, I am led to believe, was to impress upon the Fancy the fact that Lochgelly had really come out on top for the season, and been proclaimed cup winners. Our Kelty friends, however, headed by Mr. Cordery, can only have taken offence on the score that we might apparently be trying to earn for Lochgelly a little publicity. Although the meeting was rated as an annual general meeting, in the true sense it was little more than a social for the purpose of handing over cup, trophies, etc. Lochgelly had a clear 50 per cent. majority over any other districts represented, and were entitled to the bulk of the benefit or honours in the report. I, of course, signed this in an entirely official capacity, which was seen by my affixing "Sec., Lochgelly C.B.S.," to signature. Readers will note that I say Kelty friends in real earnest; Mr. Cordery in endeavouring to hold me up to the public as little better than an impostor, has shown his hand clearly.

Sec., Lochgelly C.B.S.

Young in Plenty Every Time.

Sir,—I wish your grand paper, Cage Birds, the best of luck, as mine has been in the three years in which I have been in the hobby. The first year I had one Linnet and two hen Canaries, and bred fifteen Mules. The second year, from the same birds, I bred thirteen Mules, and also had one Goldfinch up, from which I had four Mules, all cocks. The Goldie was a greypate (young one), and I only had one nest from him. This year I have made a good start. I bought a pair of Rollers. They were kept in my kitchen, and got forward in condition, and paired up. On February 16 six eggs hatched, and I had five young. All my success has come from studying your valuable paper, Cage Birds.

A Splendid Move by the Bedford United C.B.S.

A LEAD OTHER SOCIETIES MIGHT FOLLOW.

Sir, You will see by the enclosed hand bill (of which we have 2,000 being circulated to birdkeepers in Bedford) that since the amalgamation we are getting busy, and starting to do some good work. I trust you will find space to print this in your valuable paper, which all our fanciers read, and I hope that other societies will take a lead from this, so that any bird that is subjected to bad management through its owner's ignorance may be relieved. It is the keepers of single birds that are usually the transgressors. The back of the handbill has advertisements on it, and these can be made to cover the cost of printing, etc.

A FEW "DONT'S" FOR BIRD-KEEPERS.
(Approved and authorised by the Committee.)

Don't expose your bird to a draught such as in a window, foul air high in the room, or too much heat.

Don't have your perch's too small for the bird's feet, or wire on bottom of cage. They cause long claws, cramp, and are cruel to your pets. Half-inch wide is a good standard for a Canary.

Don't believe in the small cage theory. A bird enjoys plenty of exercise, and will sing longer for it.

Don't give sugar unless you know how to use it.

Don't spare the sand or sawdust for your cage bottoms. It keeps the birds' feet clean and saves sore feet.

Don't forget to change the water at least once a day in winter and twice in summer, and to thoroughly cleanse vessel each time.

Don't neglect cleanliness.

Don't let the droppings get into the food or water.

Don't give frozen green-food without washing it; in fact, all green-food.

Don't forget the daily bath.

Don't expect your bird to sing for much more than a year unless you obey the above rules.

Don't be ignorant about your pets. Join our Society and learn how a bird may be kept in perfect health for years.

The leaflet is very nicely printed, and the whole scheme reflects great credit on the Bedford fanciers. We hope to see their lead followed in other quarters.—EDITOR.]

The Future of the Cinnamon Canary.

Sir, Considering the number of shows held last season entries have come in fairly well, also most varieties, except two or three, seem to be making headway. There is one variety which I love, namely, the Cinnamon, Norwich type, which has not advanced, and, if not going backward, certainly seems to have come to a standstill. I think it is one of the grandest Canaries that has ever graced the show bench. When one looks at the grand cinnie in your Birthday Number (which does your artist great credit,) one can only hope that many will be induced to take up the breeding of the Cinnamon. I was very disappointed when having a look round the Cinnamon classes at the late Palace Show. I remember the classes of years past, the colour, quality, and size of the birds which we saw in days gone by, and I compare them with the birds of this year, and wonder what can be the matter. What can be done to help this variety of Canary? Excepting two or three birds this year the rest were not much; they failed in head, size of body, and were poor in colour, very poor indeed to what we have had the pleasure of seeing in the past. Now, Cinnie fanciers, don't let this grand bird drop out of our shows altogether. Cannot some of the breeders let us have a few suggestions how to help their own variety, or are we to go on year by year the same as this last few years? CINNAMON.

Sir,—I have read Mr. Bentley's letter with interest, also the letter of "A C.C.C.-ite," which certainly touches the spot. Show committees would only be too pleased to provide suitable classification for cinnamons if there was a reasonable chance of the classes being filled. The classes provided at the Palace Show, with a specialist judge, and that judge a vice-president of the C.C.C., failed to fill, a result that will certainly not encourage show committees to cater liberally for the cinnamon Canary. Mr. Bentley must induce his fellow members to be more liberal with their entries if he wishes to see the cinnamon Canary again brought to the front. ANOTHER C.C.C.ITE.

The Norwich P.C. Invites Suggestions.

Sir,—With a view to assisting the committee to settle the classification, specials, etc., of the Norwich Plainhead Club, correspondence about which has from time to time appeared in your columns, it is proposed to hold an extraordinary general meeting of the club in Manchester at an early date, when it is hoped that as many members as possible will attend. Before, however, fixing the exact date, it would perhaps be as well to invite some further correspondence on the subject, and as it would no doubt be of interest to all exhibitors of Norwich Plainheads, I shall be glad if those members who have any suggestions as to classification, or the way of arranging shows at which our patronage is to be given in future, or the way of allocating specials, or any other suggestions which may tend to benefit the club, will make such suggestions through the medium of your columns. In this way each and every member will know exactly what the suggestions are, and they can be thoroughly dealt with, and discussed both through your columns and afterwards at the meeting. There is, however, one point which I must insist on, and that is that all letters show the names of the persons who are responsible for them, as anonymous letters will be entirely ignored. JNO. HOPKINS.

New Society at South Moor (Co. Durham).

Sir,—A meeting was held at the South Moor Hotel, February 23, when a good many members were made. It was decided to call the society the South Moor and District C.B.S. Birds Always Shelling Seed

Sir,—I have a bird which cracks all its seed in the bottle, and never takes the shells out as the other birds do, so the bottle is always full of husks. Maybe it is a case like mine that "Yellow Green" refers to. If so, I should like a cure for it, because it means some waste, as it is at present. What I do now is to empty his bottle into those of the other birds, which pick the shells out for me. Still that is not altogether fair to the other birds. I hope some reader will propose a cure for these "careless" birds. W. J. GULLY.

Sir,—In answer to "Yellow-Green" re birds shelling their seed, I have had birds do the same, and this is how I cured them. First remove the cause; don't give them more than they can eat in one day, and include in this a nice hard hempseed or two that the other birds have thrown out, unable to crack. Then I think you will find them cured. RAG-TIME.

Ramsden's Autumn Show at the Crystal Palace.

Sir,—I have considered Mr. Findlay McGillivray's suggestion, and decided to give a class for Any Variety Hen Mule or Hybrid at above show. I hope the class will fill, and prove of interest.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

Blindness in Norwich Plainheads.

Sir,—May I ask brother fanciers if they have had any of their Canaries go blind? Unfortunately I have had five cocks and two hens go totally blind this last breeding season. They were all unflighted, with the exception of two cocks, which were over year birds (Norwich Plainheads). I have bred Canaries fifteen years, and never had such a thing happen before. I am treating them just the same now as I have always done. They are bred and kept in a nice dry room, in the house, facing west; window open mostly every day, except when very cold or wet. I have no cat, and they have never been frightened. I am anxious to find out the cause before I pair up my birds. If I cannot, I shall be forced to give them up, and it will be like giving up old friends. It is also a great loss, for they were my best birds.

A FIFTY

THE WORK OF THE BREEDING SEASON.

Good Advice from a South-country Fancier.

A lecture given by Mr. W. Ellis before the Hastings and St. Leonards C.B.S.

I WILL endeavour to take you through the breeding season as briefly as I can. Any ideas or hints that I may give you in the course of my lecture have been gained in a good many years' practical experience, during which time I can claim to have been as successful a breeder and exhibitor as any fancier in the South.

As most of you know, my strain originaled from Mr. Bellamy's, one of our oldest members, and at the present time practically the whole of my birds are blood related. I can, with confidence, advise any of you that may be starting in the Fancy, to place yourselves in the hands of a reliable breeder, who breeds his winners, and procure from him two or three pairs of stock birds. Never mind if they do not show a lot of face value. You cannot get face value (show birds) unless you have a deep pocket. Procure the best stock you can get for the money you have to lay out and work up your strain from it. You may not breed anything for a season in the way of show birds, but by pairing back your birds for a season or two, keeping your eyes well open as to where the good points come from, I am certain you will be following the only royal road to success.

A Gold Mine!

I have at the present time one of my old stock birds. To look at him you would not "spring" 10 shillings for him, but he has bred me, in the last ten years, stock to the value of £100. This particular bird has been a marvel for breeding to type, and has bred winners every season. My four-pointed Yellow cock that I am showing now was his last son.

As regards the keeping of the birds I haven't any particular fad. We are not all blessed with a room at our disposal. A corner of a spare bedroom, or in a scullery or kitchen will do, as long as your cages are out of draughts, and below the gas, if there is any. If I had my choice of a room, I should prefer a north-east aspect, as you then get a little morning sun, which I think is beneficial. But I am no advocate of a lot of sun, as my present bird-room faces due north, and I can claim as good an average of youngsters as most during the last ten years. You can keep a more even temperature and a brighter light.

When a South Room Lost.

Last season we happened to have a south room vacant, with sun all day. After promising the wife numerous fur coats and presents, that I never gave her, she consented to let me try the birds in it for the breeding season, with disastrous results, as I had the worst breeding season I have encountered since I have been in the Fancy. I trooped back to my north room, a wiser but sadder fancier.

I advise running birds together about the 21st March, giving them nesting material, nest pan, and a little egg food about three times a week. Let them get right away with it. Providing you have given your hens a good fly during the last two months, and a little niger seed about three times a week, there should be nothing to worry about.

If all goes swimmingly, let your cock stay with the hen until the third egg is laid, when take him away and set your hen, letting her sit and bring up young, if she will, until about the 19th day, when replace him. If he takes to feeding as well, let him stop. Should he "cut up rough" and start throwing things about, you will have to separate them, running him in occasionally (evening for preference) when you are there. No doubt you will find he will pair with her all right, and she will go to nest again.

Should you be troubled with egg binding (if you have followed my instructions you should not be), try the following: Fill a jug half-full of hot water, cover top with piece of flannel, well oil vent of hen, and give a few drops of weak olive oil (preferred), and lay her over this, being careful not to scald. If this has not the desired effect in a few hours, you can reckon you will soon have one less to keep.

A Grave Mistake.

If the youngsters go on all right, do not be in any hurry to force them on to hard food, as I consider this is a grave mistake. I never take my youngsters off egg-food till after the moult. I do not mean keep them on strong egg-food. Weaken it somewhat and give bread and milk for a change two or three times a week previous to putting on colour-food, when drop the bread and milk.

You will be very lucky if you escape having a few youngsters queer at from five to eight weeks old with that dread complaint "going light," so I advise keeping a very strict look-out on any promising youngsters.

Having spotted them quickly enough I have pulled several round with the following method: Feed them up on strong egg-food, and give four or five drops of Angier's Emulsion direct in beak three times a day, and a little Parrish's Chemical Food in water or scalded milk. You can generally spot this disease by youngsters beginning to sleep a lot. If you have any suspicion, take them up (you will find their breast bone like a razor and very thin), and treat by my method. If they are too far gone, it is best to put them out of their misery.

Keep an Eye on Water.

Inflammation is another complaint to guard against, and as prevention is better than cure, I advise keeping cages as clean as is possible. I do not say it is necessary to clean them out every day, by all means, if you have only to tell someone else to do it. Also keep an eye on water, as youngsters will drink a tremendous lot, especially if they are a bit queer. Make it objectionable with just a spot of tincture of gentian, or Condy's Fluid.

Should you, after taking all these precautions, have a case of inflammation, try the following: (I use a small nursery cage.) Cover the bottom with sawdust—no perches. Oil the stomach with camphorated first, then paint with turps, place in nursery cage, and stand on hob of stove, where it will get a good heat. Of course, you must use discretion, and not overdo it. I am a great believer in heat for inflammation, and have gone as far as putting them in the oven wrapped in flannel, and pulled them round. This is another one of those complaints where you have to be cruel to be kind.

I conclude my remarks by impressing on you not to overdo it by getting too many pairs for a start, and making a burden of what should be a hobby. Gradually work your way up, and by perseverance and grit, and a skin like a rhinoceros, you will come out on top in the end.

The Clashing of Show Dates in the South.

Sir,—I see in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that Cardiff and Portsmouth are clashing, and have the same dates as we have fixed. I think we were the first society to fix the dates (Nov. 18 and 19) and notify same in your paper. As we are all applying for the patronage of the specialist clubs, I think it will make us all short in entries. I hope societies will study one another better than this. The judges at our annual open show are Mr. J. W. Rennie and Mr. J. Wright Dewhurst.

G. DEER and F. CUNDY,
Hon. Secs. Southend and Dis. C.B.S.

A Disclaimer.

Sir,—In your issue of February 21 there appears a report of the Edinburgh and District C.B.S., in which it states that a Mr. Bishop has been expelled the above society for showing old birds in young bird classes. Since the report I have been asked several times if I was the Mr. Bishop referred to. To all concerned, I may say I have no connection in any way, and never have had, with the above society, neither do I know the Mr. Bishop mentioned in the report.

St. Ninians, Stirling. WM. BISHOP

Returning to the Fancy.

Sir,—I was pleased to see the name of Mr. A. E. Cheney amongst the correspondents in your last issue, but regret he has lost his winning Bullfinch. May I ask Mr. Cheney where he has been these last seven years? I may ask the same question of Mr. H. J Chick (Nottingham), Mr. W. F. Lloyd-James (Pantsaison), Mr. R. Browning (Plymouth), and many other exhibitors whose names were so prominent a few years ago. Let me be understood, Mr. Editor. What I mean is that it is very gratifying to see these fanciers surviving; I thought they must have left the Fancy. No doubt some have done, and others have taken their places, but I feel sure that by the old cracks coming out again the young fancier will doubtless benefit. Mr. Cheney, no doubt, has good experience behind him as regards British, and, if I remember rightly, Mr Lloyd-James is an exception for staging Yellow Buntings. Would it be too much of me to ask these gentlemen for two articles—Mr. Cheney on the Goldfinch, and Mr. Lloyd James on the Yellow Bunting? I am certain scores of young fanciers would like a tip or two, through your paper, from these well-known exhibitors. J. KERSHAW.

SPECIAL CANARY BREEDERS' NUMBER NEXT WEEK

NEWCASTLE EAST END C.B.S.

Meeting and nov. table show, Feb. 25, Foster's Cafe, Shields Road; Mr. Hutchinson presided over a good attendance. Mr. J. Farrer (East Boldon), Mr. F. Bewick (North Shields), and Mr. Stephenson (Wallsend) were elected members. Mr. Hutchinson and the sec. reported that they had been able to secure the use of the Leighton Memorial Schools for future shows. The date for next show was fixed for Nov. 27 and 28. The following gentlemen have honoured us by becoming vice-presidents: Messrs. J. Maling, J. Parrish, W. Nevin, J. Ellis, G. Armstrong, C. McCulloch, W. J. Taylor, W. Harvey, and T. Robson. Mr. G. W. McPartling elected to chair, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson vice-chair, and Mr. Morrison to committee. There are already three half-guinea specials promised for our show, and members are advised to see that no grass grows under their feet in regard to this matter. Decided that no judge residing within a radius of 25 miles be chosen. Mr. Harvey said he though it would take two judges for our show, and said if we elected two he would willingly give 10s. towards expenses. Sec. was instructed to write to several judges for their terms. Mr. Robson and Mr. McGinn judged. NOR. PAIRS: 1, 3, Scott; 2, Reed; 4, Gilfillan; vhc, Doughty; hc, Cleminson. YORKS.: Marmion. BORD.: 1, Reed; 2, Doughty. A.O.V.: 1, Doughty. MULE OR HYBRID PAIR: 1, 3, Coltman; 2, Scott; 4, Harrison; vhc, Matthewson. Hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Hutchinson and the judges. Mr. Robson has promised to lecture at next meeting, so it is to be hoped that members and friends will turn up in good numbers. Meetings in future will be held in the Leighton Memorial School, Heaton Road.—J. W. Coutts, sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Second annual social, Feb. 18, St. Thomas's School, Ardwick. We had a record number of 120 members and friends present. We were pleased to see present so many friends from Manchester and N. C.O.S. We were all sorry our worthy president, Dr. Twigg, was not with us, but his duties took him elsewhere. All the same he gave us to understand his heart was with us in our efforts on behalf of the society. Our ever-ready chairman, Mr. Robinson, stepped into the breach, surrounded by the social committee, viz., Messrs. Fulcher, Greaves, Spencer (sec.), Booth, Thorpe, and Boothman. We had a grand variety of pianoforte solos songs, and recitations. Previous to supper our genial sec., Mr. Spencer, gave us an interesting 15 minutes speech on the record of the society, which showed how we had risen from a membership of 11 to the present record number of 62 members in the short space of four years. He also stated the financial position of the club, and showed what a healthy position we are in. Mr. Thorpe was responsible for the supper arrangements, and was ably assisted by a number of the members' wives. During supper the music was still kept going with a swing through the agency of Mr. Booth, who had kindly taken the trouble to bring a large gramophone. It would be very unfair to single out any for special mention, as all had willingly given their services. But the following artists gave a very good account of themselves, and helped to make the social the high success it was. Pianoforte solos, Mr. Smith, L.V.C.M.; quartet, Messrs. Hope, Halliwell, Jones, and Smith; songs, Miss Hunt, Miss Galloway, and Messrs. Halliwell, Hope, Jones, Turner, Robinson, Hall, Hunt, and Shaw; recitations, Mr. Robinson—every one giving of their best. Our worthy pres., the Rev. Gaul, moved a vote of thanks to the artists for their kind assistance. Several members wished a further vote of thanks to be given since they had enjoyed themselves so well; and as they would not be denied Mr. Masherder proposed, seconded by Mr. Holland, that the best thanks be also given the committee for the able manner in which they had got together such an array of talent. So ended a most enjoyable evening.—R. Booth, Press Correspondent.

WALLASEY C.B.S.

Show held Feb. 14, Fairhaven Institute, and a nice show resulted. The seed-eating Britishers were of nice quality, though not quite so numerous as usual here. Yorks. pairs—paired both ways—were very good indeed, and competition was very keen. Yorks. Greens were excellent for quality, and noted champion birds were paired up here. The novice pairs were led by a few very promising pairs. There were 99 birds in the show. The season's specials won as follows:—Cup, Messrs. Benson and Young; 15/- cash, Morton; 10/-, Barker; 5/-, Alston. Novices, —7/6 cash, Walton; medal, Simmons; British spl., Barker. Chas. Houlton judged, and gave satisfaction.

GOLDF., BULLF., ETC.: 1, Walton, nice size, good cap and stout shape, nice colours and level condition; 2, hc, Alston, good size Chaffinch, and a smaller Bullf., both in nice condition; 3, Goode, good blaze, moons, bars, and tan, wants a little more substance; vhc, Barker, cobby Chaffinch, beaten in head. GREENF., ETC.: 1, 2, Barker, very good Greenfinch, and nicely finished Yell. Bunting; 3, c, Walton, good Greenf., nice quality and tight condition; vhc, L. Walton; hc, Goode. SISKIN, ETC. (7): 1, Jones, good steady Linnet, nice shape and markings; 2, hc, c, Goode, pretty Siskin, nice bib, etc.; 3, Barker, neat, good shape Twite; vhc, Walton, pretty Lesser Redpoll. PAIRS, CANARIES. YORKS. YELL. CK., BUFF HEN (9 pairs): 1, 2, 3, Morton, fine stroke of work, with a fine trio of pairs; vhc, Alston; hc, c, Benson and Young. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN (8 pairs): All here of very high merit and very hard to separate indeed: 1, Benson and Young, exceptionally well-balanced pair, in grand all-round form; 2, 3, vhc, Morton, another storming trio of pairs, plenty ground here to breed lip toppers; hc, c, Alston. YORKS. GREEN, YELL. CK., BUFF HEN. 1, 2, vhc, Benson and Young, a champion trio of pairs in all respects; 3, hc, Cooper, big bouncing yell. ck. and very fine buff hen, good col., etc. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN (6): 1, 3, vhc, Benson and Young, another trio of the very best possible to match up for prospective champions, all in the pink; 2, c, Cooper, leaders a grand pair all round, and ought to do some good; hc, Hodgkins. NOVICE PAIRS. A.V. YELLOW COCK, BUFF HEN: 1, Simmons; 2, 3, L. Walton; vhc, Walton. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN: 1, 3, Simmons; 2, L. Walton; vhc, J. Walton.

A wild-caught "Linnet-Greenfinch" hybrid was brought to the show-room for inspection, and was generally accepted as a genuine cross. The general opinion appeared to be that it was one of a number which had somewhere been bred in confinement and afterwards escaped, or been turned out into the open. It seems highly improbable that its parents have come together and bred a hybrid in the open wild state. After judging, Messrs. Benson and Young engaged with another couple in a four-hand game of billiards, and though much earnestness was shown, they had to fight hard to keep in front. Mr. Barker engaged Mr. Houlton in a single-hand game, 100 up. After an exciting game, full of incident, Mr. Houlton ran out the proud winner by 100 to 99—a very close finish.—Chas. Houlton.

SOWERBY BRIDGE C.B.S.

Annual supper, social evening, and presentation of prizes, Feb. 26, Wharfe Hotel, Sowerby Bridge; when 24 members and friends sat down to a supper provided by Mr. and Mrs. Leytham Taylor, host and hostess of headquarters. The social evening and presentation followed under the chairmanship of the pres., Mr. C. Pickles. The following artists proved their ability: Messrs. Crosfield (tenor), Dawson (baritone), Dale (humorist). The Misses Brook and Tollen gave songs and a duet, and Mr. Hilton recited "Little Jim," and "The Village Blacksmith." Mr. J. E. Priestley as usual proved an able accompanist. All were in fine form, and their efforts made the success of the evening. Mr. E. Sutcliffe kindly presented the prizes as follows: OPEN SECTION, 1st prize and cup Mr. Stobart; 2nd, 2nd most points, Mr. Walker; 3rd, Mr. Highley; 4th, Mr. Crossley. NOV. SECTION, 1 15s. and rose bowl, Mr. Senior; 2 and 2nd most points, Mr. Mitchell; 3, Mr. Magson; 4, Mr. Wild. Oak smoker's cabinet value £2 2s. for most entries, kindly given by Mr. A. Sutcliffe, was won by Mr. Magson (nov. exhibitor). Vote of thanks was proposed, Mr. Sutcliffe saying how pleased he was that Mr. A. Sutcliffe, the sec., had come forward and helped the society in the past few years. He had been a thorough worker, and the society was greatly indebted to him. Mr. Magson seconded. Replying, Mr. Sutcliffe said he was sorry that cabinet this year had not brought the entries up higher, but attributed it to the fact that the members had had a poor breeding season. During the four years that he has given these cabinets there has been much better competition. Mr. Senior proposed, and Mr. Walker seconded, that the thanks of the meeting be given to the host and hostess for the splendid supper, and to the artists and accompanist for the entertainment. Mr. Taylor replied on behalf of the host and hostess, and Mr. Dale for the artists.—A. Sutcliffe sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Feb. 28, Old Boar's Head, Corporation Street, Manchester. Mr. G. Wareing (Bury) presided over a much better attendance. Six new members from Blackpool, Wigan, and Nelson elected. Next meeting March 28, 4.30, to be followed by annual dinner at the Old Boar's Head; ladies invited. Friends are especially invited, the dinner not being confined to members alone. Further particulars will be sent to each member. Anyone wishing to be present will kindly notify me. The cup and medals will be presented, and I shall be much obliged if members will send in their lists of points for the young bird competition (champ. and nov.) as early as possible so that I can check them.—Andrew Percival, hon. sec.

PELTON FELL AMALGAMATION.

Meeting, Feb. 28, Mr. Waugh's, Colliery Inn, Pelton Fell, to try and amalgamate the local clubs in club shows, instead of running open shows. We had a good company present, representing Pelton Fell, Chester-le-Street, and Birtley clubs. Mr. Lindsay, of Birtley, was chairman. Several schemes were put forward, and discussion of 1½ hours resulted: Mr. J. Redpath moved, and Mr. Hodgson seconded, that we amalgamate Pelton Fell, Birtley, and Chester-le-Street Clubs, which was unanimously carried. Subscriptions were then dealt with, and it was carried that subs. be 7s. 6d. per year for old members, and 8s. 6d. for new members, which includes 1s. entrance; this subscription covering all three clubs, viz., six shows in the year, three nest feather and three annual. Fanciers may pay their subs. to either of the club secs., as each club will manage the shows held in its district. Under this scheme an exhibitor cannot join one only of the above clubs, he must join all three or none. But I may remark that the sub. for the three clubs is only a trifle more than one club's sub. under the old method. The idea is this, we divide the subscriptions, get three times more members, a club show three times as large, and good competition under this new scheme, and no debt risks. Moved by R. Ward, seconded by Mr. Hodgson, that we restrict our radius to six miles of bridge end, Chester-le-Street; this radius does not interfere with old members of either clubs. Decided that closed rings be sold by sec. at 2s. per dozen to members, profits to go into a prize fund for rung birds only at each annual show. To make competition keener and also fair each member's rings will be checked by sec. Next amalgamated meeting at Chester-le-Street, March 14, for the settlement of show dates, etc., and we would like to see a good turn out of members.—Wm. Foster, Sec. Pelton Fell C.B.S.

PORTSMOUTH & S. COUNTIES.

Meeting, Feb. 25, headquarters, a pair show was held. Members staged 35 pairs in Norwich, Yorks., and Mules and Hybrids. Mr. H. Young, Southsea, judged. Messrs. Olding, Bickel, and Hoskison were the winners. A judging competition was held amongst the members, which proved the soundness of the judge's awards. Decided to hold a table show for British, Mules, and Foreign April meeting night. Annual open show fixed for Nov. 18 and 19. Members please note that subs. are now due.—G. T. Hall, hon. sec.

NORTH-WEST GLASGOW C.B.C.

Meeting and pair show, Feb. 26, Blythswood Halls, Gt. Western Road; Mr. Gibb presiding over a crowded meeting. Although numbers were somewhat down quality was all there—some very fine birds being staged. Mr. J. Crawford, who judged to the satisfaction of every one, had his work cut out for him, especially in the Yorks., Bord., and Hybrid pairs. Mr. Swanson's time was taken up by the Scotch Fancies and A.O.V. Can. pairs, and his awards were well received. Nominations for membership: Messrs. H. Thomson, P. McLelland, M. Gallacher, Wm. Jackson, H. Swanson, Mr. McCaldish, C. Pinnock.

NOR.: 1, Holliday; 2, Stewart. YORKS.: 1, Findlay, junr.; 2, 4, 5, 6, Pinnock; 7, Gibb. BORD.: 1, 3, Brown; 2, Loan; 4, 6, Phillips; 5, 7, Findlay, snr. SCOTCH FANCY: 1, 3, Phillips; 2, Stewart. MULING PAIRS: 1, Stewart; 2, Houston; 3, Gibb. HYBRIDS: 1, Adams; 2, 5, Loan; 3, Holliday; 4, Gibb; 6, Manson. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Stewart.

We would again invite fanciers in the surrounding districts to join the club, where all varieties are catered for. Particulars from Wm. Loan, Northbank, Coachhouse, Kelvinside Gardens, N, secretary.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Meeting, Feb. 28, "The Flying Dutchman," before a moderate attendance. Decided to hold six members' shows as in previous years. Classification and dates were fixed, but we had to leave time over till next meeting, March 28, when it is hoped the result of the Yorks. Union Ballot Paper will be known. Members please note that there will be no meeting March 14, it being decided to leave this night free so that any member wishing to attend Laisterdyke's Social can do so. Mr. W. H. Symes, sec. of Laisterdyke, came to our meeting with a special invitation to all our members to attend, and he assures everybody they will be well repaid.—W. Helliwell, sec.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Meeting, Feb. 12, Oldham Hall, Mr. J. Abbott (chair). One member elected, five nominated. Discussion on the use of Green versus Cinnamon took place, the Green taken by Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, and Cinnamon by Mr. Raynes. This turned out to be the best discussion we have had for some time, as it did not finish before 10.30. The rest of the business, drawing up of syllabus and night show of British, six classes, had to be left over for next meeting, March 12. Two cups will be given for most points Brit. throughout the season, one nov., one champ. Vote of thanks was accorded to Messrs. J. W. Metcalfe and Raynes.—J. Lloyd, sec.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEYS.

First general meeting, The Aviaries, 66, Pontypridd Road, Porth, where a good start was made, enrolling 20 paid-up members first night. By the time this is in print we shall have enrolled about 50 members. All fanciers in the Rhondda valleys should take advantage of this fine opportunity by joining us at once, entrance fee 1s. Mr. John Shipland, an old fancier, has been elected sec., so we shall soon be having some Linnet and Roller singing competitions, also a members' young bird show, with a few British classes thrown in. The club is open to all Wales. A few of the members enrolled are:—Mr. B. Hillman, Mr. T. James, Mr. Smart (Roller fancier), Mr. and Mrs. Carp, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Downs, Mr. Legg, Mr. Jones, Mr. Hurley, Mr. Shephard, Mr. Davis, Mr. Thomas, all keen fanciers. Officers elected: Vice-pres., Mr. F. T. Smart; sec., Mr. J. Shephard; treas., Mr. Davis. Every member acts as a committeeman in case of need. A set of rules was supplied by Mr. Shephard and carefully gone into. Same will be read at meeting March 7, for confirmation. The annual subscription will be lowered to 3s. Five members present can carry on any business, and as long as a quorum remains the association shall not be dissolved. (Carried). Meetings will be held Thursday and Saturday nights at 7, at the Aviaries until further notice.—J. Shephard, sec., 9, Woodfield Terrace, Trehafod, South Wales.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A.

Annual social and prize distribution, Feb. 28, headquarters; Mr. W. Hellar (chair). Mr. J. Ward kindly gave the prizes to the winners. The society's cup and gold medal went to Mr. E. Neesom, Mr. J. Powell second (alarm clock) lost the cup only by one point; Mr. S. Varley (gold medal) 3, Mr. J. Pearson (pair of vases) 4. The following won our host's sp: Messrs. Newton, Powell, Grange, Varley, Graham, Huddleston, Neesom, A. Grange, Darwent, Ward (sp for best unflig. birds), Lunn, and Grange. The fol-artists contributed to the social part of the evening: Madame F. Grange, Messrs. Clarke, Kinder, Jossie, Peasegood (baritone), Beedom, Schofield, and Hellar. Mr. A. Huddleston proposed vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. F. Darwent, to the artists, chairman, and Mr. Ward. Mr. E. Neesom replied on behalf of the artists, and a pleasant evening closed. —H. Grange, sec.

RICHMOND (Surrey).

First annual meeting new headquarters, St. John's Hall, Richmond, Jan. 29. Mr. Phipps presided over a very large attendance. Balance-sheet unfortunately showed small loss, but this was soon put on the right side by a shower of silver coins from the members. Officers elected for 1914: Pres., G. Cave, K.C., M.P., vice-pres., Councillor Wheatley. Messrs. H. Sarney, W. C. Hatton, V. F. Collingbourne; committee, Messrs. Cripps, Springett, Buck, Best, Stevens, Snow, Perrett, Harris, Lallem, Huxley, Keary, Birch; hon. sec., W. Nichols. Mr. F. Collingbourne has promised to give a lecture on the breeding and feeding of Foreign birds at next meeting, so join us at once, this alone is worth the year's sub. We have also other lectures promised by the highest authorities on Norwich and Yorkshires during the season.—W. Nichols, hon. sec.

SCOTLAND GATE AND CHOPPINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 21, Social Club. Officers were elected: Pres., Councillor Cox; vice-pres., Mr. Moffatt; chair., Mr. Turner; treas., Mr. Donald; sec., Mr. T. Rigg, 6, Third Row, Choppington Colliery, near Morpeth. We got 37 members at this our first meeting, and have several more for our next meeting, which will be announced in "Cage Birds." Subs., 6d. per month; open to all. We will try and make our meetings both interesting and instructive by having lectures, etc. Fanciers join us.—T. Rigg, sec.

MAINDEE F. AND F.S.

Meeting, Feb. 26, Fair Oak Inn. Mr. M. A. Hill (Newport) was elected chairman, representing the C.B. section. Mr. Ballard, sec.; Mr. Bailey, assist. sec.; representing the other sections. Annual sub., 2s, 6d. Fanciers wishing to join please communicate with any of the above officials.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, Feb. 17, Cairns Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road; president, Mr. A. W. Watson, occupying the chair. There was a good turnout of members. Report in connection with smoking concert was read, showing a balance of 17s., which was voted to club funds. Five new members admitted, namely, Messrs. Stevenson, Weir, Frier, Muir, and Tait. The following additional classes have been added to last year's schedule: Even-marked Bord. class, four new classes for Scotch Fancy, Colour-fed Greenf., Chaff., For. Bullf., hen Mule and Hybrid one class each; also seven old bird classes to take form of sweepstake, two for Nor., two for Bord., two for Scotch Fancy, and one for A.O.V. Can., making a grand total of 71 classes for our annual show. The following gentlemen were nominated as judges: Messrs. J. Holmes (Nor.), H. Bennet (Bord.), A. Paterson (Scotch), J. L. Dewar (Brit. and Mules). The services of the first three gentlemen have been secured. Members were reminded of table show for Brit. to be held March 21, 3. The sec. received orders for 7½ dozen B.L. rings, any member desiring to use same kindly notify sec. as to quantity and size.—J. C. Charlton, sec.

BARRY F. AND F.S.

Meeting, Feb. 7, Mr. W. Marshall chair. An excellent lecture was given by Mr. F. Edmonds. In accordance with the postcard vote taken the meeting night has been altered from first Saturday to the second Wednesday in each month. Next meeting 7.30, March 11th, Rossers' Restaurant, Holton Road, Barry Dock; lecture on cage birds by Mr. W. J. Windsor, Barry Dock.—H. P. Thomas, sec.

HETTON-LE-HOLE C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 22, Mr. Hy. Kilner (chair) before a good attendance. Decided to remove headquarters to Colliery Hotel, also to have first feather show July 4. Eight members made. Hearty invitation given to fanciers to join us. Future meetings will be held at Colliery Hotel.—George Vipond, sec.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

DYKES' YORKSHIRES

are without doubt the finest strain in the Fancy, winning this season the Yorkshire Canary Club Challenge Cup and medal, the Green Marked Yorkshire Trophy and gold medal, 2nd in Yorkshire Union competition (with far less entries than winners), and diplomas for best Yorkshire; 76 1sts, 56 2nds, 55 3rds, over 70 specials, and other honours too numerous to mention at all the leading championship shows. My winnings with Yorkshires for the past five seasons cannot be approached by any other exhibitors. Read following from Holystone-st., Heburn, March 2. Bird arrived safe. I am entirely satisfied with him. I could not have picked a better match for my hen if I had been for him myself. Thanking you for prompt attention and careful packing.—David Shepherd. I guarantee you the same attention and satisfaction. As my stock is being quickly sold out, place your orders early, and get the best blood in the Fancy. Specially selected pairs at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair; hens, feathered like wax, at 5/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; lengthy, typical stock cocks at 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each; all on full song, and seven inches long, and guaranteed cold-room bred and kept, and every bird bred from or related to my noted champions; travelling cages, 3d. extra; inspection invited at any time, or birds sent seven days' approval, cash, or deposit with Editor; kindly state requirements: L. Dykes, Reliable Aviaries, 16, Shann-st., Bolton Woods, Bradford. (1490)

SUTCLIFFE AND SON FOR VALUE

Our winnings for twenty-five years exceed those of any other firm, winning the Cinnamon Marked Competition nine years, also winners of the Green Mark Competition, 1910 and 1911, and Championship Diploma at Bradford National, 1913; extra good pairs, same strain as above, from 20/- to 50/- a pair; can be seen any time on recipt of a postcard; if you want to breed winners, buy direct from the breeders; stamp for reply; approval: 1, Back Kitson-st., Windhill, and 21, Valley-rd., Shipley, Yorks. (1209)

H. H. TOWERS

For business reasons must reduce stock at once; cocks, 6/6 to 10/-, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, and upwards; hens, similar prices; good matched pairs, from 12/6 upwards; birds suitable for exhibition or stock to suit all; this strain is one of the best in the Fancy, as proved at Manchester, Cardiff, Sheffield, Bradford National, etc.; write at once to: Glusburn, nr. Keighley.

G. SNEAD'S

Yorkshires have won over one hundred prizes at open championship shows during season 1913-14. See reports of Bradford National, Scottish National, Crystal Palace, etc. This strain needs no puff, as I won more first prizes at Crystal Palace than any other exhibitor in the Yorkshire section; and remember, every bird I have exhibited absolutely my own breeding. I am now in a position to supply matched pairs, bred from and related to these winners, at 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- upwards; odd cocks and hens proportionately. All birds sent on seven days' approval; satisfaction guaranteed; travelling cases 3d. extra; terms cash or deposit. Address: 133, Arncliffe-terr., Grange-rd., Bradford.

YORKSHIRE BREEDERS' SOCIETY

Buy from the breeders whose birds are bred from the best strains; cocks from 6/-, hens from 4/-; cash or deposit, seven days' approval; easy terms: Secretary, 15, Dalton-terr., Manningham, Bradford.

GOOD YORKSHIRE HENS

Am not putting up so many as usual; can spare some of my stock birds at reasonable prices, mostly yellow and variegated, only want seeing: H. Smith, Secretary C.B.S., 115, Merton-rd., Wimbledon. (1385)

PURE YORKSHIRES

1913 Crystal Palace first prize strain, guaranteed; also Messrs. Harrison's, Hodgson's and other noted winning strains. I don't exhibit, so you get the choice; those that show their stock want all the good ones themselves. Some lovely specimens, clean moulted cocks, yellows or buffs, from 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/-, 15/- each; hens, yellows or buffs, 3/- 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6 8/6, 10/- each; any on approval. Scores of winners supplied. Editor has seen scores of original testimonials, where I have supplied winners. I guarantee to please you, as soon as you see them. Cages, 2/- each. Breeder 30 years: Sandiford, Canary Judge, Preston; also 89, Sclater-st., Shoreditch, London.

OGDEN BROS.

There is no doubt we have them, again bang at the top, winning the Yorkshire Union Competition, also winning outright the Yorks. challenge trophy, 1913, also winning "Cage Birds" competition at Union shows; see Palace reports, 2 1sts, 2 2nds, and champ. diploma for best C.M. Yorkshire in show, also winning the Crystal Palace silver cup for best Yorkshire, and other trophies too numerous to mention; our winnings during the past ten years have never been accomplished by any other exhibitor. Note.—The above competitions have been won with birds of our own breeding, so write direct to the most reliable strain in the world for producing winners; for proof read the following, just one out of thousands filed for inspection.—"216, Duke-st., Barrow. Dear Friends.—You will be pleased to hear I have won cup for best bird in show. I got 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in yellows, 1st in marks, 2nd in buffs. These are all bred direct from your strain.—S. Woodward." We guarantee same strain as our winners, at 10/6, 15/6, 21/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. Odd cocks or hens proportionately; inspection invited, or birds sent seven days' approval at our risk. Some of our noted winners for sale at half their value: Dudley-hill, Bradford.

COKERNUT HUSK NESTS

for Budgerigars, etc. The "Improved Secure" husks were originated, imported, manufactured, and sold by me 25 years ago, years before some bird dealers started business. My husks remain unequalled, and am still supplying largest parks, zoos, dealers, and breeders. Don't be misled by paper pull; cheap, clumsily made substitutes which fall to pieces in use, and are dear at any price, causing disappointments, losses, and failure. Having bred thousands of Budgerigars, I know their requirements. Am not a bird dealer, and keep no shop. My price, 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each; only one variety; wasters are burned. Trade supplied: Harper, Norton, Stourbridge. (1396)

GET YOUR COPY TO-DAY as they are selling fast and cannot be reprinted.

Note the following Summary of Contents:—

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden. A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS. By W. H. Gibb. The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRD-CATCHING. By J. W. Steel. A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make bird-lime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

MISTAKES BIRD-KEEPERS MUST AVOID. By Claude St. John. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby.

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP AND BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS. By F. Meakin. This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES. By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

Lovely Coloured Plate of Yellow and Green Borders. Many Art Plates and other illustrations. Much other general information of a highly useful nature.

Great Opportunity to make more Money from Canaries.

THIS WONDERFUL BOOK OF SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

"I CONSIDER IT A SPLENDID BOOK."

112, Edwards Road, Erdington,
Birmingham.

Dear Sir,—I consider "Our Canaries" a splendid book, just the thing we have been in want of to make the breeding of Canaries quite successful for new beginners. It is honestly worth the money you ask for it, and I consider everybody that keeps birds ought not to be without the book.

I am confident I shall have a more successful year next year than I have had this season, thanks to your splendid book.

I remain, Yours faithfully,
A. W. PYATT.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE. When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD. If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

"PHOSTO"

It is really wonderful what this greatest of all foods can do, and is doing, in the Fancy. "Phosto" puts life and vigour in the stock birds, that means fertile eggs. Where Phosto is used bad feeding is unknown. Every young hatched is reared. Hens will feed on Phosto, and young thrive. Startling proof. Bagden Hall Stables, Huddersfield. March 4, 1914. Dear Sir,—Kindly forward three tins of Phosto. I never lost a single youngster after using Phosto last season. Yours truly, W. Everett. 14, Livingstone-st., Norwich. March 7, 1914. Sir,—Received tin of Phosto, with thanks. Using it last year on my Crests I found Phosto a great success. Yours truly, J. Carlton. Sold in tins, 1/-, 2/6, 4/6: Judge Silk, Whitstable.

SOFT MOULT, NOT SINGING

Special notice to all bird lovers. We are anxious that every fancier should know the value of our bird medicines. Ditchfield's Medicines have been used by most leading fanciers for over six years, and are supplied to the London Zoo. They are genuine remedies, which can be given with confidence to all classes of cage birds. Fanciers, we want a trial. We guarantee to return you every penny paid if our medicines fail to give you satisfaction. Special offer: If you have any birds you are relying upon for the breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, try Ditchfield's Tonic Drops. We guarantee you a perfect cure. This medicine is without doubt the grandest medicine ever introduced for bringing birds into breeding condition. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are an absolute cure for Not Singing, Soft Moult, Going Light, Egg Binding, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. In 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For Bronchitis, Wheezing, and Hoarseness, get Ditchfield's special Lung Tonic. It is the grandest Medicine ever offered for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For cases of Constitutional Weakness and Debility get Ditchfield's Famous Revivo. There is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. As a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing, Revivo is absolutely unequalled. In 7d., and 1/1 bottles. In cases of severe Diarrhoea use Ditchfield's Famous Diarrhoea Powder, in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. It is perfectly safe, and can be relied upon. When ordering Medicine, kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles any kind for 1/9, three for 2/6. The 1/1 bottles are treble the size of the 7d. bottles. All medicines are sent, post free, per return. All bottles broken in transit replaced. Also two valuable Seed Recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Song, given free to all Purchasers of our Medicines. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, OLDHAM. (1427)

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

LADIES & GENTLEMEN, I THANK YOU ALL

for your kind patronage. I am receiving testimonials every post. Beautiful Bramblefinches and nice large cock Greenfinches, 1/- each; they can win. My book of secrets tells you how to make Linnets sing at one another with their wings down; how to train them for contest singing; how to moult them; how to make Larks, Thrushes and Blackbirds sing with full loud voice on fine days, also Nightingales, and how to save Goldfinches from dying and make them sing, and the rules under which the champion Linnet of the world won all his contests. I have just got another 4,000 books printed. Muling pairs, birds I have put together are true pairs; beautiful Siberian cock Goldfinch, with a large Russian hen Bullfinch, 10/-; Siberian cock Goldfinch, with a beautiful yellow hen Canary, 8/6 and 10/6; beautiful cock Siskin, with hen Canary, 7/6; large yellow cock Greenfinch and large German hen Bullie, 5/-; large muling Linnets and hen Canary, 5/-; beautiful cock Chaffinch, and hen Bramblefinch, 3/6; large Mealy Redpoll and English hen Bullie, 4/-; yellow cock Greenfinch, with hen Canary, 5/-; the above are properly paired, and in the pink of condition. Large muling Goldfinches, singing hard, 4/- each. I hold the world's record for mulers; extra large muling Linnets, 2/6, 3/6, and 5/-; I have the finest stock of singing Larks in the world. Larks, singing, daylight and gaslight, with full loud voice, as steady as rocks, and perfect in feather, a treat to hear them sing, 1/6 and 2/-; a few hand-reared ones, will sing indoors or out, singing with full loud voice, daylight and gaslight, right for contest singing, 3/6 and 4/6; one a real champion, cannot be beaten, 6/-, with cage 7/6, he is a topper. Thrushes and Blackbirds, singing hard, 3/- and 3/6; hand-reared ones, 5/- each, can be heard singing 100 yards away. Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, with new cage and my book of secrets, 3/6 and 4/6. I challenge the world with this class of bird. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, singing a treat, can run as long as German Canaries, they will sing anywhere, only 2/6 each; guaranteed to mule pure Seifert Roller hen Canaries, 3/6 and 5/-; German hen Canaries, 2/6; German hen Bullfinches, 3/-; Russian hen Bullfinches, 4/- and 5/-; English Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/-, all grand birds, all sent out in wicker cages; Linnet Mules and Goldfinch Mules, will sing anywhere, 10/-. A Marvellous collection, which must be seen to be appreciated, and I mean both in quantity and quality; besides, you can save

By Purchasing Your Norwich Direct from Me.

Compare the quality with anything you can get elsewhere, at much higher prices. It is not what bought-up birds at absurdly high prices have done that matters to you, even if led to believe that they are not so procured. What you want to know is where you can get the greatest value for money. I sell the Winners, and can easily save you money, and at the same time give you birds that others would reserve.

Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6. Hens, 3/-, 3/6. Pairs, 8/6, 10/6. High-class Cocks, fed, 10/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/-. Hens 5/-, 7/6, 10/6. 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- to £5 per pair. Many of these include some giants, very strong in head properties. If you don't see what is required, write to me. Detailed list free.

400 Champion Rollers in Stock.

I have just received a magnificent collection of pure Seifert Rollers, consisting of 400 cocks, and a large number of hens. These birds have not been picked over. They have come direct from the rooms of some of the best breeders in Germany, and include some exceedingly good birds. They are in full rolling song, with a good variety of tours, and are sure to give complete satisfaction anywhere. Kindly note the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Hens, same pure strain, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each. Genuine schoolmasters, specially trained for contest singing, 20/-, 25/- 30/-, 35/-, 40/- each upwards. Travelling cages 3d. extra in all cases.

I am also offering a limited number of hens bred from some of the best strains in England, at 7/6 and 10/- each. These are worth treble to any breeder. All B.R.C.C. rung. I invite fanciers requiring Rollers to come and hear these birds, and make their own selection. To those who cannot come I offer to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on 10 days' approval, and undertake to return cash in full, if not absolutely satisfactory. Is it possible to make a fairer offer?

CHAMPION GLUCKE STRAIN

of Rollers; hens for sale; cocks all sold; hens 5/-, 6 for 9/-: 829, Ashton Old-rd., Openshaw, Fife.

YOU CANNOT SAY

you have heard the best breed of Rollers going, unless you have heard a Leipzig Roller. Of course most people own one, but there are still a few that have never heard one. I want those people to allow me to send them one on trial for a week, so that they may hear it in their own home. I do not mind if they have no intention of purchasing, all I ask is that they will deposit price of bird with Editor of "Cage Birds," until bird is returned. Has it never struck you that unless the Leipzig Rollers were all that I claim for them, that it would be sheer folly for me to make such an offer as above? I have just received my last consignment for the season of these Webers Leipzig Rollers, all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark or any other objectionable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, and are very soft and mellow in tone, 10/6 and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed exactly same strain, 3/- each, two 5/6; few lond free singing Hartz cocks, in full, vigorous song, 6/- each; Hartz hens, 2/3 each, 4/- couple; travelling cages, 3d. extra in all cases; singing box cages, 1/6 each; special Roller cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 3/- each. It will be noticed that I give you full particulars of the notes, which make up the song of the Leipzig Roller. I guarantee this description to be absolutely correct, and send all on full week's trial, either on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor, and take all risk during whole time. If any person likes to have one on week's trial, and if it is not as I guarantee, or if it does not realise every expectation, it only has to be returned, and the whole of money is promptly return. The following letters (although not a twentieth part of those recently received) plainly prove that the Leipzig Rollers are far in front of ordinary Rollers for singing ability. "20, Acton-rd., Rock Ferry, Birkenhead. Feb. 23. Sir,—Received Roller safely. He is a splendid singer, sang all day following arrival.—Yours, J. Povall." "41, Brooklyn-st., Crewe. Feb. 21st. Sir,—Roller arrived safe, and am well satisfied. He is singing grand.—Yours, P. Jones." "Chemistry Cottages, Wortley, near Sheffield. Feb. 23.—Sir,—Birds arrived safe. Many thanks for such a jewel of a Roller. He is a marvellous songster. He is worth all the money I paid for the three. He is the best I ever heard.—Yours, J. Rolls." "24, George-st., Burnbank. Sir,—I bought a Leipzig Roller from you seven years ago; it lived six years, and was as good when it died as first day I had him. He actually died singing.—Yours, T. Armstrong." "18, Blights Terrace, Redruth.—Sir.—Hartz cock is quite a gem in every respect, and as you state, grand value for money.—Yours, W. Myners." "47, Goldhey-st., Blackburn.—Sir,—Leipzig Roller I had from you is a grand songster, and I know, because I breed Rollers.—Yours, J. Brown." "14, Queen-st., Shotton Colliery. Sir,—Leipzig Roller I had from you three years ago started singing five minutes after arrival, and is still singing as good as ever.—Yours, A. Steele." "3, Ladham Bank, Galashiels. Sir,—I have a Leipzig Roller that I got from you four years ago, and is now better than ever.—Yours, T. Hislop." "Providence Place, Bath-street, Ilkeston. Sir,—Please send me Leipzig Roller. I had one from you six years ago, and he is singing yet.—Yours, J. Holmes." "156, Bede Burn-rd., Jarrow. Sir,—Please send me Leipzig Roller. I got one from you three months ago, which is singing lustily. This will be fifth or sixth from you, and all have given utmost satisfaction.—Yours, J. Davison Young." "15, Queen-st., Derby. Sir,—Many thanks for bandmaster; he is a grand songster, and old Canary men here are astounded at his lovely song, and say the best ever heard. In fact, many of our shop customers will need to Canaries say never heard one to approach yours.—Yours, L. Greensmith." Some of the foregoing letters prove conclusively that the Leipzig Rollers do not sing for one year only, but maintain their true song right through life. All birds are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber Leipzig," and as I am sole importer of this strain, no other dealer can sell them, unless he first purchases from me. As this is last consignment, early application is imperative to avoid disappointment. (1385)

SILVER CUP,

4 Firsts, 2 Thirds, Etc.

Once again my birds have wound up the show season by securing highest honours at the Great National Show (see report of Palace Show. That they have won consistently all through the season is shown by the fact that they have secured 76 Specials, 89 Firsts, 74 Seconds, and 60 Thirds This Season and have been shown in open champion classes only, in hottest competition at all the leading shows. They have also won the N.P.C. Champion Trophy, the O.N.P.C. Champion Trophy, 3rd in Y.C.C. Competition, also several Silver Cups and Bowls, Gold and Silver Medals, Diplomas, and numerous other trophies.

I have also supplied birds that have won highest honours for my clients, including winners of this year's Palace show, in very strong classes. I have letters filed here for anyone to see in proof of this; also a large number of letters from fanciers who have bred winners from stock bred and sold by me. These are FACTS, needing no comment. They speak for themselves, and they cannot be disputed. I am now offering marvellous value in the following varieties:—

CHAMPION NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN.

Grand, short, thick-set birds, cocks or hens, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards. Matched pairs, personally selected by me for breeding winners, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- to 100/- per pair. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and I am prepared to give a written guarantee that the above are bred by me from my noted strain ofwinners. I have also a few real good cobby birds bred from other well-known strains at the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Grand cobby hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

FEEDING HENS.—Good sound healthy feeding hens, 3/-, 3/6 each. No breeder should be without. Travelling Cages 3d. extra in all cases.

I have also a splendid selection of Border Fancies, Scotch Fancies, etc., etc.

Kindly remember, I issue an open invitation to all fanciers to call at any time and inspect my stock. You need not announce your visit; come at any time (except Sundays). You will be sure of a hearty welcome and will be shown round my rooms whether desiring to purchase or not.

Any fancier requiring stock is invited to come and make his own selection. To those unable to come I am prepared to send one or more birds to any address in the kingdom at my sole risk. I will send on 7 or 10 days' approval anywhere, and will guarantee absolute satisfaction to every customer or cash returned in full.

EASY PAYMENTS can be arranged to suit the convenience of genuine fanciers who are not in a position to pay cash. Send a postcard for my free illustrated catalogue, containing much useful information concerning the cage bird hobby.

THE RIGHT SORT!

to breed winners. Read following success won by a novice with youngsters bred from a pair I sold last April. "Iveagh Buildings, Dublin; Mar. 8. Dear Sir,—I am pleased to inform you of my wonderful success this show season with birds I bred from the pair you sent me: Eight firsts, seven seconds, four thirds; also won solid silver cup, Leinster, diploma best bird in show, Kingstown, and two specials, runner-up medal Y.C.C. of Ireland, and 4th in ring cup competition. I have had birds from others, but never knew what it was to win before, and am, indeed, proud of you and your birds, and pleased to see you have again done well at the shows.—Lawrence Burtenshaw to L. Dykes." The above speaks for itself. This season I have again won the green-marked trophy and gold medal also Yorkshire Canary challenge cup and medal, second in Yorkshire Union, and other honours too numerous to mention, and almost twice as many firsts as any other exhibitor of Yorkshires. This is a record I have accomplished every year for the past four show seasons. If you want to breed your own winners, try my matched pairs at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- per pair; clears, ticked or marked, and every bird in breeding condition; also some big stock cocks at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each, upwards, and a few extra good songsters at 6/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; travelling cages 3d. extra. Inspection invited, or birds sent seven days' approval at my risk, cash, or deposit with Editor; kindly state wants to the old reliable Yorkshire breeder and exhibitor (who breeds his own winners) with a life's experience, which I am only too pleased to place at your disposal at any time: L. Dykes, Reliable Aviaries, 16, Shann-st., Bolton Woods, Bradford. (1437)

STOCKPORT AND HAZEL GROVE.

Meeting Feb. 24, Trinity House, Shaw Heath, Mr. W. Marsland chair. Good number present to witness a washing exhibition by Mr. J. Potts. Mr. Potts lost no time in putting four birds through the process, explaining his method to the members. He used a shaving brush to body, wings and tail, and smaller brushes for the head and neck, as he thought by using small brushes better results were obtained. The birds were subsequently rolled in small cloths and placed before the fire to dry, with their tails nearest to the heat, where they rested for twenty minutes, and were afterwards transferred to a Yorkshire show cage. When they had preened themselves it was plain what a great improvement a wash will make. Mr. W. Marsland was elected pres., Mr. S. Beswick treas., Messrs. Garbutt and Sykes auditors, W. Stafford sec. Four members nominated. Sec. instructed to get new rule cards for next meeting, also to ask fanciers to notice that the radius has been extended to seven miles from the "Rising Sun," Hazel Grove. Hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Potts brought to a close a very pleasant meeting.—W. Stafford.

EDINBURGH WESTERN O.S.

Meeting, Mar. 5, Arego Street Hall. Mr. Ballantine presided over a fair gathering. Two new members admitted. Agreed to hold annual show Gundley Street Hall last Sat. of October. Mr. D. Burgess (the well-kuown Scotch Fancy breeder) gave a practical demonstration of how cages should be made. This proved a great treat for the members, and filled one of the most interesting evenings ever held by the society. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Burgess.—C. Graut.

SPRINGBURN, POSSIL PK. C.B.C.

Meeting and table show, March 4, Reid Hall. There should have been a lecture at this meeting according to the syllabus, which perhaps accounted for so large an attendance, but the sec. failed to get a suitable fixture. The most interesting part of the meeting was the offer of a gold medal for best young Nor. Plainhead, ring number to be registered in member's name. There was a good turn-out of Brit. at table show: 32 entries: Mr. T. Erskine judged. LINNET: 1, Webster; 2, Fraser; 3, 6, Crawford; 4, J. Dunlop; 5, W. Dunlop. MEALY REDPOLL OR TWITE: 1, Swan; 2, R. Fraser; 3, T. Fraser; 4, Webster; 5, Sloan; 6, Brown. LESSER REDPOLL: 1, Fraser; 2, 6, Webster; 3, Crawford; 4, Dunlop; 5, Hadley. BULLF. HEN: 1, Crawford; 2, Hadley; 3, Sloan; 4, Fraser. A.O.V. BRIT. HEN: 1, 2, Webster; 3, J. Dunlop; 4, W. Dunlop. Members please note error in syllabus for April 8, which should read, Goldf., Bullf., Greenf., Siskin, For. Goldf. or Bullf. One new member made. Vote of thanks brought the meeting to a close.—T. Penman.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Ninth annual meeting Mar. 2, Mr. Johnston's Rooms, 6, The Broadway, the chairman, Mr. W. H. Stoakley, presiding. Seven new members elected, and presentation of a silver medal to Mr. J. H. Bailey for the best bird shown by a novice at the recent pair show took place. Annual show fixed for Nov. 3 and 4. Judges have been appointed. Mr. A. H. Dyke and Mr. H. W. Hobden tied with 27 points each for first place in the judging competitions last year. The well compiled report submitted by the sec. gave an interesting history of the society since its inauguration in 1905, with a little band of 21 members, to the present time, when the membership exceeds that number by 100. The report continued that as a whole the past year had been very successful. In conclusion the secretary tendered to all the members his heartfelt gratitude for the confidence and support given him during his six years' tenure of office, and in vacating the position, as he must through pressure of business, he hoped the same generous support so liberally given to him would be extended to his successor. The accounts showed that a profit of 3s. 5d. was made on the pair show, 3s. 6d. on the young bird show, and a loss of £1 0s. 8d. on the annual show as compared with £8 15s. 5d. the previous year. The general accounts showed the receipts to have been £40 15s. 5d., and the expenses £14 8s. 7d., leaving a balance on the right side of £26 6s. 10d., while the balance-sheet showed the actual cash balance to be £25 13s. 1d. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, said he had been asked by the members to ask Mr. Smith to accept an amount of £5 from the funds as a very small recognition and appreciation of the splendid work he had done for the society during the past year, and it would be a great pleasure to them if he would accept it. Mr. Smith, in a few brief words, returned hearty thanks for the little present offered him, and the election of officers was proceeded with, as follows:—Pres., Mr. F. R. J. Piper; chair, Mr. W. H. Stoakley; vice-pres., Mrs. G. Griffiths, Mrs. B. M. Thynne, Dr. Spencer, and Messrs. J. Carson, C. How, E. J. Lamb, J. Robson, P. Rorke, H. Smith, and J. G. Warley; committee, Mrs. M. M. Owen and Messrs. A. H. Dyke, G. Grilliths, J. W. Heath, H. W. Hobden, R. A. Newley, F. W. Owen, and F. Thynne; sec., Mr. G. Griffiths.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Meeting, Feb. 28, "Three Tuns," Eastwood, when a good number turned up, and the business of electing officials for 1914 was transacted. Decided to hold F.F. show "Three Tuns," Eastwood, June 4. The society is now in a very prosperous position, and we have a good balance in hand. Several new members were proposed, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Subs. is 2s. 6d. per annum, and all fanciers will receive a hearty welcome.—Smith and Lees, Joint Secs.

NORTH WEST LONDON F.A.

Annual meeting, March 5, Mr. B. Cresswell, chair; 10 members present. Seven members elected. 20 sps. given with five cups, making seven cups in all. Decided to hold annual dinner and concert, April 2, "The Stag's Head" Hotel, Hawley Road, Chalk Farm Road, N.W.; ladies invited. Tickets, 2s. 3d. each. Special committee meeting will take place headquarters, March 19, 8.30. Next monthly meeting "Stag's Head" Hotel, April 9.—W. Sutton, Assist. Sec.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

Annual smoker, Feb. 27, Bank Restaurant, Queen Street, Glasgow, when a large and most representative body of fanciers met. Mr. Thomson occupied the chair. After the usual loyal toasts, the musical programme was proceeded with, the following artists acquitting themselves very creditably:—Messrs. Gibson, Houston, Ogilvy, Crawford, Noble, Miller, Ramsay, Hendry, Rousky, and Fogo. Mr. M. Craig proposed the toast of "The Society," which was responded to with much enthusiasm. The toast of "The Press" was proposed by Mr. Park and Mr. R. H. Livingstone, representing CAGE BIRDS, replied. A special vote of thanks was given to the artists for the pleasure they had given, including Mr. Cunningham for his able work at the piano. After a vote of thanks to he chairman, a very agreeable evening was brought to a close.

UPPER RHONDDA C.B.S.

Annual meeting and show, March 5, headquarters, Cardiff Arms, Treorchy. Mr. Thomas presided. Balance-sheet adopted, and leaves us with a cash balance in hand of 19s. 5d., also a gold medal. Election of officers resulted in Mr. J. Curtis being voted to chair, with Mr. E. J. Jones vice-chair, Sec. and treas., Mr. E. Richards. New members elected: F. J. Bees and F. C. Nickolas. A hearty welcome will be given any fancier wishing to join. Pair show was a great success, 75 entries facing the judge, Mr. S. F. Whetton, Cardiff, who gave every satisfaction. Winners of diplomas: Best pair Canaries, Richards, Nor.; Mule or Hybrid, Nickolas; British single, Curtis, Wagtail; Mule or Hybrid, Jones. NOR., YELL., BUFF HEN: Richards. BUFF CK., YELL. COLINTON AND CURRIE PARISHES O.S.

Meeting March 7, Village Hall, Juniper Green, vice-pres., Mr. Michie chair. Classification for annual show was discussed, and it was decided that we make no alteration. A list of well-known judges was selected and left in the hands of the sec. Following members admitted: Mr. Gibsou, Juniper Green; and Mr. Morrison, Slateford. At the close of the meeting Mr. G. W. Brown, of Leith, gave a very interesting washing exhibition. He had his drying cage with him which made the exhibition all the more interesting. Mr. Brown washed two birds, explaining everything as he went along, and gave hints as to the use of borax and spirits of alcohol. His method of catching the birds before washing induced one of the members to wash the third bird, and Mr. Begbie washed it under the able guidance of Mr. Brown. Although a fancier for close on 40 years Mr. Begbie remarked that this was the first bird he had ever tried to wash, but added that if he were going to keep up with the younger school of fanciers he would have to start, although he was an old man. Mr. Begbie moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Brown. He said he had benefited greatly and had no doubt the majority of the members had done no less. Members joined in a very hearty vote of thanks.— J. Napier.

General meeting March 2, headquarters; 26 members present. The sec. was able to give a highly satisfactory report of the show, a profit of £4 5s. 9d. being the result. Members elected: Messrs. Maidment, Neville, Cooke, Lees, Welch, Adams, Tomes, and Boyes. Prize-money for show was paid.—W. L. Page, Hon. Sec.

LEICESTER C.B.S.

Meeting March 4, Mr. Heighton chair. Decided that minutes of previous meeting be amended and to read that "Sec. must see rung birds within seven days instead of at the time." Also decided that sec. should help a member who through illness, etc., had to sell all his stock, and that we put up two selling classes (cock and hen), winners to be bought by sec. and presented to said member. Members please make special effort to be present next meeting. Mr. Yates judged table show. NAT. COL. CK.: 1, 2, 3, Day. HEN: 1, 2, 3, Day. NOV. CK.: 1, 2, West. HEN: 1, 2, West.—J. Hardbattle.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Washing demonstration March 4. Mr. Payne, of Gloucester, kindly came over and gave a practical demonstration of his method of washing. He showed the way of washing, holding the bird, the parts to take first, and the necessity of getting the soap out of the feathers; also of not drying them too quickly in front of fire. A good number of other members washed birds. One member brought a Blackbird, which went through the washing ordeal in a very satisfactory manner. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Payne, who suitably responded, and complimented the members on the able way they had washed the birds. This closed a most interesting meeting.—W. Pounsett.

HALIFAX C.B.S.

Meeting March 5, headquarters, Trafalgar Inn, Kings Cross. There was a splendid attendance, all being enrolled as members, and their enthusiasm augurs well for success. We have now upwards of 50 members. During the evening the officers were appointed: Mr. A. Sutcliffe sec. Rules were drawn up for first ten months, as annual meetings are to be held first Thursday in Feb. It was decided to join the Yorkshire Union. The application is now in the Union Secretary's hands. Subs. fixed at 3s. 6d. per annum, 1s. on nomination and the remaining 2s. 6d. previous to annual show or members will not be eligible to exhibit. Next meeting March 19 at headquarters, when important business will be gone through, including a syllabus for the ensuing year. Fanciers desirous of joining are requested to attend.—A. Sutcliffe, 46, Hammond Street, Hopwood Lane, Halifax.

HALIFAX O.S.

Annual meeting March 7, Plummet Line Hotel, Mr. J. J. Dunn chair. There was a good muster of members. Sec. gave the balance-sheet which showed a slight loss on the year's working, which was considered satisfactory, seeing that we lost a good sum on the annual open show; but there is a good balance in the bank. Officers elected: Pres., Mr. F. Townsend; vice-pres., Messrs. Lord, Macpherson, and Robertshaw; auditor, Mr. H. Lord; sec., H. Clegg; assist. sec., J. Burdekiu; sub-committee, Messrs. Burdekin, Ball, Mottram, Dunn, Helliwell, Pilling, and Lord. Mr. F. Lee proposed, and Mr. C. Senior seconded, that our best thanks be given to all retiring officers for their past services. Proposed that we hold an annual open show Nov. 20 and 21; also that the sub-committee draw up a syllabus for the year, and bring it before members at next meeting, April 5. Seven members enrolled.— H. Clegg, sec.

"Will secretaries and others, to avoid clashing, please notice that we have fixed our nest feather show for July 11, open show for Oct. 3, and Christmas show Dec. 26," writes Mr. J. Bunn, sec. of Nottingham Permanent O.S.

Sowerby Bridge and Dist. C.B.S. has decided to join the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies. I shall be pleased to receive the names of fanciers wishful to join, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, 46, Eldon-place, Hopwood-lane, Halifax. Sub. is 3s. 6d. per annum, commencing March 12. Next meeting March 12, at 8. Headquarters, Wharf Hotel, Sowerby Bridge.

The "Eastern Evening News," March 8, says:—"What a thing it is to enjoy fame and publicity in the Canary line! The other day our well-known "birdy" expert, Mr. W. Rudd, received a letter which was simply addressed 'W. Rudd, Bird Specialist, England.' The postal authorities had all England to choose from; but they sent it on to Norwich promptly, and 'guessed right first time.' This is a pretty good test of Mr. Rudd's eminence in the Canary world; he has shipped Norwich birds all over the world, and in the last few weeks has despatched the golden little songsters to Mexico, South Nigeria, Russia, Canada, India, South Africa, and the United States. And that's how our yellow birds win world wide fame."

How Waxwings Are Welcomed in Ireland.

According to the "Fermanagh Times," a fine Waxwing has been shot near Blaney on Lower Lough Erne. This novel visitor is the first recorded for Fermanagh, and it presence was probably due to severe weather recently on the Continent, says the paper in question. "Should a second specimen be found in any of the woodlands of the Lower Erne Mr. —— of ——, would give a good price for it for our National Museum, as the first has been unfortunately destroyed." We have omitted the name of the would be purchaser of a slaughtered Waxwing.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite, etc. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

The Coloured Plate of the Goldfinch Bullfinch Hybrid is excellent. G. Hall (Byfield).

Your Palace Show report is the best I ever read, and I've seen a fair lot of them.—A. Gibson (Edinburgh).

At a meeting held Feb. 20, writes Mr. J. Ewart, sec. Thrums C. and C.B.A., Kirriemuir, it was unanimously agreed to hold our annual open show on Dec. 5. Will secretaries kindly note.

I was more than pleased to see in Cage Birds the portrait of my variegated Goldfinch-Canary Mule, 3rd at Bournemouth Show, the first I have had on paper, but I hope not the last. Bournemouth was the first time of showing him; since then he has won at Boscombe, 1st for Goldfinch-Greenfinch. The drawing is a credit to the artist. I thank you for the honour, and wish Cage Birds every success. It has been my friend for the last five years.—E. T. Hames.

The February issue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, 1s. monthly, is of very great interest. A long list is given of finds of reddish eggs of species of birds whose eggs do not usually show this colouration. Numerous examples of recent visits of species rare in our islands are recorded, among them being the Slender-billed Nutcracker, Continental Coal Tit, Pallas's Great Grey Shrike, Tengmalm's Owl, Melodious Warbler, and Indian Stone-chat. Accounts are given showing the wide-spread incursion of Waxwings which has taken place during the winter, and other letters and articles complete a good number.

The February issue of the Avicultural Magazine, the Journal of the Avicultural Society, opens with an article on the Sun-Bittern, by Mr. D. Seth-Smith, F.Z.S., with a beautiful drawing of the bird in display, by Mr. Roland Green, from a photograph by the author. The Marquis of Tavistock writes entertainingly on Foreign Doves at Liberty, with many interesting details as to individual species. Mr. G. A. Heumann contributes an account of a trip in Northern Australia, with notes on Hooded Parrakeets, and many other birds. Mr. H. D. Astley, the Editor, writes of the rare and beautiful Celebean Ground Thrush, and gives a clever drawing from his own brush. The Lady Wm. Cecil sends "A Few Bird Notes from Southern Provence," and Mrs. T. Curry, under the heading "Breakfast Guests," tells of a tame Great Tit.

OBITUARY.

Mr. James Smith, Bolton.

I regret to announce, writes Mr. J. Gerrard, of Bolton C.B.S., the very sudden death of one of our oldest members, Mr. James Smith—"Big Smith," as he was generally known to a large circle of fanciers in Lancashire. He had his tea, apparently in good health, on Tuesday last, and was talking to his wife, when he was suddenly seized and was dead in a minute. He leaves a widow, three grown sons, and a daughter. I am sure all fanciers will sympathise with them in their bereavement.

A Fearless Robin.

Mr. J. Packham writes to the Editor of "Country Life": The Robin has long been a favourite with the animal photographer, but attempts to attract the bird by means of food held in the hand are not commonly made. The secret lies in the fact that Robins are especially fond of sultanas. If some of these are kept conveniently near so that a few may be thrown to the Robin who comes to the door, the bird will soon become a constant visitor, and will gradually acquire enough confidence to take the sultanas from the outstretched hand. Young birds especially give little trouble; even before the ruddy breast is attained the patient photographer may have accomplished his purpose.

"Please thank all readers who sent applications for my birds advertised in CAGE BIRDS of February 14th. I find it impossible to answer all, as I have had letters from all over the country, which speaks well for CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium."—C. W. LILE (Matlock).

"Allow me to thank, through your valuable and widely-read paper, CAGE BIRDS, all applicants for my African Grey Parrot, advertised February 28th. I had 27 letters and cards and three telegrams for her. Sorry I could not reply to all. I sold her on Friday evening to a Bradford gentleman, who came over and took her back with him. I also had a gentleman call from Manchester, and two from Todmorden. So you see how quick your paper must be in the hands of readers looking for birds. I have had three other papers wishing me to give them a trial with adverts. but shall stick to CAGE BIRDS as the "ONE AND ONLY."—W. CROMPTON (Rochdale).

"Allow me to thank all those that answered my advertisement re Yellow Norwich Cock. I have had so many that I am quite unable to reply to them all, and every post brings a fresh batch. I am only sorry I have no more such birds for disposal. I thank CAGE BIRDS and wish it every success"—JOHN HARDIE (Edinburgh and District C.B.S.).

"Kindly thank all who replied to my advert in CAGE BIRDS. I had so many replies that I could not answer them all. Wishing your valuable paper every success."—H. WAKENSHAW (Newsham).

"Allow me to thank those who answered my advt. in CAGE BIRDS, re Cinnamon Hedge Sparrow, as there were too many to write to all. According to the answers I received your paper—CAGE BIRDS—must have a very wide circulation."—J. W. ROBSON (Burnhope).

"Kindly thank the numerous applicants to my last advertisement. I had over 40 replies, which shows what a splendid advt. medium CAGE BIRDS is."—H. J. BUTLER (Pokesdown).

Am in receipt of Diploma, for which I thank you. It is very pretty and artistic, and will make a very nice picture when framed and one I shall be very proud of. The calendars you sent me I have distributed amongst bird-keepers in this district, and I hope this will mean a wider circulation of your valuable paper, which I am sure provides a wealth of information for all bird-keepers.—Sydney S. Brooks (Winsford).

I find, on looking through my prize cards of local and other shows that I have managed to get something like 200 cards, writes Mr. George S. Woodcock (Plaistow), the bulk of which are prizes, and have only sent to one show with no result—not so bad for a novice. I have this season captured a "C.B." Foreign Diploma and Soft-bill ditto. There is not the slightest doubt that a close weekly perusal of "C.B." has assisted me greatly.

The Delusive Promise of Spring.

Under the roof of a building in Peover, Cheshire, a pair of Starlings, "shepsters," as they are known in the district, have made their nest and succeeded in defying the winds that blow across the Cheshire plain; and yesterday they were proudly engaged in watching over three tiny birds, now a week old, writes "W. C." in the "Manchester Dispatch." A nest containing four House Sparrows has also been found. These are, indeed, early birds, but many instances of early nesting are reported each year. A nest containing three Thrush's eggs was found at Alderley a month ago, but the birds did not hatch out the eggs; in fact, the nest was deserted quite early. Few of our smaller birds escape the rigour of the English climate, for the cold winds of March and early April are too much for the fledglings when they are by force of circumstances compelled to forage for themselves.

A Useful Catalogue.

Mr. Enoch Tams, the well-known fanciers' provider, of Church Street, Longton, Staffs., has sent us a copy of his new catalogue. Bird-keepers will be hard indeed to please if they cannot find what they desire among the thousand and one things offered in this well got up and profusely illustrated compendium. The now celebrated "White Pottery" is quite a feature, and in this sanitary material is offered bird fountains, egg drawers, baths, nest pans, etc., in every possible variety. Show cages, stock cages, breeding cages, and nursery cages of every conceivable pattern seem to be mentioned, and all the odds and ends needed by the fancier who makes his own cages are offered. Foods for insectivorous birds and seeds for seed-eaters are all procurable from this Whiteley among bird fanciers. A copy of the catalogue should be in the possession of every bird-keeper.

Nestlings, Food & Feeders

A lecture given to the members of Colinton and Currie Parishes O.S. by J. Steel (Dalkeith).

MR. Chairman and Fellow Fanciers: Before dealing with the subject of my lecture I would like to state my appreciation of the good attendance to-night. Many fanciers who could give us useful and most interesting information shun the role of lecturer lest their efforts be wasted on a row of empty forms.

As only one breeding season has passed since, in the columns of your paper CAGE BIRDS, I dealt with the question of infantile mortality in nestlings, and, of course, included the food and feeding, I find it somewhat difficult to avoid repetition, but for the sake of the younger recruits, and lest there should be a fancier present so blind to his interests as not to read CAGE BIRDS, a short summary of my views therein expressed is perhaps necessary.

The Feeding Hen.

I am more than ever convinced that only by a process of elimination (weeding out) can that maternal instinct which prompts a bird to perform the duty of nourishing its offspring be maintained. That such maternal quality is deteriorating is very evident from the largely increasing mortality, due in a degree to bad feeders, also from the demand for new forms of food, in hopes of providing some mysterious element either to supply nourishment to the young or stimulate the hen into a better performance of her duties.

Another proof is the increasing necessity for such hens (generally non-cultivated) as still retain sufficient of their maternal instinct to perform the part of foster-parent to the degenerates, and thus perpetuate the decadence. The difficulty of obtaining reliable feeders even in a common stock is also increasing, though I have the opinion that many failures attributed to the feeder are primarily due to a lack of vitality in the nestling, that being a defect which the difficulty of attaining type compels the breeder of high-class stock to ignore.

If She is a Non-Feeding Hen.

We have also an increasing number driven to the expediency of hand feeding; and there is a large demand for a mechanical contrivance for this purpose. So convinced am I that the remedy lies not in any mysterious combination of foods but in the cultivation of stamina, and the quality of maternal instinct in our stock, that if ever I am forced to adopt the duties of dry-nurse to a brood of degenerate Canaries, a duty which I could never perform so well as an eighteen-penny hen Canary, and so exacting that I would not dream of asking one of my household to do it, that day will mark my retirement from the ranks.

Apropos of this, I was recently the victim of a grim joke. A certain fancier had prepared the following question for me to answer at a lecture: "Having been informed that you use iron as a cure for debility and bad feeding, would you explain what form of iron and what method of administration you adopt?" His informant had already dropped me a card telling me of the impending question, and asking me to "bring a jack-hammer." No doubt this may appear drastic, but it is true nevertheless, that a well applied jack-hammer, or some equally efficient means of thinning out, is sadly needed in many stocks if the degeneracy evident therein is to be arrested before it reaches that stage known as past praying for.

Many Foods. But Egg Food the Best.

Coming, as I do, in contact with many fanciers, I have seen many methods of obviating the evils of debility, some of which might be termed crude, and more suited to the requirements of the barn-door fowl than Canaries, yet when one gets an ocular proof that such unorthodox methods are occasionally successful we are forced to the conclusion that, like the proverbial billy goat which is said to draw the line only at tomato cans, the Canary is a somewhat omnivorous kinder critter, and it behoves us to pause before condemning the preparations we have in the market, as most of them possess a generous proportion of the various essentials for the building up of bone and muscle.

I have tried myself, and watched experiments made by other breeders, with various preparations, some of which purported to solve the question of bad feeding hens, but that any food will solve this question I do not believe. I am certain that some hens will refuse to supply any form of food whatsoever, but I have yet to find a food preparation which equals the combination of hard boiled egg and farina, in the form of biscuit, etc. I have the opinion that much of the success which follows this food is attributable to the preference which the majority of hens evince for it, and this is a point which merits consideration, as, however suitable a food may be, unless it appeals to the taste of the parent its value is nullified. No doubt certain hens have idiosyncratic tastes, and by pandering to such I have myself saved many broods. One breeder who discovered that a certain hen preferred rice pudding to any other food wisely humoured her and saved a valuable brood, and I have recorded many similar instances.

On the other hand, I have lost many in a vain attempt to educate the hen to my ideas of what was best for her young. Only a few seasons ago I was persuaded to try a system which I was assured had proved effectual in rearing a normal proportion, both for my informant and others whom he had persuaded to adopt it. Yet out of sixteen pairs, the majority of which had proved good parents the previous season, I only reared four young, and by reverting to my former method with two of the worst I got two broods of four each successfully reared, and by a continuation of my own method got 94 young the following season. The lesson I learned from this was the futility of persisting, and the experimenter would be wise to discontinue his attempts whenever the hen is seen to feed in that half-hearted manner which spells an arrested development for her young.

Some Useful Recipes for Egg Food.

We have an annual outcry against the use of eggs as a food, but there is scarcely an item in the birdy menu, with the possible exception of Canary seed, but has been condemned by some writer or other. Yet I find that those who use egg in the greatest proportion have extra good results, which is so confirmative of my own experiences that I am resolved to make my future experiments with a mixture containing over 90 per cent. of egg, that being the most favoured by breeders in this district. The biscuit used is known as rice or sponge, generally the former, the recipes for which, having made them twice weekly for years, I am fairly conversant with. The best quality rice biscuit is made thus: 14 eggs, 14 ounces of sugar, 1 ounce of flour, 4 ounces of ground rice. That is, only 5 ounces of farina, and when we consider that in preparing the food a further addition of over three parts by weight of hard boiled egg is made, it will be seen that the combination is almost entirely egg.

Sponge biscuits contain more flour; the best grade recipe being 2¼ lbs. of flour, ½ ounce of bicarbonate of soda, 1 ounce of cream of tartar, 1½ lbs. of sugar, 15 eggs. It will be seen that the former is much the better value, and the rice is a valuable food, its anti-diarrhœtic effect on nestlings being well known. The fancier who cannot obtain these, or proposes making them at home, need not make a biscuit form, as a cake is a much more convenient, and if cut into small squares and well dried in a cool oven keeps well.

I have also made a plainer variety, but I would caution breeders against the use of so-called sponge biscuit which emanates from some of the big factories, as in some of these a vegetable dye replaces the eggs, and the sweetness is in some cases derived from a mineral product having no nutritive value.

I have had good results from the use of Osborne Biscuits and egg, and even better by using a biscuit which I made for the purpose and which should be worthy the attention of any baker in a district of bird fanciers. This was made from the following recipe: 3 lbs. prepared or self-raising flour (or ordinary flour and baking powder may be used), 1 lb. finest ground rice, 6 ounces of best butter, 4 ounces of cod liver oil, 8 ounces soft sugar, pinch of salt. Method: Make a well of the flour, place the sugar, oil, and butter therein, and cream them well together with the hand then rub the lot into the flour till properly incorporated, make the well again, and add as much cold water as will make a stiff biscuit dough, give a thorough knead up, and let it lie for a while, then either roll out or machine off in the usual manner, prickle right through, and bake on wires to a nice fawn colour in a fairly hot oven. The cost of the above material is a little over 1s. 6d., and if sold at 8d. per lb. would leave a fair margin of profit. These, used in the proportion of 1¼ ounce to each hard-boiled egg, will be found to make a good food for nestlings, and equally suitable for mixing with colour food. I myself have repeatedly had hens rear nests of six on this, though they were unaided by the cock.

If the hen refuses her duties the young may be saved, as is being done by the lady reader here seen.

I always supply best Canary, hemp (uncrushed), and German rape in addition, increasing the supply of hemp as the brood gets older, and when weaning off supply crushed hemp, freshly prepared twice daily, till I observe from the husks that they are able to shell Canary seed, when I gradually reduce the supply of hemp and also the proportion of egg in the food.

BIRD-ROOM APPLIANCES EXPLAINED.

ANOTHER rather ingenious hopper for a flight shown in Fig. 15, is constructed out of a large mustard tin. It holds a considerable quantity of seed, and with its use there is scarcely any waste. It is long enough to hang over several pot holes or at the doorway, the door being raised an inch or so to allow the birds to feed. If enamelled, this hopper does not look at all like a home-made article.

We now come to another very important item in the fittings of the bird room, that is the water vessel. We will take the common tin or zinc drinker first (Fig 16 F), one that is not generally made much use of in the breeding room, but certainly very handy for the show cage. It is a very useful little drinker, but always liable to leak and leave a bird some hours without water. This has been somewhat overcome by constructing one of zinc, which is not so liable to rust, but many fanciers have a very strong objection to using zinc vessels of any kind, and so they are not much in favour.

Of glass drinkers there are many kinds, and some of them are depicted. The oldest pattern is the one with a top to it, marked A. This has been in use a number of years, its chief merit being that the water is not contaminated by dust, but on the other hand it is rather difficult to clean thoroughly.

Another at B, which is an improvement on the above is made with a rather larger opening, and the interior corners somewhat rounded. This form of drinker is used by many successful fanciers, but is hardly so popular as the one at C, which has no top, but is smoothly rounded inside, and is therefore easily kept clean. If they are put into a basin of soda water once a week and thoroughly rubbed round, they are as clean as, or cleaner than when first purchased. Fanciers should see that they purchase those made of English glass, as they are far superior, and cost very little more.

At D is a flat sided drinker on practically the same lines, but not so nicely rounded inside The drinkers depicted at C are made in various sizes, the smaller ones being chiefly used for Borders, or for sick birds, as they contain much less liquid. The round glass drinker at E is mostly used for the same purpose.

"CAGE BIRDS,"

By J. TOMLINSON

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

IF they are from the old cock paired with a daughter, then the quality is on the old cock's side. If from the mother paired with her son, then the quality of the old hen predominates.

Assuming the latter to be the case, and it is desired to further inbreed, select the best singing young cock from this second cross of son and mother, and mate it with the old hen, and a nest sister to this young cock and pair it to the old cock. In this cross of son again to mother, you are gradually working the blood of the young stock back again to the quality of the old hen. In the other case of grand-daughter to the old cock, the good quality of the old hen is being transmitted into the blood on the old cock side.

On the other hand, if the good quality is noticed in those youngsters that were produced by pairing daughter to sire, such good quality is on the old cock's side; this is easily to be understood, because the dominant factor is the preponderance of the blood of the old cock. If you wish to further inbreed from this cross of daughter to sire, select a nest sister to the best singing young cock, and pair it back again with the old cock. By this inbreeding you will cultivate the good tours, endeavouring at the same time to eradicate the faulty ones, by choosing only the best specimens to breed from.

Strong healthy birds only should be used, and it is not wise to carry this interbreeding too far, or the stamina of the stock will suffer. As there is high-class stock on the market, that approaches the ideal Roller, there is little besides experience to be gained by inbreeding with common stock, and this will be no more than a "mere side line" in the production of the better class Roller.

Does the Standard require Revision?

Our ideal has been set by a standard of points to be awarded for the good tours, a number of points to be deducted for the faulty ones, and a number to be awarded for what we call the general effect; which means the way the bird sings its song. It is of little use to give the present standard, as there is a general impression that it requires alteration. It is certain that a sufficient number of points cannot be given by this standard to reward some birds for the style they will sing one or another of the good tours, and the only way out of the difficulty at present is to tack a point on in the "general effect" as a reward for this good quality. If the new standard is set before these articles are completed, I will give an outline of it for the benefit of those fanciers who live in isolated districts. Their lot, from my point of view, is a hard one, in many instances there is no Roller society within reasonable distance, and if they become members of the nearest society, it is not often they can attend any of the club's meetings.

The best time of the year to purchase hens is during the autumn, say from September to November. By this time the moult should be completed. Only strong, healthy, clean, moulted birds, i.e., those that have completed the moult, should be chosen. The eyes of a healthy specimen are clear and bright. It is of a lively disposition, the movements are brisk, the bird is practically always on the move. The breast should be plump, and not sunk in on each side of the bone. The stomach should be more compressed than the breast, and should not be rounded as though it contained an egg, as this tells of bowel trouble. An ailing bird will show signs of illness by its dull and listless appearance; it sits quietly with ruffled plumage, the eyes are dull, and the breath is taken heavily.

No Particular Age Limit.

The age of the birds must be left to the discretion of the purchaser, but if two-year-old hens can be obtained that have proved good mothers, it will be an encouragement to a new fancier; and many of the little difficulties connected with young hens will be avoided. Some young hens will go about their business like an "old hand," while others will only give their chicks sufficient food to maintain their existence, consequently they are only skin and bones, whereas layers of creamy coloured fat will cover the backs, flanks and stomachs of those fed by a good hen.

The Folly of Over-taxing the Hens.

Hens that have reared, unaided by the cock, more than three nests of youngsters in one year should be rested, as further breeding would prove a great strain on their stamina, and might render them useless for the following year's breeding. In fact, two nests of youngsters from a hen in one year are quite sufficient, so as to give her an opportunity to recuperate and commence the moult in the proper season. She can then be reasonably expected to be again fruitful in the following year; but some fanciers will not see the policy of reasonable treatment; their motto is to get all out of a bird in one season, then sell it off, for some one else to have the trouble with.

I have argued time after time with fanciers on this subject, because I contend that it amounts to nothing more or less than selfishness. One of my own best feeding hens is wearing the closed 1907 B.R.C.C. ring, and last year she laid 15 eggs in two nests. Another good feeder is rung 1909, and another 1910. Taking the treatment the latter hen has received, I look on her yet as quite a youngster.

It is only under exceptional circumstances that hens should be allowed to go to nest after the third or fourth week in June, for where they are allowed to breed late in the season the young often get neglected, as the hen's energy begins to lag, and if she breaks into a moult while her brood are helpless in the nest, it is an off chance of them ever being reared.

Early Youngsters the Best.

It is also exceptional for very late bred youngsters to be useful for the following year's breeding, they will not be matured, and, even should they breed, strong stock is not to be expected from immature parents. I wish you to realise the value of two or three nests in one season, as against four or more, so that you may send out to your customers a class of article that you would not scruple to use in your own breeding cages, otherwise you will not find a market again with that customer, or any of his acquaintances.

Cock birds should be purchased from November to January, the early bred birds will be nicely in song by November, yet will not have a fully developed song, and a few more months will make a deal of difference to the depth and fullness of tone. Birds that are not in full song by January cannot be expected to give satisfaction in that year's breeding, but this should not preclude the purchase of a good class songster, as it will pay to keep it over for the following year, and in the meantime use it for a tutor.

Where to procure the birds is left to the discretion of the buyer, for it would not be just to recommend one advertising breeder or dealer in preference to another. Where satisfaction has been previously obtained, either to yourself or any of your acquaintances, I would certainly say deal with that party again if he has anything to suit you.

In dealing with a stranger it is advisable to use the deposit system; this is often a safeguard to both parties, and no reasonable objection is likely to be raised against this system of selling birds of a moderate quality, although some fanciers object to sending contest birds out on approval; and especially to strangers. A great deal may be said in favour of this objection; in many instances a few simple instructions as to their treatment have been sent with the birds and these have been totally disregarded, others will keep them over the stated time of approval.

Not so Sick as it Seemed.

I once sent a contest singer out on approval, with instructions how the bird had been fed, and the conditions under which it had been kept. The time of approval was allowed to expire, and several days after the proper time I received a letter informing me that the bird was being returned as it was ill, and the consignee did not wish it to die on his hands. I found the bird suffering with its bowels, and had it not received prompt treatment it would have turned to inflammation. Under the circumstances I concluded that some unsuitable food had been given, but I got the bland reply that my instructions had been carried out. I afterwards bred from this bird, and probably the gentleman that returned it will be pleased to know that it won its new owner 2nd prize and a silver medal at the last Leeds contest.

Had I the permission I could quote other cases where sellers of contest birds have been treated very shabbily by would-be purchasers, but I have shown a good reason against sending valuable birds out on approval. This does not mean that you would be buying a "pig in a bag," because they should be guaranteed to be as represented, and if they do not come up to the representation then there is good reason for their return.

If it is convenient make a personal visit to the breeder's rooms, and with his assistance choose your own birds. In any case do not fall into the error that is characteristic of the beginner and apply for a pair of yellows; of course, this would be quite all right were the birds suitably matched from a song point of view, but our Roller is a poor yellow compared with the yellow Norwich or Yorkshire Canary.

No Especial Virtue in Markings.

Some buyers prefer green and variegated birds, as the opinion seems widely spread that these are stronger than the buffs. There is only one difference that I have found, and that is the great majority are deeper in tone of song than the light coloured bird. Another will require a low sweet singer without any harsh notes, and still another will ask for one that holds his rolls out well, but must not sing any objectionable notes because it is wanted for a schoolmaster. I have received these and other enquiries, and in nearly every case the one stipulation has been made that they do not wish to go to much expense.

It should be understood that all faulty tours are more or less harsh or objectionable to the ear, so in valuing a bird we must give consideration to its breeding, also the quality and variety of the good tours, as a set off or recompense for the faulty ones. So, generally, a low sweet singer, without harshness, or a schoolmaster that holds its rolls out well without anything objectionable, does not come under the category of a cheap songster. The average breeder has not the time at his disposal to explain the why and wherefore to every enquirer, unless he burns the "midnight oil," and I believe many of us have to do it.

There is no uniform method of packing live birds for a railway journey. Some will use a wooden box with a few ventilation holes, others a box with a wire front; both answer the purpose well on a short railway journey, or where the birds are travelling during the night to be delivered early the following morning. The Germans are ahead of us, and have invented what up to the present constitutes the ideal Roller travelling cage and case. The small stick cage with the stone drinker and seed hopper is so well known that description is unnecessary. The case is made of strong cardboard, with a circular hole in each end, about one and a half inches in diameter. Glass is fastened over the holes from the inside, which gives the bird sufficient light to feed en route. They are a great improvement over our old-fashioned method of using a brown paper covering, and can be obtained from any of the dealers who specialise for the Roller Fancy.

A few lines of advice in despatching or receiving birds by rail will probably be welcomed. Where the German stick travelling cage is used, instead of filling the water fountain with water, which would certainly be spilt en route, pack the fountain with a piece of sponge, and pour as much water over it until the sponge is full and the fountain about half full; this will keep the sponge moist and there will be no danger of the bird suffering from thirst.

Another method, and one which I much prefer to using a piece of sponge, is to pack the drinker with bread that has previously been soaked in boiling milk, and to pour sufficient milk over it to keep it moist. If the sponge is used a piece of this moist bread should be put into one end of the seed hopper; and the seed in the other. Birds are very fond of this bread and milk, and often it is the only thing left for them, as the seed gets upset on the journey, and works out of the cage into the wrapper.

The by-laws relating to the carriage of birds by rail will differ on some railways. I dispatched a bird from one of the London Brighton and South Coast Rly. Co.'s stations to the Crystal Palace, and the fee was fourpence; whereas the fee that appears to be adopted by the provincial railway companies is fourpence for a consignment weighing up to 1lb., and 50 per cent. extra because of the frail nature of the consignment.

Why Some Norwich Plainhead Canary Breeders Fail.

A FEW "STRAIGHT TIPS" BY Mr. E. W. ALLSOPP (Cardiff).

WELL, now we have reached the point of proper management versus mismanagement of Norwich Plainheads. On the one hand, we have the successful breeder, his birds and household just one harmonious whole. I shall experience no difficulty in persuading you that our healthy, bright, vivacious and well-managed Plainhead is a wonderful little chap, whose moods (and he has them) are easily interpreted by the successful breeder. Joy, sorrow, anger, disappointment are a few he experiences, whilst anticipation, realisation and gratification are also clearly expressed and easily interpreted from his manner and pose.

The Importance of the Stud Book.

Nevertheless, the successful breeder, although he has to deal with so versatile a character, makes no mistake. The value of his stock is appraised under normal or usual conditions. At a certain season of the year he carefully confides every detail of moment to his stud book, in which he notes for future reference the failing head, weak neck, lack of substance, slackness at thighs, and all the other more or less minor faults he knows he has to battle with, and which he will fight successfully, for is not his foundation built upon solid cold facts? With his stock always properly managed, and with his books, which are the servants of his brains, we may well leave him, for success is already his, or will surely be so.

How fares it with our beginner in the Fancy—he who is happy in the possession of previously mismanaged stock? If you are a bosom pal of his, he will tell you in all seriousness: "I really ought to succeed, for no one could have pairs of better stock than I—why, some have even won upon the show bench!" Nice, bold, round skulls; short, thick necks; wonderful substance; well cleaned out at vent, and no slackness at thighs, he says is the rule, and not the exception, with his stock. Little does he realise that their seeming excellence may eventually prove his undoing.

When Defects Begin to Show.

If he be a beginner of the younger generation, he will almost surely have primed himself with some reliable knowledge as how best to feed and tend his stock. With the near approach of the breeding season, however, he notes the more lengthy body, wings and tail, the tightening plumage which has disarranged the hitherto neatness at vent and thighs. A nasty frill has developed down the breast, even the nice, bold, round skulls have now a pinched or narrow entrance, and although these are faults which have always existed in the stock, he now attributes them to merely normal breeding conditions.

Only, however, in a measure is this so. As he carefully and methodically tends his stock, and successfully rears a crop of youngsters, he is serenely happy. "No one could have started better than I," he hums to himself, and the writing upon the wall, decipherable even though covered with the dust and dirt of the experiences of many generations of good and true fanciers, is not interpreted. But the moulting season has passed, and though he searches his stock with hungry but impartial eyes, nothing of merit can he find. Nor can even his more experienced and successful pal find anything for him.

"Really," he says to the sharer of all his joys and sorrows, "I cannot make it out. My birds have been doing well, but something seems wrong. The old birds are not worth looking at now; they seem full of faults. As for the youngsters—well, I am disappointed. If this is Plainhead breeding, when one starts with real good, expensive stock like I had, what must it be like when one starts with rotters? Still, I must not mind; matters will no doubt improve with another season."

Hoping Against Hope.

With the introduction of another hitherto consistently mismanaged bird or so into his stud, which he rearranges after much careful study, he hopefully plods into another season. But the writing upon the wall is still unheeded, and no progress can be recorded. So presently another promising fancier quits the Fancy, broken in spirit and ashamed. If sometimes one could read his innermost thoughts, one would find them run like this: "So-and-so is an artful old dog; never sells his best stock." The character of even the painstaking upright judge is dimmed in the sight of this erstwhile Fancier; the hard-working steward, the Railway Co., the Seed Merchant in a small but honest way of business, even his bosom pal, are all unjustly blamed, and his whole outlook upon the Fancy is distorted or warped. Why? Simply because, when he entered into his stud book those particulars, "Nice, round, full skull; short thick neck; wonderful substance, etc." they did not exist. The very fulness and roundness of skull, and short thick neck are only due to the general slackness of feather, the outcome of mismanagement; the wonderful body substance to a ball of fat; the neatness at vent and thighs merely to the tightness of the abdominal skin, distended almost to rupture because of the layer of fat beneath it. In short, the whole fabric has been built upon deception; a quagmire which has engulfed thousands of beginners. Indeed, very few escape.

Be Wise in Time.

My friends delight to "pull my leg" about my "hurry" when I declare about the end of October that I have provisionally paired my stock for the next season. They will now, I think, realise that in doing so I am merely seizing a fleeting opportunity during the lifetime of that opportunity. At that period of the year I realise that I can with more accuracy than at any other enter into my stud book the good and faulty features of my stock. Good features are truly noted, and consequently nurtured. Failings are similarly noted in their varying degrees, and counterbalancing influences for progress towards perfection applied. No "perfections" that do not exist, or exaggerations, are recorded. I just want plain facts in my book, obtained when the birds are as nearly as possible normal, and not in February or March. And facts of this order will allow you, readers, as they have already allowed me, to declare that 50 per cent. of my success as a breeder and exhibitor of Norwich Plainheads is attributable to the careful mating of stock each season, but, lest you forget, matings based upon the outcome of proper management, not mismanagement.

Sometimes, as I review the happenings during the show season, methinks I can read into the very awards of our judges this menace to our typical, well-managed Plainheads. Our fat, flabby, apathetic creation, with his fictitious good points, is scared into a hop, now this way, now that, and "Yes, he has it," says someone. The judge seems to see only the fictitious excellence which is visible—yes, now and to-morrow, and even the next day, a lying mockery of the breed. But it is not always so, my friends. I regularly peruse my CAGE BIRDS, and I ofttimes read "First, a gem, seldom is a Plainhead exhibited with such true Norwich properties, etc." Then I realise that from the struggle our properly managed, vivacious Plainhead has emerged triumphant, and I am happy. Though I have taken you a long journey to tell you a simple home truth, I trust there is no suspicion of weariness, but an awakening which will be reflected in some progress of the breed.

Nurturing the Novice.

It may be well, perhaps, to review a much debated feature, i.e., the novice and his position of to-day. Never in the history of the Fancy have so much time, thought, energy, and cash been devoted in an endeavour to nurture some of these tender babes; and never in the history of the Fancy has there been rampant the discontent which rules to-day.

Why? Well, each year marks the entry into the Fancy of hundreds of novices, each inspired with the desire to spend his or her spare time in a peaceful happy hobby, in a peaceful happy way, and for which they have (or think they have) some natural aptitude, with no idea of any profit financially. Others (and these are many) are inspired solely by ambition, a genuine desire to climb from the bottom to the top rung of the ladder, also with no thought of financial profit. Others commence with a desire to combine both—i.e., ambition and profit, and others again merely for profit. We make them all welcome—alas, too welcome!

We simply do all we can (don't include your humble, please!) to deflect their attention from the real task that is plainly and certainly ahead of each beginner. An imposing halfway house has been provided.

Sounds of sweet music and revelry are wafted from within, through the ever open door. Is it any wonder that our novice decides to halt and rest by the way? Once inside, he has a look round, and then ejaculates: "Well, this is a treat! Specials and other handsome prizes galore; actually whole sections for myself and others no better than myself!"

MODERN CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS FOR THE NOVICE.

By THOMAS LANE (Barnstaple).

THIS may be right or wrong. We prefer to know what their parents were like. Perhaps the father of their best Crested cock was also a Crested cock, and rough in feather through being double crested. The mother of their best Crestbred hen (to be paired to the best Crested cock) may also be a Crestbred hen bred from two light birds and short in frontals. What would you expect from such a mating? A good bird might turn up but another half-dozen would certainly put in an appearance, which would be real rotten. Having been through the mill, I know.

On the other hand, if your best pair were a Green Crested cock bred from a Clear or Ticked Crestbred cock and a Variegated dark-crested hen and your best Crestbred hen (to be paired to the above cock) was a clear or ticked bird bred from a clear bodied dark-crested hen and a Green Crestbred cock you would get something worth looking at, provided their parents, crests were clean and smooth at the back of the head.

Here you have an equal blending of the Crest and Plainhead blood, i.e., Crested cock, Crestbred hen, Crestbred cock, and Crested hen, together with the blending of the light and dark feather. It stands to reason that the brood from the above pair would be of infinitely greater value not only to the breeder himself but to whomsoever he may sell them. We know their pedigree—hence their value.

Now, supposing the novice, having bred a few youngsters from his bought pair or two, should select two or three sisters, if he is lucky enough to breed them. I have bred four Crestbred hens in one season from the same pair—Crestbred hens for preference. These are better breeders and much cheaper than good Crested hens, which are somewhat scarce as a rule. If you have a sister—or Crested hen, and she is a nice one, with a smooth, well-formed crest, you can try her as well if you are short of Crestbred hens.

If you select two Crestbred hens, bred from your purchased birds, these latter should be a Clear or Ticked Crestbred cock and a Variegated or Green Crested hen. For the two Crestbred hens you should get from two well-known breeders two Crested cocks, and, if possible, they should have been bred from a Crestbred cock and a Crested hen, as I mentioned before.

The youngsters from these matings will, of course, be cousins. The following season you pair the best of the cousins together, blending their properties of head and colour, as I told you previously.

"I do not recommend the pairing together of two light birds. They not only breed a large percentage of light-plumaged progeny, if any at all, but as a rule the birds are very weak." This was given as his experience by a very old and widely-known breeder when asked for his opinion on the subject.

On the other hand, you can put two Greens together with the best of results. The youngsters of this mating are not only heavily feathered, but larger in body and head, and possess, in addition, that long, dense, veiny feather so much admired by fanciers. These double greens, when paired to light birds the following season, produce young of the highest quality. Some of them, the big and strong ones, can be paired back to the original parents, if their heads and colour will match, and the novice will be pleased with the result.

In selecting your young Crested birds for stock see that they have well-formed, drooping crests. Avoid those with thin airy feather, and that roughness at the back of the head which is usually known as "hocus." This is a very bad fault, and should be avoided as much as possible. Roughness occurs sometimes in the best of strains, so don't breed for it.

When choosing your Crest-breds see to it that they have large domed skulls, good wide entrance, and in the cocks, they should be well lashed. The head feather should be dense and long, turning well over the beak, and see that the entrance feather, viz., the feather growing at the base of the beak, is also long. A short feather here often produces weak frontal crests in your young birds unless paired to crest with very heavy frontal. Avoid then this fault as far as possible when selecting your stock.

Have your Crests and Crest-breds with good Bullfinch type bodies—the feather, though heavy, should be clean and smooth to the body. Roughness and untidy body feather often go together with rough crests, so steer clear of this, too, as much as you can.

I should not advise the novice to double-crest his stock until he has gained sufficient knowledge to know what he is doing it for. As far as I know I do not think it is done for the sole purpose of getting more Crests than Crest-breds. If you get more Crested youngsters from such a union you will find that the majority of them are very rough at the back of the head, and some devoid of centre. Undoubtedly it is done by many breeders for the purpose of getting substance of crest feather—they generally pair birds with perfect crests, and not too dense in head feather to gain the point.

Some fanciers are of opinion that the Crest-breds bred from double Crests are the more valuable. These Crest-breds, when paired back to Crests (bred in the ordinary way, viz., Crest to Crest-bred), often produce young of the first water. With regard to double Crest-bred mating, I have only had one experiment, and this was only done to prevent the Crest-bred cock from breaking his heart. He, like many mortals, had lost his wife (but too early in the season!), so to console him, or, rather, to stop him from singing his head off, I paired him to his neighbour, a Crest bred hen, on the reserve list.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the some sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems), will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CRESTED NORWICH AILING (Novice, Stoke Newington).—See reply to "B. H. G." in this issue, and treat the bird the same as therein advised, but in addition give a small stool of young growing dandelion as advised to "McTartan," three times a week. Also be particular to see that the bird is free from exposure to cold draughts, and other exciting causes of colds.

FEATHERS RUFFLED UP (A New Beginner).—Treat bird for three weeks the same as advised to "McTartan" in this issue—one week on the plain spare diet with salts in water, and then a fortnight as named at end of that reply. If the bird seems to have no more power in its voice at end of that time, you may treat for a fortnight the same as advised to "B. H. G." in this issue, which should set matters right. See that it is not exposed to cold draughts.

ROLLER WHEEZES (Pomona, Sheffield). I am afraid the career of this bird is pretty well ruined The open cage near the window may really be at the root of the mischief. Keep it in a box pattern cage, in a bright, cosy position, quite free from draughts or extreme fluctuation, but not necessarily overheated. Treat as advised to "M.C." for three or four weeks until the moulting is stopped, but give the quinine solution every second day only, and on the alternating days give 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together in the water. Report progress in a month, and refer to this reply, when I will advise further, if necessary.

CAUSE OF BLINDNESS (S. Ward).—Cataract is the cause of your bird going blind. There is no cure whatever for the disease in birds. The bird will live happily enough in its way if properly treated, and after a time will probably sing fairly well. A similarly affected bird which I gave away as a pet some time ago, sings quite well, and has even been taught the clever trick of "drawing its own water supply" as required. I cannot tell whether the smoke from the fire would cause the trouble without knowing in what way, and to what extent, it is exposed to smoke. But no bird kept under proper conditions should be exposed to such a thing.

NOT SINGING AND DROPPING FEATHERS (M. C.). The loss of feathers is rather significant, and may give the clue to the loss of song. See that the bird is kept in a bright, healthy position, well aired, but free from cold draughts or extreme sudden fluctuations. Do not hang it near the ceiling, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. Having attended to these points, give, in addition to the staple of plain canary, half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal part summer rape, hemp, millet and teazle, and also a morsel of banana, every second day for two or three weeks. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on these days also give two crisp tender leaves of dandelion. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine and give 20 drops of this in the water two days in every three until the feathers cease dropping.

SITS PUFFED OUT (Jake).—You should have said what the treatment you gave consisted of. Should it happen to coincide with what follows, write again and say so, and repeat particulars, when I will give you a different course. Meantime, go on with this. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give every second day for a fortnight a piece of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw, and a stool of young growing dandelion, as advised to "McTartan" in this issue. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Also give the same medicines in the water, and in the same order, as advised in the reply referred to.

PLUCKING OUT FEATHERS (Novice).—(1) Are you quite sure the hen plucks the feathers out? Unless you have absolute proof of it, I very much doubt it. If you have such proof, examine the bird for grey lice, and if any are found, hand-wash her twice, with an interval of a week between, and in the two first waters used add a little creolin in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of water. Also wash out the cage with a similar solution on each occasion whilst bird is drying. If the suggested proof is wanting, treat the bird the same as advised to "M.C." this week. (2) Here, again, I think the loss of the tail was natural instead of accidental—that, in fact, both birds are having a partial moult. Treat same as No. 1, and if not better in about three weeks, write again and repeat particulars.

WEAK ON LEGS (Star).—First of all see whether the claws are overgrown in such a way as to hamper the bird's movements, and if they are trim them to a proper length. Also see that the perches are of a proper size and shape, firmly fixed, so as not to wobble about, and make them of a nice soft wood. In addition to the staple seed diet give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of chemical food to the drinking water, using water that has been well boiled and allowed to get cold again. Give a little crisp young dandelion daily, for which you may substitute a morsel of banana twice a week.

GONE OFF SONG (M. E. Haslam).—The most likely cause of the bird going off song and dropping feathers is exposure to cold draughts, or sudden and extreme changes of temperature. Do you hang the bird in, or close to, a window? If so, this is practically certain to be the cause. Keep it in a box type of cage—that is, one with wires in front only—in preference to one of open wire all round, and hang it in some nice bright position where it will be free from draughts, and in a fairly equable temperature. Having done so, treat the bird the same as advised to "M.C." in this issue for three weeks or so. It should be quite possible by keeping, say, three Rollers to have one in song all through the year. You would want one early bred bird at least, in order to get it moulted early and on song again during the average moulting season. You should get the Nutshell booklet, No. 10, on "The Roller," from our Manager, 2½d., post free.

LIES ALMOST FLAT (McTartan).—The bird may be past the first flush of youth and inclined to take life easily, or it may possibly be a little overfed. Try the following treatment, and if not quite well by the end of the month write again. For the first week give only a small teaspoonful of plain canary seed daily. Twice during the week give just a pinch of mixed seed, and each day a small stool of young growing dandelion—that is, cut off the root just below the ground, clean away dirt, and give the whole, leaves and crown, to the bird. In the drinking water dissolve as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day. After the first week give the usual diet, with a little egg food twice a week, mixed seed ditto, and continue giving a little dandelion daily. In the water add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

MAKES SUCKING NOISE (Downhearted).—Buck up, mon. Birds, like humans, are but mortal, after all, and it is a poor fancier who could not bear the loss of two birds, spread over some indefinite time, without losing courage. Make yourself quite sure that this bird is not exposed to occasional draughts. Keep it in a cosy place for a few days, but do not overheat it. Give half a teaspoonful of sponge cake prepared as advised to "M.C." in this issue daily for a week, and also give two leaves of dandelion each day. In the water add 20 drops of whiskey, five each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a week or so. A staple diet of mixed seeds, as you appear to be giving, is not often advisable. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our Manager, and feed as therein advised.

A MIXED STOCK (S. Price, jun.).—(1) As your cage-aviary is of fair size, I think you may reasonably risk trying to breed Canaries in it without removing the Waxbills and Avadavats. There is, however, always more or less risk of one's plans being frustrated in such circumstances by quarrels and interference between the inmates. I would strongly advise you to put in only one cock and two hens, which, with the foreigners, will be ample to allow a fair chance of success in breeding. Put in at least four nesting sites, in addition to a sleeping box, or husk, for each pair of foreigners. (2) Do not attempt to add any British birds. To do so will cut out your last chance of success, unless you were to omit the cock canary and substitute a cock Goldfinch, Siskin, or Linnet, and try for Mules, which again would reduce your chance of success somewhat.

FALLS IN FAINT (E. C. C.).—It is sheer fright due to a high-strung nervous system that causes the bird to faint when you do anything about its cage. You can do absolutely nothing for it beyond treating it always with care and gentleness, and endeavouring to win its confidence, and thereby enable it to overcome its nervousness. Do everything necessary about its cage with method, and as quietly as possible, talking or chirping gently to it meanwhile, and avoid any sudden, snatchy movements, or sharp noises. Pay frequent attention to it daily, and always offer it a choice scrap of some green food, fruit, or a grain or two of some specially tempting seed, such as hemp, niger, or tenzle, so that it will get to associate your attentions with these dainties. Then go on by slow degrees to gently handling its cage now and again. Once the ice is broken the bird may become quite tame and friendly, and forget all about its nervousness. It requires patience, however, as there is always a risk of such birds dying suddenly from sheer fright. By the bye, its situation in a window is a very bad one, but it may not be wise to move it until you have overcome a little of its nervousness.

STRANGE BEHAVIOUR (N.W., Chorlton). The symptoms you describe are quite typical of nervous shock When the bird assumes this attitude there is some object within its sight which causes it to feel intense fright, and the most you can do is to try to discover the cause of its alarm and remove it. It may perhaps be a cat or other animal either in the room, or in its sight near a window, or even some unusual article of dress. A lady in a picture hat, or a mere man with a "pot hat" entering a room will produce such symptoms in many highly-strung birds, and the same may be said of any glaring article of dress or unusual object. The only thing of any use is to keep the bird in a position where it will not be so much exposed to alarming sights; treat it gently and patiently always, and endeavour to win its confidence tactfully, as you will see described in another reply about a nervous bird.

MAKES NO SOUND (B. H. G.).—As the bird has not yet sang at all it is possible, assuming it is really a cock, that it is only just "recording" its song, in which case it will soon begin to make itself heard. See that it is not exposed to cold draughts or sudden extremes of temperature; do not hang it high up near the ceiling, or near or over a burning light in the evenings. Then give in addition to its usual seed diet a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add ten drops each of lemon juice and glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece to the drinking water.

A BASHFUL SWAIN (E. M.).—I should say there is nothing whatever the matter with the Yorkshire cock beyond shyness, or, maybe, too exclusive interest in the newly arrived feathered lady to have any left for singing. As you wish to mate the birds at the proper time, hang the cages side by side, and give the cock a small teaspoonful of egg food every second day in addition to his staple diet, and on the alternate days give half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and linseed to both birds separately. Also give both birds two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. Then by the end of the month the cock should be quite in condition for mating.

FEEDING, ETC. (E. L.).—(1) As a constant staple diet, mixtures of a large number of various seeds are not to be commended. The best staple for general purposes for singing birds is a simple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition to this give separately half a teaspoonful of egg or biscuit food twice a week, and on two other days a similar quantity of seed mixture such as you name. Give a spray of green food daily in summer, and substitute a morsel of banana or sweet apple twice a week when green salads are out of season. (2) To stop the constant moulting, see that bird is not exposed to draughts, damp, nor sudden and extreme fluctuations of temperature. Do not allow it to hang in a window, high up near the ceiling, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. Give the above staple diet, and for the next two or three weeks give in addition half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and two crisp young leaves of dandelion every second day. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet and teazle, and a morsel of banana. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in an ounce of sherry; add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three until the feathers cease dropping. (3) There is no harm in giving a mixture containing hemp as an occasional treat or tit-bit, and slight variations of diet are beneficial rather than otherwise. Rest of this query is answered in No. 1.

AN AILING YORKSHIRE (Yorkie).—Unless the bird fully recovers in a month or so I cannot really advise you to breed with him at all, as it is more than likely his condition is of a chronic nature. See that he does not hang near or over a burning light in the evenings, nor high up near the ceiling. In addition to the staple diet of canary seed, give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in and sprinkled with maw seed. Give two crisp leaves of dandelion daily. In the water add twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week, and after this give instead 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a fortnight.

BATHS WHILST MOULTING (Crest).—It is impossible to generalise with a sweeping assertion that all your birds should be refused the opportunity of bathing whilst moulting. In most cases, strong, healthy, and robust birds may be allowed to bathe as often as they like, but on the other hand, weakly, delicate birds, which show susceptibility to chill after a bath, or are bronchially affected, should certainly not be allowed to bathe except in quite mild weather, and early in the day, say, once or twice a week. (1) As regards the first bird you name, I should not consider him an asthmatic subject, and see no reason why you should not breed with him if in good condition when the proper time arrives. Give him two crisp young leaves of dandelion instead of lettuce every second day, and a morsel of banana on the alternate days for a short time. Also add to his water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, ipecac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together daily for a week. A mealworm a day, if you have any available, would do good. (2) Keep this bird in a bright airy place, and a comfortable temperature, free from cold draughts or extreme fluctuations, for a week or two, and treat it the same as No. 1. I would not advise you to breed with this bird unless all trace of the bronchial trouble has disappeared before it is time to mate up.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

SKYLARK NOT SINGING (Pom Pom). If your bird is a cock, he should be singing by now. You appear to be feeding him correctly, and I presume he is properly caged and attended to. The only thing I can suggest is that you hang him in the open for an hour or so on fine days. If he is a cock bird, and inclined to sing, he would soon do so, but I am a bit doubtful about the sex, and think you have been unfortunate and secured a lady bird, as he certainly should show some signs of song by now.

BREEDING WITH BULLFINCHES (Amateur). You cannot depend upon your Bullfinch to feed the young, if any. Put the eggs under a Canary, and let her sit a week on dummy ones. If she once starts laying you will have plenty of eggs, so a rest of a week or so will do good. Give them plenty of green food, such as dandelion, chickweed, groundsel, fruit buds, and others as they come in season. Let them bathe frequently. This treatment should keep them healthy.

HYBRID QUESTION (J. Bird).—Glad to assist you. Your Linnet is quite suitable to pair with the Norwich hen. Place them both in your double breeding cage, having the wire slide between them. When they are ready you can put them together, giving a nest pan and nesting materials to build with. Read advice given to J. G. Thompson, and should you be in doubt about anything later on, we shall be pleased to advise you.

WHICH FINCH? (N. F. Slade). You could breed with either of your Finches, but I would advise you to use the Goldie, as the young ones are always saleable, making grand singers. Your hen would do, providing she is in good health. Place her so that she can see the Finch, and proceed as advised to "J. G. Thompson," in this issue. Allow your hen to rear the young in just the same manner as she did the young Canaries. The young ones grow quickly, and are out of the nest rather earlier than Canaries. You need not make much alteration in your feeding, excepting to give the Finch dandelion leaves and seed pods; also other wild food, as it comes into season.

PAINTING CAGE (G. H. M.).—The great mistake made by most fanciers when painting their cages is to put the enamel on too thickly. The correct way to do it is to put it on as thinly as you possibly can, and then another coat over this if necessary. My own method is to thoroughly clean off the old paint, then apply a coat of ordinary paint, same colour as you intend to enamel, thin the paint to a workable consistency with turpentine, give the cage a coat or two of this, laid on thinly, and allowed to thoroughly dry between each painting. Then put the cage away for a week or even longer if you can afford the time; after this a thin coat of enamel will give a finish to the whole. Next season another coat of enamel will freshen it up as good as new. By carrying out this method, the paint dries into the wood, and does not chip off.

BREEDING IN AVIARY (C. E. Platt).—Your aviary is quite large enough to contain the birds you mention, although I would not turn in more than one pair of Bullfinches, and only one cock Linnet. (1) With proper management you will be almost certain to breed from your Finches and Canary hens, but about the Bullfinches I am not so sure, as the cock Bullie is a shy breeder in captivity; anyway you can try them. (2) The hen will probably build a nest, lay, and incubate, but she is not to be relied upon for rearing; she has been known to do so, but you had better place some of the eggs under Canaries; they stand a much better chance if fertile. (3) Your feeding is fairly correct, but only give the mixture every other day, and discontinue the millet entirely. A little sunflower could be given daily. Do not forget green food; it is particularly useful just now. (4) Hang up nest pans, nest boxes, halves of cocoanuts, wicker cages that German Canaries come over in, and give moss, cow hair, wool, and a few feathers, short lengths of grass, and old birds' nests, if obtainable Be liberal with building materials. (5) Quite unable to say without particulars. Birds sometimes drop off wonderfully quick, even a common cold is fatal if not attended to. In future, if you are in doubt, give bread and milk or even a few drops of whiskey in the drinking water.

BREEDING WITH SIBERIAN GOLDFINCH (J. G. Thompson).—There is no reason why you should not try your Goldfinch and Linnet, mating them to hen Canaries. Their breeding or not just hangs upon the healthy condition of the birds, and if they take to their partners. What you require is a two-compartment cage for each pair, putting the Finch in one and the hen in the other, so that they are able to see each other through the wire division. When both Finches are in high condition, and the hen "fit," the slide can be drawn, a nest pan and nesting material given to the birds to encourage them to build. The Goldfinch should be in stout song with a clear beak, and he should be seen at times on the perch nearest the Canary, singing at her. The Linnet should be also in full song, with his beak dark blue-grey; he should also exhibit some sign that he is not quite indifferent to the hen. Although these are the proper symptoms, yet Finches have been known to breed without exhibiting them. The hen should be lively, bounding from perch to perch, constantly calling. If she is in this condition at the beginning of next month, and her partner is ready, put them together. When you expect the hen to lay (she will appear a bit mopy overnight), shut the Finch off, and do not allow him with her again until you have taken the egg away, and placed a dummy one in the nest. He need not be left with her while she is sitting; there is always risk of the eggs being broken, particularly with the Goldie; the Linnet is somewhat safer. If you are interested in Hybrid breeding, you should purchase one of our books on the subject.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT BIRD? (F. H. A.).—I do not think it can be a Nun; in the first place they have practically no song, and they have heavy beaks. I am of the opinion that you have an Alario Finch, and if it has a black mark on the centre of throat, it is that bird, which is also a good songster. It would mate up readily with a hen domestic Canary (small variety), Cape Canary, Grey or Green Singing Finch, in fact almost any hen Serin.

WHAT PARROT (Hibernia).—Your description is incomplete, but judging from the head markings you name it is a festive Amazon, its value depends on its condition, 40/- to 60/-. To give one a chance of correctly naming these birds a rough description should be given of the whole plumage, as there are several rather similar about head markings and colouration.

BUDGERIGARS (Gran). As you are evidently a novice with these birds you had better get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our Manager, it will explain all details. As regards the points you raise—you can put the two into your cage and they should breed, but there should be double the number of nest receptacles that you have pairs of birds, and you had better put in two cocoanut husks. Budgerigars do not require any nesting material, and 50 degs. F. will not be too warm for them. As soon as you can get it free from frost give them all the flowering and seeding grass they will eat. In the meantime supply a slice of sweet apple, also grit and cuttle bone regularly.

BUDGERIGARS NOT NESTING (B. O. Massey).——Of course an entire absence of sun is a great disadvantage, but if they have plenty of light there still should be good results. You must have double the number of husks about that you have pairs of birds. In this case I think the odd hen is the cause of the trouble; she should be either removed or a mate got for her. When sexes are equal, if there is still one hen who persistently throws out her eggs, or interferes with the other occupants, she must be caught up and changed. A pair each of Cockatiels and Black-checked Lovebirds should do well with your Budgerigars.

GETTING BUDGERIGARS INTO CONDITION (G. T.).—There is no need to attempt to force them, if thoroughly healthy they will go to nest in due course. I gather you are keeping them in a cage, see that it is roomy enough for them to get a little wing exercise, as this is essential to their well-being. Only feed with sound, sweet seed —canary and white millet in equal parts, a few oats, slice of sweet apple or leaf of lettuce in winter, and as soon as it is obtainable free from frost supply as much flowering and seeding grass as they will eat. Note replies to other correspondents in this issue. Get Nutshell No. 18, 2½d. post free from our Manager, it will keep difficulties in check.

VALUE OF HYBRIDS, ETC. (Enquirer).—I should say the value of the Green Singing Finch hybrid would be 10s. to 15s.—more if sold as a prize-winner at a show. As regards the Combasson and the Bullfinch, it appears rather improbable, but I should hesitate in saying it was impossible, for it is most frequently the unexpected that happens in aviculture, and as they appear so happy in each other's company I should certainly leave them together for a season at least, and see what transpires. Of course, this all depends whether you can spare this hen for what is, after all, more or less of an uncertainty. Very many of the foreign hybrids which have been bred have resulted from the chance mating of odd birds in a mixed aviary, and have not been premeditated by the aviarist.

INDOOR AVIARY FOR BUDGERIGARS OR HYBRIDS (C. Kew).—It will answer for both purposes providing you do not overcrowd. One pair each Green and Yellow Budgerigars, and a pair of Black-checked Lovebirds would make quite a nice show, and all should ultimately breed. You would require to put up four husks for the Canaries, and a log or small barrel for the Lovebirds, all would thrive on the same treatment. If you want details about British Hybrids you must repeat this query to our Mr. Norman next week—if you mean Foreign Hybrids, then turn in 8 odd birds, all of different species, four of each sex, say: Bronze Mannikin, Silverbill, Spice Birds, Bengalese, Grey Singing Finch, Bib Finch, Zebra Finch and hen Canary. Hang up a dozen small nest boxes and rush nests on the side of cage farthest away from the light, and then hang a canvas screen over this portion, covering up the back and half the top of cage.

WHAT PARRAKEET? (Creffield).—During genial weather, as it does not bathe, spray at least once a week, but guard against chill till the plumage is dry. The regurgitation of food and then re-swallowing it is quite a natural habit, and it wanting to put it on your finger is a mark of affection; if it had a mate it would feed it at such times. It would do better on a seed mixture of one quart each canary, white millet, hemp and oats; one pint each sunflower and paddy rice, and half a pint of shelled pea nuts, well mixed. In addition to the other items you are giving, you can offer apple, banana, and green food. Grit, cuttlebone, and pieces of wood must be supplied regularly. Give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water, continuing this till its condition is renewed. It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet.

GREEN PARROT (F. R. H.).—Continue the treatment already advised, but cease giving bread sopped in milk, as it has been accustomed to sopped bread. Lightly moisten the bread with water (chilled) and syrup of phosphates in equal parts. It should also have some ripe fruit daily, either apple, banana, orange, or a grape. You will soon find out its taste in this respect. It is more the bird's digestion that is wrong than a cold, and must be rectified accordingly. I see in last week's reply that owing to a printer's error I am made to tell you to give three or four drops of castor oil on a piece of bread, biscuit, sponge cake, etc. It is cod liver oil that should be given, not castor oil. Is the bird's mouth clean? If it is at all slimy or furred, then put a little honey and borax in the mouth daily till it is quite clear. You can easily give this on the end of a small stick. Report progress in a fortnight.

GREEN PARROT (C. W. C.).—You cannot expect these lumps to either develop or disappear quickly and unless the swellings show signs of containing pus, continue to use the iodine so long as the skin remains sound. Continue also the other treatment already advised. You might give a little honey and borax from the end of a stick, which a Parrot is always ready to bite at, daily; this will help to keep its mouth and throat clear, and with the other treatment probably assist it to throw off the trouble. There is another alternative: take the bird to a vet. and ascertain the exact character of the swellings. It will be well also to keep this bird away from cool winds, in a fairly warm room, where the temperature is fairly even. At night time it will be well to put a cover round the sides of the cage, and also to clean out same at least daily while the trouble lasts. In case of the swelling coming to a head with clear evidence of pus beneath the skin, bathe with fairly hot water, and, when fully developed, touch the head with a sharp lancet of some kind, and with a soft rag steeped in warm water gently cuddle and clean away the pus, and the bird should soon recover. I shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses.

BUDGERIGARS IN A CAGE (A Beginner).—Read the Nutshell carefully and act accordingly. Budgerigars should breed in your cage, but you had better only put in one pair, each pair need two husks, so it will be at once apparent to you that your aviary cage is too small for two pairs. Once they make a start they will breed freely enough alone. You will require a flight cage to put the young in as soon as they are able to fend for themselves. Some have kept Budgies and Canaries together, but there are always happenings, and at intervals you will be picking up Canaries with broken legs, etc. You have no room to divide up, Budgies are active birds and they soon go wrong if they don't get a fair amount of exercise. If you have a spare room you could give up to the birds to fly about in during the winter, you would minimise the risk of keeping Budgerigars and Canaries together. Some wing exercise is very essential to the well-being of Budgerigars.

GREY PARROT (Fox).—There is not much wrong with the bird at present; your diet is about right, but it would be better for ripe fruit daily, not always orange—vary this with banana and apple, also a couple of shelled walnuts per diem. Every fourth day for the next month put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water. Also give five drops of cod-liver oil daily on a piece of plain cake, for the same period. Examine the interior of its mouth, and if this appears at all slimy or furred put a little honey and borax (stocked by all chemists) in its mouth from the end of a stick daily; the stick must be well cleansed for each occasion, or a fresh one used—there should be no difficulty in getting the bird to take this, as most Parrots are quite ready to bite at the end of any stick that is offered them, and in this case in so doing they partake of the paste. While the bird must have air and light, it will be better to keep it in as warm a position as possible, and to cover the sides of the cage round at night. Continue to supply grit—flint grit is the best—and keep cuttlebone in the cage. It will be well to break in on its moping fits occasionally and induce it to talk and exercise itself generally at fairly regular intervals. Do not use a metal drinker when giving drugs. Our Nutshell, "Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free from our Manager, would help you as to general treatment, etc. Report progress a month hence, but write at once if there should be any change for the worse.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (E. H.).—Do not trouble to force the milk on the bird, but give instead two drops of cod-liver oil direct to the beak twice daily. Budgerigars are small drinkers; only give water in a small, shallow glass, holding about two tablespoonfuls, and put in it three drops of brandy and supply only this kind of water for the next fourteen days; it is sure to take a few sips at intervals. The millet spray will be good for it, as it will help to keep it active picking out the seeds. In a window is not a good position for a bird, there are few windows without draught, and these are usually open while room is being dusted, etc., whatever the weather. If the bird appears to need a little stimulant and will not drink, give it two or three drops of the weak brandy and water at intervals. Continue the diet as already advised, and it will be all to the bird's advantage if it takes no seed save what it picks out of the spray, as this enforces a certain amount of activity. Try a week of above treatment, and then report progress. There ought to be some little improvement.

GARDEN AVIARY (A. S. P.).—It is a pity the space at your disposal is so narrow, but all you can do is to make the best of the space at your disposal; it is a great pity you cannot make it 6ft. wide, the extra cost would have been small indeed. I should advise you to make it 8ft. high. Six feet of the east end of plot must be given up to the shelter shed, which must be as well lighted as an ordinary living room. The other 8ft. will form the flight, with the exception of a nine-inch board along the back against the wall and a skirting board of twelve inches at base; the front, roof and west end will be half-inch mesh wire netting, stretched over light skeleton framing of wood or iron. Hardbills are not kind to growing trees, and deciduous trees and bushes have not a very long life with them owing to continuous disbudding. Evergreen privet, golden privet, elder, hawthorn, honeysuckle, rambler roses, and currant bushes are all good, as also are euonymus, berberis, Portugal and common broad-leaved laurel and ivy; docks, cow parsley, mallow, and wild grasses to grow between the bushes. Nearly all the Serins, such as Yellow-rumped Seedeater, Cape Canary, etc., also the Siskins, Hooded, Black-headed, and Columbian are all songsters of more than average merit. Then, again, most of the genus spermophilae are good songsters, such as Lined, Guttural, Bluish, and White-throated Finches. You may not get all you want entirely from private sources, but all you can do is either to advertise for them or watch our advertisement columns. There are many softbills which are good songsters, but I have read your query as requiring seed-eaters.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Is it a Cock? (A Young Reader).—We think a lot of our own powers, and are gratified to note that you evidently think more of them, but really we are unable to decide, without any information except that you bought the Canary at a market stall for four shillings, whether it is a cock or one of the gentler sex. If we were to hazard a guess, in the circumstances, we should say it would be most likely a lady.

May a Chairman Vote? (G. E. D. N.).—A chairman does not vote excepting in the case of a tie, when he has the power of giving a casting vote if he choose. In the case you mention, in which there was a difference of one vote, if the chairman voted he could only bring the matter to a tie, and we have certainly never heard of its being suggested that a chairman could do this, and then give a casting vote, changing the original minority into a majority. Next, please.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Aucassian.—Meningitis, inflammation of the coverings of the brain. It is difficult to ascribe the exact cause. I have buried the body as you desired

Star.—Pulmonary apoplexy, due to rupture of a blood vessel leading from the lungs, with death from hemorrhage

R. Smith.—Inflammation of the bowels due to impurities probably ingested with the food. The bird was otherwise quite healthy; the inflammation was very acute.

A Cinnamon Skylark.

Sir,—I thought perhaps it might be interesting to readers of your valuable paper to know that I have now in my possession a self cinnamon Skylark. The bird was caught not 100 miles from this district (Wallasey); it is a fine bird in every respect, and seems quite at home in its new surroundings. For the benefit of local fanciers the bird will probably be on view at the night show of British birds of the Birkenhead C.F.A., March 17.

A Rare Visitor to Wales

Sir,—It may interest you to know that a Slavonian Grebe was observed here (Llandudno, North Wales) last week. No other has been seen in this district since 1886 when one was seen in Holyhead. As its name implies it is a sub-arctic bird, smaller than our resident Grebe, and during the nesting season has its head ornamented with a chestnut hood, but around our coasts it is far oftener seen in its unassuming winter garment.

Proposed Testimonial to Messrs. Richardson and Jamieson.

Sir,—In conjunction with the above I have now sent out 103 lists to members in various districts and success now lies with the members doing their best, as I am sure the retiring officials always did in the interest of the club. Should any member or friend who has been omitted wish to contribute they can do so to me direct and I will thankfully acknowledge same. All lists should be returned to me on or before April 11.

The Clashing of Shows in the South.

Sir,—I didn't see Mr. Pope's letter until too late to reply in your last issue. It is quite true that Mr. Pope wrote me about this, and the matter was discussed at our meeting on Jan. 20. We had already engaged our judges and signed a contract for the hall, and it was thought that as we were about 200 miles apart we couldn't very well injure one another. I replied to Mr. Pope to this effect on Jan. 23, and notice he says he has had no reply from me. I am personally sorry that this clashing should occur, but it has been said at our last two or three open shows by some of our prominent supporters and judges that our show has been too early, and that we should do better a week or so later. Hence our reason for altering our date this year.

T. J. Hose, Hon. Sec.,
Clapham C.B.A.

Sir,—In answer to Messrs. Deer and Cundy I would like to point out that we, like Plymouth, are holding our show on practically the same date as for some years. We hold our show on a Wednesday and Thursday, in 1912 Nov. 20 and 21, 1913 Nov. 19 and 20, 1914 Nov. 18 and 19. Some years ago we decided to hold our show a week earlier, but found we were clashing with Swansea; it was their fixed date, so we altered ours. I should like to know what date Southend and Portsmouth held their shows on in previous years. It is impossible for Cardiff to alter their date as so many Welsh shows within 50 miles of Cardiff have fixed up their date. We are applying for the patronage of the specialist clubs, and we intend giving exhibitors something worth competing for. We have engaged Messrs. W. Vardy and A. E. Pattrick, and we are also engaging a specialist British judge.

A Holder for Cuttlefish, Green Food, etc.

Sir,—I am sending you an illustration of a small greenfood or cuttlefish bone holder. It has been designed chiefly to hold the small pieces of cuttlefish bone; any small bits that break off when cutting larger pieces. It also holds greenfood down to a single leaf of dandelion. I hope it will commend itself to readers of Cage Birds generally. I have had many good ideas from Cage Birds, and I think I owe a little in return.

Another Recipe for Egg Cake.

Sir,—Take one new laid egg, beaten up, as much flour, a teaspoonful of sugar dissolved in a little warm water, add this to the egg and make into a dough. Put ½ ounce of dripping to dough. Bake in small tin in brisk oven. I have used this for years and rear my birds successfully, and I hope fellow fanciers will try it and prove for themselves. I have some left from last year; it will keep for months, either ground or left in the cake. My birds eat it with avidity, and it is a good conditioner with maw seed.

Who Won the Shield of the Sheffield C.B.S.?

Sir,—In reply to "Jim" re above I may say that Mr. L. Falding was the winner; he having gained most points at all the season's shows. I am sorry I omitted it from the report, and my thanks are due to "Jim" for bringing it to my notice.

Returning to the Fancy.

Sir,—Allow me to thank Mr. Kershaw for his kindly remarks. During the past ten years or so I have been travelling about and have spent some considerable time in Java and Sumatra. Under these conditions bird keeping was hardly possible. But now that I have settled down again I have taken up the old hobby with greater interest than ever. If you, sir, would kindly grant me a little space I shall be only too pleased to accede to Mr. Kershaw's request and give my experience of that most beautiful and interesting bird the Yellow Bunting.

W. F. Lloyd-James.

We shall, of course, be very pleased to receive an account of Mr. Lloyd James's experiences.—(Ed.)

Waxwings in the Isle of Man.

Sir,—The clemency of the weather in Manxland during the past winter has been somewhat of a boon to our wild birds, as it makes less difficult the great struggle for sustenance. Some rare birds have visited our shores during mild winters. I live in the south of the island, and my occupation is on a farm. One day I saw with great surprise a huge flock of Waxwings. I noted their waxy tips quite distinctly as they skimmed aloug our field. The birds seemed to be wending their way towards Scotland, and were in a crowd similar to a great flock of Starlings. I fully expect to hear of more than a few captures reported in Cage Birds.

Birds Shelling their Seed.

Sir,—In looking over Cage Birds of Feb. 28 I see that "Yellow Green" would like to know what is the remedy for Canaries cracking seed and leaving it. I had a bird which did this, and I gave it half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food in half a glass drinker of water. It seems to have put the bird into song as well; you can get two pennyworth at a chemist's.

A Novel Suggestion.

Is there a Market for Canary Eggs?

Sir,—I should be obliged if you could make room for this suggestion, which I believe will be of interest to other fanciers. I refer to the possibility of selling and exchanging sittings of Canary eggs. We see advertised sittings of prize poultry, Pheasants, Wild Duck, etc.; why not Canary sittings? For my part I like to introduce new blood into my stock, and would much prefer to do so by eggs than by birds. Also it would be a great advantage for the fancier wishing to take up another variety. The Norwich fancier could instal a sitting of rollers or Yorkshires, and vice-versa. The man whose hens had laid only small clutches could make them up. Has this arrangement been tried, and, if so, what are the disadvantages? Canary eggs, if carefully packed, could be sent through the post, provided that an address label was attached to avoid stamping the box when putting on postmark. Perhaps other fanciers will give us the value of their opinions and possibly experiences.

A New Society for Sutton-in-Ashfield.

Sir,—A cage bird society for Sutton in Ashfield was formed on March 7, headquarters, Railway Inn. The host (Mr. Clayton) touched down for £2 2s. and 17 members paid subs. The Sutton bird fanciers have chosen a good home for their new society. There is ample accommodation for a good show, and I believe there have been some good times for birdy men here in days gone by. I have visited shows held there when Sutton was a name to conjure with. I believe the hostess is a daughter of the late Mr. Sims, and Mr. Clayton is a bird fancier, so the outlook seems very bright. Mr. Sankey is the new secretary but a goer. Mr. A. Keeling was voted to the chair, and in their choice for a president the members have made good. Mr. Keeling is also a young fancier, and in voting these two gentlemen to their respective positions the fanciers must have had the old adage in their mind — Youth will be served.

A Good Record for a Novice.

Sir,—You will be interested to hear that as a novice I have in my possession a yellow-green Yorkshire cock which has done very well for me, my first year in the open, as the following record will show; First at Anfield and Everton for G.C.A. Novice Cup; second at Manchester; second at Warrington for G.C.A. Novice Cup; second at Preston; first at Liverpool B.B.A. Green Canary Association's Novice Cup; first at Bradford National with Diploma for the best Yorkshire green in the show, also, at the same show, Cage Birds Diploma for novice (for which please accept best thanks); first at Scottish National for Yorkshire Greens; first G.C.A. Old Show for G.C.A. Novice Cup, the judge remarking it was the best Yorkshire green in the show. It finished its record by winning the bronze medal for the best Y.H.C. in the Green Yorkshire class at the Crystal Palace. I wish Cage Birds every success.

Two Interesting Lectures for Manchester Fanciers.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space to inform fanciers in the Manchester district that the Manchester and N.C.O.S. have arranged to have a lecture by Mr. Barker Clegg on "Canary Management" at the meeting to be held March 16, at the "Deansgate Hotel" (Temperance) at 8. This lecture should be of great interest to fanciers, coming as it does on the eve of the breeding season. Mr. Clegg is one of the most experienced fanciers in the country, and well able to deal with this subject. On April 6th we are to have a lantern lecture by Mr. Cutmore, of Liverpool. The subject is to be British Birds, and is sure to be very interesting to all, no matter what branch of the Fancy is their particular hobby. The members of the M. and N.C.O.S. have had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Cutmore on several occasions, and always look forward to this event. We have engaged a room at St. Paul's Schools, Bennett Street, Oldham Road, for this lecture, owing to our meeting room not being suitable for the lantern operator's convenience. I hope to see a large attendance of visitors at both these lectures, as we invite all fanciers to attend, whether they are members of this society or not.

The Ringed Greenfinch Caught at Seaham Harbour.

Sir,—The Greenfinch bearing one of my rings, No. J201, which was caught outside Seaham Harbour by Mr. Robert Walker, and reported in your issue of Feb. 28th, was ringed as a nestling at Hexham, Northumberland, on April 19th, 1913. I should be much obliged if Mr. Walker would let me know the date on which the bird was caught.

A New Society for the East Riding of Yorkshire.

Sir,—Cage-bird fanciers in the East Riding of Yorkshire have long felt the desire to form a society solely in the interests of the Cage-bird Fancy. Several fanciers from Bridlington, Driffield, Flamborough, etc., met in a room, kindly lent by Mr. Dixon, to discuss the forming of a society. It was decided unanimously to form a society, under the name of the Bridlington, Driffield and District C.B.S. The area extends from Hull to Whitby and York, and it is desired that all fanciers will not miss the opportunity of becoming members of this new society, and so further the welfare of the Cage-bird Fancy.

The West of Fife C.B. League.

Sir,—Mr. Muir, sec. of Lochgelly C.B.S., has, I see, under the heading of "The West of Fife C.B. League," spoken rather sharply. If he has anything against Kelty, I would like him to use some other heading for his notes. All this is simply because I asked him how he came to report a meeting he had no business to report. If he could not attend the meeting, why did he report the meeting? He says he is indebted to his assistant for the report. I was at the meeting, and he knew this before appending his name; also I have been at all the League meetings since I was appointed delegate for Kelty. The meeting, let me tell him, was not what he makes it out to be (a social). Now, Mr. Muir, you are really pulling somebody's leg when you say that Lochgelly won the cup with a 50 per cent. majority, you should know better than that. Kelty are not so childish as to bother themselves with Mr. Muir, as this controversy is strictly between me and him (not Kelty or Lochgelly Societies). The matter in dispute is whether he had any right to report a meeting while I am secretary, and quite qualified to do so myself.

House Sparrows' Appreciation of Food and Shelter.

Sir,—Having read in Cage Birds the remarks made by Mr. Hardy recently, I write to tell you of a fact within my own experience. A friend of mine found in his garden one morning during the breeding season two young House Sparrows, unable to fly. Being a lover of birds, and afraid the cats would catch them, he put them into a cage, with seed, etc., and hung it on the wall outside, with the door open. The birds were fed by the parents until they were old enough to look after themselves, and went in and out of the cage at leisure. After a time he thought he would take them indoors as a novelty. He did so, and the birds were quite at home, and hopped in and out of the cage when they chose, and were very tame. The shop is a bird dealer's, and the doors and windows are always more or less open, but they were quite contented. After about 6 weeks my friend put them again outside, the door still open, and shortly afterwards he found that the birds had gone. This was about 11 a.m. He did not see them again until about 5 p.m., when, to his surprise, the birds were both on the perch of the cage, as they were before when indoors. As the days went by so the birds were going to and from the cage, as happy as could be, until they commenced moulting, and he found one, and then the other, dead on the cage bottom. Mr. Editor, is this not proof that birds are happy in cages? I saw these birds myself, and my friend, Mr. Eggleston, Thornton Heath (bird dealer), can confirm this to be true.

Norwich Plainhead Type.

Sir,—If Mr. Floyd will alter the length of 5½ins. to 6½ins. (the proper standard length), I am sure he will get plenty of fanciers to support his views regarding the Norwich Plainhead. I should like to be the lucky one to breed one this season like Mr. Floyd's model. I think if Mr. F. had finished measuring it, he would find it went quite 6½ins. He allows 3ins. for wings and 1½in. for tail, which makes 4½ins. Now I think the bird would go the other 2ins. from base of beak to the shoulders.

Federation of Dublin C.B. Societies Suggested.

Sir,—We have now three C.B. societies in Co. Dublin, and judging by the success of the three shows, in spite of their being held at a time of great industrial strife in the City and County, there must be plenty of room for them. As a novice who has only just joined one of them, may I throw out the suggestion for what it is worth, that a Federation or Union of Co. Dublin C.B. societies be formed. A small extra fee per member would, I am sure, be enough for working expenses, whilst the benefit to the Fancy in Co. Dublin would be inestimable. Such an Union, if formed, would arrange the show dates so as to have convenient intervals between shows and so avoid clashing—or as last year—two shows in less than a week, with probable injury to both. Also it would be of service in settling disputes. Any charge made against a member could be heard by a committee elected by the three societies, whilst the punishment meted out to any fancier found guilty of malpractices could be correspondingly greater, viz., expulsion, or suspension from exhibiting at three shows, instead of one, as at present. If a cup for champions, and another for novices could be put up for competition at Federation shows for most points gained at the three, it would be the means of making the societies support one another's shows, and would not interfere with their club competitions. Incidentally, a breeders' competition could be easily arranged that would probably meet with the approval of your correspondent, "Hard Hit." The Federation could issue rings at, say, a shilling each, but no member would be allowed to have more than a limited number (half-a-dozen, perhaps) or to compete for this special competition only with birds bearing rings issued to that member. The proceeds, after expenses had been deducted, could be allotted in prize-money, or go to provide a trophy, the expenses would be but nominal, as the birds could go into the ordinary classes. I hope some more experienced fanciers than myself will take the matter up.

FIRST FANCIER: What sort of breeding season have you had?

SECOND FANCIER: Very bad, indeed; nearly all my hens were bad feeders. How did you get on?

FIRST FANCIER: Well, most of my hens refused to feed, but I did not mind that, as I had bought a Filup Young Bird Feeder, and it helped me to finish up with a record breeding season.

SECOND FANCIER: I'm for a Filup next season

WHAT I HEEARD AND SEED A' T' YORKSHER UNION ANNUAL.

By C. A. HOUSE.

Horace Towers a oppenen a bazaar, wiv Fred Hammond, 'ratio Hill, John Greaves, Ramsden fra Krystal Palaace, and Carl, him fra London, an' all a helpin' Horace. Bi gow, bud it we're a dew! Afoar t' bazaar (Horace call'd it t' jumble sale) thearo had heen a feed. Wall tha all knaws what Yorkshermen, and lasses too, can dew in ta way o' hannlin platefuls o' beef, squares o' Yorksher, ta say nowt abooat t' cheese and havvercake. They can eyte.

I am forgetting. All the readers of CAGE BIRDS are not Yorkshire bred and born, so I had better get on with my tale in good old-fashioned English, and drop the Yorksher. Last Saturday the big room at the Market Tavern, Bradford, was crowded with men and women, lads and lasses, some married and some not, but all fond of birds. All drawn together to enjoy themselves, gaze on the wonderful collection of prizes, and some to take them away. The eating and drinking being over, it was about 6.45 when President Towers ascended the platform and commenced the proceedings by calling on Mr. J. E. Priestley, the novice from Halifax, to start the ball a-rolling with a selection on the piano.

Who was Who.

Whilst Priestley was working his fingers I used my eyes, and to the left of me I saw, amongst a whole host of other folk, Mr. and Mrs. T. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. L. Ogden, Mrs. Towers, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hudson, Mrs. Gregson, Mr. and Mrs. L. Dykes, Mr. and Mrs. Chittenden, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bidforth, Mr. and Mrs. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Walsh and Mr. Walsh, junr., Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. A. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Crabtree, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Cowgill, Mr. and Mrs. Clegg, Mr. and Mrs. H. Tidswell, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Dr. Crogg, Dr. Wilson, Messrs. Holliday, Hill, Simonett, Battye, Mundell, Sutcliffe and Son, Snead, Briggs, Cruise, Casey, Henderson (Barrow), Crossley, Sheard, Binns, Inman, Wilson (3), Thomas (2), Chambers, Knight (good old Jonas), Thornton (2), Hodgson, Hirst (2), Garrett, Raistrick, Myers, Sykes, Beamnont (all the way from Glasgow), Ramsden, Mason (2), Parlett, Dyson, Taylor, Morrison, Slee, Watson, Saville, Naylor, Whitley, Whitwham, Heap, Ball, Macpherson, and a heap of others whose names I cannot remember, but there were just two others who must not be left out—Mrs. Carl, and the Editor of CAGE BIRDS, you all know him.

What was About.

When I had done looking at the folks who were present I turned to my right, and there I saw such a display of useful and ornamental articles that I did not wonder at Horace talking about a jumble sale. There may have been others, but I saw ladies' costumes, cloaks, blouses, dress lengths, coats, umbrellas, blankets, eiderdown quilts, bedding, curtains, clocks, barometers, knives and forks, teapots, cruets, tea and coffee services, candlesticks, sugar baskets, sugar basins, biscuit boxes, field glasses, gold and silver watches, photo frames, photographs, steel engravings, black and white drawings (some of friend Norman's work, methought), epergnes, flower vases, ornamental vases, bronze figures, stationery cases, table cloths, boots, preserve jars, Thermos flasks, cases of cutlery, silver plate, and the biggest lot of gold and silver medals I have ever seen outside of Fattorini's shop window.

Dr. Wilson and the Britishers.

The prize giving was started by Dr. Wilson handing out the nice little lot belonging to the Lancashire and Yorkshire—or should it be Yorkshire and Lancashire?—British Bird and Mule Club. I may here say that I am not going to give a list of all the winners' names, because the full club lists have been published in CAGE BIRDS by the different secretaries. Dr. Wilson expressed his pleasure at having to perform such an important duty. He was happy to say the past season had been a most successful one. The club had supported nine shows, and the members had made 331 entries at those shows. Mr. R. D. Parlett had come out on top with 127 points, Mr. T. H. Inman second with 104, and he (the speaker) came next with 104. The competition had been keen, and the quality very satisfactory. This he had noted from personal observation, and it was very pleasing to him as president of the club to record it. He hoped Mr. Parlett would have many happy drinks out of the champion cup during the coming twelve months, but he should make the most of it during that time, as some of the others would have a hard try to take it from him next time.

Mr. Parlett said the winning of the cup had been a surprise to him; he thought he had missed it. He did not exhibit at three shows, so as to give some of the others a chance. He had not counted his points, and was surprised when towards the end of the season he met the secretary, and was told by him that he (the speaker) was leading. He hoped that Dr. Wilson would win it next time.

Having finished his work, the Doctor said, successful as the club had been during the past season they hoped for greater and better things next, but one thing they would all like to see, and that was more Lancashire members.

Mr. Towers was down to distribute the Yorkshire Canary Club prizes, but Dr. Craig having come along from Sheffield, Horace popped the question, and the Doctor consented, but as he stood up to his task he, like the girl, said, "But you know, Horace, it's so sudden." I don't say which girl.

Dr. Craig and XXX.

Overcoming his nervousness and bashfulness, Dr. Craig said—"There are times when one has nothing to say, because there is nothing to say, at other times one cannot talk because there is so much to say, others when there was a lot to say and one would not, and some when there was a lot to say and one could say it. He had a lot to say if he could say it. But they would not want a lot of Doctors that night, for, as he had heard it said during the season, there were a lot of them on "the panel," but he might say they did not all come from Pannal. (Dr. Wilson resides at Pannal.) Friend Towers would make a good Doctor. Set him up in a big corner house with a big brass plate, "H. Towers, ex-president of the Yorkshire Canary Club, ex-president of the Cinderella Club, and XXX when he could get it." At Sheffield he (the speaker) was usually put up for these prize-giving jobs, but there they were not big affairs like the one that night. There were three brothers once, all bachelors. They did not like the idea of their money going outside of the family, so they decided one of them ought to get wed. But which one? That was the rub. They decided to draw lots as to which it should be. It fell to the eldest, who said, "That's just my luck. I always have to do the dirty work of the family." That, said the Doctor, was his position in the Sheffield O.S. But he did not mind, Sheffield O.S. could hold its own with any other. They were like the man who, when he was dying, made his will, and put his wife down for £100 a year if she stayed single, but £200 a year if she got married again. His lawyer thought it should be the other way about, but the man replied—"No, it's all right, for if she does as much for the next as she has done for me, the poor devil will need it." A member of the Sheffield Society received an addition to his family, and some of his friends were wondering if the youngster would be a fancier, for none of the others cared much about it. The father hoped the latest might, but mother put her spoke in and said, "Nay, lad, he'll be no fancier, he'll be a footballer, for he's the best dribbler in our family." All this, however, has nothing to do with the prizes," said the Doctor. "I had better get on with my work and leave the talking to others."

Mr. Philip Mason, on receiving the champion special and Ogden's, said he was proud of the honour that was his, because he had won it with birds of his own breeding.

Proud Philip.

Philip did it with 128 points, with Ogden Bros. second with 102, and Joe Thomas ran 'em hard with 101. On taking the 2nd, Thompson Ogden congratulated Philip most heartily upon his achievement, and said it gave him as great pleasure to take the 2nd as it did Philip the first, because last year he had to take so many first prizes that he felt quite ashamed of coming up, but he could tell Philip they would give him a good run for it next season.

On taking the premier prize in Ramsden's competition, Mr. L. Dykes said he had been second twice, and he was glad he had won it the third time of asking, and more pleased to know that he had saved it to the club for another year, because had Ogden Bros. got it this time the club would have lost it altogether.

As the Doctor took his seat, having finished the operation, I thought—Dr. Craig may be English, he's possibly Scotch (they say the best medicos come from Edinburgh), but he certainly ought to be Irish, for if he's half as good a doctor as he is fancier and humorist, he's a good 'un. He's a funny beggar.

"Cage Birds" Prizes.

CAGE BIRDS prizes came next on the list, and XXX Dr. Towers, to give him his new title, said owing to Mr. Carl's bashfulness they would be presented by that good fancier, Mr. Fred. Hammond. He felt sure all would have heard with regret of his impending retirement, but they were all pleased to see him that night, and even if he retired from active participation in the Fancy, he hoped that they would receive his help when they needed it.

Mr. Hammond said it was a surprise to him to stand where he did. He had expected Mr. Carl to give his own prizes. He would like him to have done it, because he knew that Yorkshire fanciers were always pleased to see and hear him. He knew he was expressing the sentiments of all present when he said how very much they were indebted to Mr. Carl for his generosity in giving them the splendid display of prizes they saw before them that night. Mr. Carl disclaimed any feeling of generosity, and said it was only one of his business methods. Mr. Carl could call it what he liked, but he (the speaker) called it generosity, but if it were business, then they were very pleased with his business method, and he hoped others would copy. It was a great pleasure for him to do the work he had done in connection with the competition in getting the prizes together, and although not a participant, he had no regret. He had found his pleasure in working for his fellow-fanciers. In handing Mr. Thompson Ogden the first prize he spoke highly of the prize, a gold watch, and hoped Ogden Bros. would live long to wear it, for they were sportsmen and fanciers, and men of whom they were all proud.

When Joe Thomas took his prize he said he felt like a chap climbing a ladder; he was gradually nearing the top, and was a step nearer this time than last. Luther Dykes, taking a pile of bed furniture, said his wife ought to have taken it, because it was her choosing. Charlie Morrison, when receiving his prize, said the thanks of all Yorkshire bird men were due to Mr. Carl, because if it was not for the kindness of such men as the Editor of CAGE BIRDS the Fancy would soon drop, as would all other sports in which working men took interest. They could not go on without such supporters as Mr. Carl. Philip Mason came last on the champions' list, and, as he took his prize, a lady's pendant, Mr. Hammond said Philip always had an eye for the ladies, and he was pleased to see he still studied them. He had chosen wisely, and they all hoped Mrs. Mason would live long to wear it.

Those Amateurs!

Before he gave the amateurs' prizes, Mr. Hammond said he had been thinking, and thinking deeply, about the amateurs and their position. He was one himself, and therefore could speak freely, knowing that in hitting others he was hitting himself. The noble army of amateurs! He wished some spirit would come and tell them what they wanted. They certainly did not know themselves. They had nothing to go for, nothing to get, so they said. They were the backbone of the grumblers. But was it so? In this competition five out of the six prizes which had been offered would have to go back to Mr. Carl, because there was not competition enough. Five guineas had been offered for Cinnamon Marks and Green Marks, and only one prize taken. He wanted the noble army of amateurs to stop grumbling, to show some kind of sporting spirit, to show that they could win, to take what was already put before them, and then perhaps something more would be offered them. What was the use of clamouring for more when they did not win what was already there? It was not an impossibility for amateurs to win. Messrs. Hall and Tidswell had shown them what could be done, and against the champions, too, while George Snead had walked away with three firsts from the Palace. He hoped many more would follow his example. It was worthy of being copied.

Mr. Snead, on taking his prize, said he would give a bit of advice. Young Canaries, like children, needed mothering. Get the wives to mother them. If there was a good mother it didn't matter about the father. Any sort of a father would do. Looking at his prize, he thought CAGE BIRDS was not such a bad sort of a paper after all. He meant going on. He had bred his birds, and he hoped to go much farther yet.

Sixpence for a Smoke.

Mr. Hammond touched the hearts of the company once or twice when Mr. Lunn's name came up. He said Mr. Lunn had handed his prize over to his son, and in writing him the latter had sent him sixpence to have a smoke. Mr. Whitley had chosen curtains for his prize. Knowing nothing about curtains, he had consulted Mrs. Hammond, who asked: "Does he want cream or white?" He did not know, so she said: "Where does he live?" "Out in the country at Daisy Hill," I told her. "Then," said she, "he'll want white ones." He evoked a big cheer when he referred to Mr. H. Simonett as one of the most deserving fanciers and hardest of workers.

Mr. R. D. Parlett said it gave him more pleasure to take the two drawings in this competition than it did to take the champion cup. He was proud of his birds, proud of the drawings, and Mr. Carl should be a proud man to know what competition and appreciation had been brought forth by his prizes. He hoped he would win many more of them.

Dr. Wilson said if it gave him as much pleasure to look at the vase he had won as it did to look at CAGE BIRDS each Friday, he would have a very happy life. He thanked Mr. Carl, and wished him and CAGE BIRDS much success.

The last prize on the list was an eider down quilt, won by Mr. J. Wilson, who was too bashful to come to the front himself, but sent his son, a tiny little tot of about five, to shoulder the bundle, which the youngster did quite manfully. May it not be the last the kiddie will take!

Our Editor.

Mr. Towers then called on Mr. Carl, who strongly disclaimed the accusation of shyness. He had never been shy but once in his life. That was—— Amidst laughter and cheers, F.C. said when it was, but I for one didn't believe him. I have known him single and married, and—well, Mrs. Carl knows, and the married ladies present evidently summed things up correctly. Continuing, Mr. Carl said that as he listened to what Mr. Hammond and others had said he did indeed feel bashful, and he had to put his hand up to his head several times to feel for the halo, because if one-half they had said were true, he was sure he deserved one. But it was not. There was no generosity about it. It was simply a matter of business. He thanked them for their hearty Yorkshire reception. He was always pleased to be amongst the Yorkshire fanciers, because they were so keen and enthusiastic, because of the excellent way in which they managed things, and because they were such good sportsmen. Referring to the agitation now going on against the keeping of British birds, he urged all fanciers to stand together and present a bold front to the enemy. When they found men like Galsworthy, Thomas Hardy, and others opposed to them it was a serious thing. If the agitation was successful against British bird keeping, they might feel certain it would not be long before there would be an attack on the keeping of Canaries. Therefore did he urge them all to carefully consider the position and to combine in one solid attack upon the enemy. He thought that at the present moment the Cage Bird Fancy was like a man asleep on the edge of a volcano, not knowing when it would burst and blow him up. This was his reason for urging them to be vigilant, to be ready to defend their interests and liberty. He wished to thank the committee who had done so much to make CAGE BIRDS Competition such a success, and especially did he wish to thank Mr. Hammond. He could not say all he thought and felt about Mr. Hammond, neither could he express his thankfulness in mere words for all he had done, but he would ask him to accept from him, as a slight token of the manner in which he appreciated his help, a £5 note, and with it to purchase something for Mrs. Hammond to remind her of her husband's work and connection with CAGE BIRDS Competition. His reason for not distributing the CAGE BIRDS prizes himself was because he wished to see Mr. Hammond, who had done the work, brought into direct touch with the winners, so that they might appreciate the more what work Mr. Hammond had done for them. As he was talking the words of Dr. Abercrothy came to his mind. One of his patients, a very long-winded lady, once started to describe her ailments. The doctor said: 'Stop a minute. How long will it take you to tell me all you want to?" "Twenty minutes," said the lady. "Very good," said the doctor; "I can see another patient in that time. You go on talking." You will not want to listen to me when so many others have to be seen and heard. Therefore I will conclude with some words of poetry which I came across the other day, and which are most appropriate to fanciers, either the successful or unsuccessful:—

Keep your eye on the goal, lads,
Never despair or drop,
Be sure that your path leads upwards,
There's always room at the top.

Mr. Hill's Announcement.

Mr. Hill announced amidst cheers that Mr. Carl had told him that, with the permission of the Yorkshire Union, and the different specialist clubs, he would be pleased to give CAGE BIRDS prizes again next season.

Mr. W. A. Wilson, who presented the Open Norwich Club prizes, said he was no speaker, so he intended getting on with the work, and he did. The Norwich men must also be like their president, for it was "nowt said" with all of them except Joe Thomas, who, on being handed his second clock, said: "'Twas the wife, she wanted one for the kitchen, and one for the sitting-room." Good lad, Joe. Please t'wife!

The National Show.

Mr. Towers stated that the National Show had resulted in £40 being handed over to the Cinderella Fund, £10 placed to reserve, and £20 taken to pay for the new staging, which was now the property of the Cinderella Club. The committee were faced with a difficulty. Messrs. Hill and Simonett, who had worked hard and well in the past, had intimated that they could not hold office any longer. Thus there was a chance for a new man. He did not despair of finding a man, but as yet they had not got one. The position was open, and they would be pleased if someone would come forward and take it. They did not expect a new man to be as good as Mr. Hill all at once, but Messrs. Hill and Simonett would do their best to assist and develop a good man, whilst he was sure Mr. Hammond would still do what he could. Their committee was not a closed committee; it was open to all. Every fancier was welcome to assist its work and take part in its deliberations.

Cinnamon Marks Not Strong.

Mr. Brown, who presented the Cinnamon-marked Club prizes, owing to the fact that Mr. Drake was suffering from a cold, referred to the bad start the Cinnamon Marked classes had last season, the entries being low owing to the lateness of the moult. Things improved as the season went on, but on the whole they did not have a season to boast about. The members should make an effort to improve the standing of the Club, to support the Club and keep entries up. There certainly was room for them to do better. The Cinnamon Marked Fancy was a very nice Fancy, and he was very sorry that pressure of business and a bad season prevented him from doing more than he did this time. The breed should be more popular, and the birds more numerous. Breeders should buck up or show committees would not go on giving classes.

Mr. Morrison said it gave him the greatest pleasure to find himself topping the competition. He was second last year, and said then he hoped to be at the top this time. He had achieved his purpose, and he trusted someone else would have a turn next year, but he could promise them a good run for it.

Mr. Walsh on the Yorkshire Union.

Mr. H. W. Walsh said the duty devolving on him that night, as president of the Yorkshire Union, was a very pleasant one, but during his term of office he had had to perform some duties that could not be said to be very pleasant ones. Speaking of the Novice Competition, he said it was the finest competition for novices in the world. It was a genuine competition, and there was no chance of the champions getting in. He emphasised Mr. Carl's remarks anent the agitation against the keeping of birds, and said that some of the people who were against the working man and his hobby were guilty of far greater cruelty in the manner in which they reared Grouse, Partridges, Pheasants, and other birds, and then slaughtered them in the autumn months of the year. The Union was doing good work, even as it had done from the time of its inception. It had been well supported in the past, and he asked the fanciers to give it continued support.

Mr. Snead, one of the four amateur gold medallists, said he was a sport, he loved a game, he was not going to be satisfied with staying where he was. He would give the top-notchers warning that he meant getting to the top, and when he got there he would give them the hens' convention—a good crow! If, said he, it is possible to improve the Yorkshire Canary, I am going to do it. I do not mean to stand still.

Mr. G. S. Greenwood, one of the novice top-notchers, uttered a word of warning to the champions, and said he was out to give them a shaking if it was at all possible.

Mr. Ramsden's Words of Wisdom.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden expressed the pleasure it gave him to be present at the gathering year by year, to meet the Yorkshire fanciers, to talk with them, and to give them prizes. He would give them the latter again next year. In mentioning the inquiry into cage bird keeping, Mr. Ramsden said that he was not going to be so foolish as some men and say there was no need for action, no need for inquiry. On the contrary, he agreed that there was ground for many of the statements that many of their enemies made, especially in connection with badly-kept bird shops. In his opinion the greatest service they could do themselves as fanciers would be to do what they could to improve the condition of things in the bird shops. If they saw birds badly kept in small or dirty cages they should endeavour to reason with the keeper of the shop, and if they could not induce him to mend his ways, they should inform the police, or the officials of the R.S.P.C.A. Professor Ray Lankester and other famous men who attended the Palace show had expressed themselves as delighted with what they saw, and were convinced that in the keeping of birds as they as fanciers kept them there was no cruelty, that really the birds were better off than in their wild state. It was because of the cruelty practised by some bird catchers and shop keepers that this agitation had been started, and because of their wrongdoing the actions of all bird-keepers denounced. It would do good service if every faucier in the country brought to the notice of his M.P. the interview which Mr. Fulljames had with Professor Lankester, and which appeared in CAGE BIRDS. Speaking on the eternal amateur question, Mr. Ramsden said he hardly knew where he stood. As secretary of the Palace Show, he had received letters from hundreds of amateurs grumbling about things as they are, and asking to be given more interest in the Fancy and better opportunities to show their strength. As a result, he had agreed to run a show for amateurs only. Now he found, when he got to Yorkshire, that the amateurs, after all their talk, and all their grumbling, were not able to make competition enough to take the prizes already open to them. This was a sort of throwing him back on himself, but he hoped that the amateurs would do their best to give his amateur show support. He should work hard to make it a success, and if the amateurs did their part all would be well. He thanked them for the hearty reception they had given him, and hoped the Yorkshire Union and Specialist Clubs would go on prospering.

The End of the Tale.

Mr. W. A. Cowgill, on rising to present the Green Marked Club prizes, said they had got to the last on the list and therefore he would have to shorten it. As fanciers we are all deeply indebted to Mr. Carl and Mr. Ramsden for what they have done. We are told that they do not regard it as generosity but as business. They give it as a return for the business they get. Well, all I can say is that I wish some fanciers would adopt their business methods, and give back to the clubs some of the money they take out of them. Those that take should give if the Fancy is to go on. It is said that Yorkshiremen are sportsmen, but some Yorkshiremen are stickers. At least, he had found it so. When they got hold they kept hold. But some of them had been a bit too grasping, and had lost a pound for the sake of eighteenpence. Some of them, in their anxiety to save a shilling, had lost twenty. When fanciers were in a club they should look after the points. Some of them would not join a club. They argued that the clubs did them no good. That was a mistake. Take for instance the British Bird and Mule Club. Some Canary men might say what good was that club to them? He would tell them. The Mule breeders wanted hens, and the demand from them made all the difference between getting 3s. and 10s. for a big rough Norwich hen, one that was no use to breed show Norwich from, but was just the thing for the Mule breeder. Was the B.B. and M. Club any good to Canary men? Again, if some men did not get any direct gain from joining a club, they were bound to get an indirect gain. A man bred a good bird, and, owing to the demand for good birds amongst those who were anxious to win these valuable trophies we see to-night, he sold it for £10. Did the club benefit such a man? He thought it did. He thought part of that money belonged to the club, but the man who got it stuck to it. They were stickers, some of these Yorkshire breeders. When a man had sold a bird for £5 or £10, surely he could afford eightenpence to help the club which had made it possible for him to get such a price? It was the clubs and their competitions that had made the increased value of birds. Fanciers should be more enterprising, more broad-minded, and support the clubs better, not have to be dunned into giving. I started by saying we had got to the end of the talk, and I was going to shorten it, but I am talking. ("Go on, lad; tha're all reight.") I will, an' all. The Green Marked Club stands on a good basis. It has helped the breed. It had made Green Marked Yorkshires more popular and more profitable. It had made competition keener. It was worthy of support. But did it get it? Did the fanciers all treat it right? He thought not. As an instance, it was not right when the club was giving its patronage to an outside show for its members to send their birds to some show near home. It was not doing justice to the club, and it was not the way to popularise the breed, as under such circumstances the club's forces were split, and the shows at home and those away were both failures. The first trophy and gold medal was won by Mr. Dykes, who was a good fancier, and he was pleased to congratulate him on his success. He hoped others would strive as hard as Mr. Dykes had done, and that success would attend the club and the bird. He then proceeded with the distribution, evoking many a laugh by his apt and merry quips with the different winners.

Votes of Thanks.

Mr. Cowgill proposed, and Mr. Halliday seconded, a vote of thanks to Mr. Towers for all he had done not only in presiding over that meeting, but for his continued efforts all the year round to promote the prosperity of the Cage Bird Fancy in Yorkshire.

Mr. Towers, in reply, said he would accept the vote of thanks if Mr. Hill's name was put first. He was the man to whom their thanks were due. Few knew what work Mr. Hill did, and it was only fair that he should be in the forefront when the thanks were given. The vote was given with much heartiness, and with the singing of the National Anthem the proceedings were brought to a close just on eleven o'clock.

During the evening some most excellent work was done in the vocal way by Messrs. Hamer, Copley, and McAudrew. The latter gentleman's "Hush-a-Bye, Baby," "The Tide Came Rolling On," and "What a Game" fairly brought down the house, whilst Mr. Hamer's "Take a Pair of Sparkling Eyes," Mr. Copley's "Across the Desert," and the duets, "Watchman, what of the night?" and "Excelsior," received the heartiest appreciation. Mr. J. E. Priestley ably presided at the piano.

DORCHESTER AND DORSET F.S.

A pleasant evening was spent at the Central Hotel, Feb. 25, when lectures were delivered by Messrs. Coggins (Wyke Regis), who took as his subject, Norwich Plainheads; R. G. W. Parsons (Affpuddle), Bullfinches, and Norwich; G. Pope (Dorchester), the washing of exhibition birds; and Harris (Dorchester), colour-feeding. Each lecturer illustrated his remarks with some fine specimens. Mr. G. Brooker kindly exhibited some of his Yorkshire Canaries, and placed them at the disposal of the lecturers. A vote of thanks was passed to the lecturers. Next meeting Central Hotel, March 11, when it is hoped that the President (Mr. J. Garland) will give a lecture.

LEINSTER O.S

First annual dinner, Feb. 18, Four Courts Hotel, Dublin. Mr. Kelbey, the manager, deserves very great credit for the excellent way in which the tables were laid and the dinner served to the 27 guests present. Chairman, Mr. J. J. Cloke, took the head of the table. Dinner over the social side was considered to be of some import. A capital programme was gone through; the XL Entertainers giving a very pleasing performance of great variety. Professor Milford, as the sleight of hand man and songster, was well received; whilst Mr. Warren did justice to the pieces rendered. Mr. Beegan also did very creditably, his good bass voice being heard to particular advantage in the duet and quartet rendered by the little company. Messrs. Birse and Beegan seemed pretty keen rivals for honours in their respective spheres, and contributed very ably to the pleasure of the evening; whilst Messrs. Jackson, Henry, Walsh Bros., Cloke, and Holley all contributed to the same end. Mr. Cloke spoke of the pleasure it afforded him to preside at such a united gathering, and presented the novice cup won at the recent show to Mr. Burtenshaw. He having suitably responded the meeting broke up at 11 o'clock with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."—C. Holley, hon. sec.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 10, Pres. G. A. Cooper, chair; sixteen members present. The show was grand, upwards of 100 birds being on view. Whilst the judge, Geo. Baker, was adjudicating, the members were asked for their votes re an open show. The result was a unanimous "Yes," with date fixed for Nov. 20 and 21. J. H. Roe was elected judge. The balance sheet showed a cash balance of £3 10/-, and assets another £3 10/-. Hearty vote of thanks was proposed to Fancy Press for generous publication of show reports, meetings, etc. Vote of thanks also tendered to chair, and sec. for their services. The following elected as officers for 1914:—Pres., Cooper; chair, Taylor; vice, Geo. Bey; treas., A. Barnsley; auditors, F. H. Viles and J. L. Bock; committee, Messrs. Greenhouse, Barnsley, Amos, Viles, Beck, Palmer, Collier; hon. sec., W. G. Andrews. Winners at previous shows were:—Dec. 16 (judge, J. A. Tonks):—NOR. YELL. CK.: Taylor, HEN: Taylor. Next show to count points is annual members', Feb. 24; Geo. Baker, judge. All fanciers given a hearty welcome; no charge; time 7.30.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

INVERNESS O.A.

33rd Annual General Meeting, held Feb 4; Mr. E. Chisholm (President) presided. The Secretary, Mr. John Connochie, reported that a record show was held, and a good balance in hand. Office-bearers elected: Pres., E. Chisholm; Vice-pres., Messrs. R. Gibb and H. Fraser; Sec., J. Connochie (re-elected); Treas., D. J. McLean. A good working Committee was also elected and everything points to a successful show being held Nov. 25, 1914. The patronage of the Border Fancy C.C. was got, and Mr. Wm. Simpson, the popular breeder and exhibitor of this variety is to judge. This is the first occasion the patronage has come so far north. The classification is second to none, the special prizes of the best obtainable, and the train service also of the best. The members presented to Mr. and Mrs. Connochie a beautiful silver tea-service for services rendered. The Chairman eulogised Mr. Connochie's abilities as Secretary; a keen fancier and sportsman, and one who takes a great interest in the work allotted to him. Nothing is trouble to John which is for the good of the Society. His better half also takes a great interest in the Fancy. Other members spoke of Mr. Connochie's good qualities. Mr. Connochie suitably replied. Votes of thanks closed a very pleasant meeting.—R. Dunean (reporter).

BRAMLEY O.S.

Meeting and pair show, Feb. 28, Carnival Committee Rooms. Mr. Mitchell presided over a good attendance. Balance-sheet was considered, showing balance on the right side. Show dates fixed, and judges selected. Vote of thanks accorded to Mr. J. Chambers for judging.

YORKS.: 1, sp, 3, Baldwinson; 2, vhc, Page; hc, c, Mitchell. NOR.: 1, sp, Page; 2, vhc, Willson; 3, Hetherington. MULING PAIRS: 1 sp, 2, Moore; 3, Willson; vhc, hc, Hetherington; c, Jones. HYB. PAIRS: 1, sp, vhc, c, Jones; 2, Moore; 3, Willson; hc, Walker.

During the evening an interesting little incident occurred, Mr. Willson presenting Mr. Steel, our late sec., with a beautiful silver-mounted umbrella, as a token of our appreciation of his past services. Mr. Steel thanked those who had subscribed to the fund, and stated that he would do all he could to help the society. Thus terminated another very pleasant evening.—F. Page, sec.

GRANGEMOUTH AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Rechahite Hall, Feb. 11, Mr. J. M. Aitken chair, before a good muster. Agreed to alter subs. to 3s. 6d. and 6d. per bird entered at annual show. A vote of condolence and sympathy was voted to Mr. J. Miller, on the sad loss of his mother. Next meeting March 11, when election of judges and classification will take place, hoping to have a good turn-out of members.—J. Woodhouse, Sec.

THE YORKSHIRE UNION.

Election of Officers and Revision of Rules, 1914.

We have received from Mr. H. Hill, sec., a certified copy of the ballot sheet, duly signed by the scrutineers, Messrs. R. Wilkinson and C. E. Walker, and containing particulars as follows:—Vice-presidents, W. B. Atkinson, 80 votes; J. Butler, 129; J. E. Hudson, 69. Sec., H. Hill, unopposed. Trustees (3): A. Brown, 210; W. H. Shackleton, 127; H. H. Towers, 155. Auditors (3): R. Halliday, 225; G. White, 125; F. Armstrong, 124. Proposed alteration to rules:—Rule 7: That each society be represented by one delegate only on the Council. For, 82; against, 174. Rule 12: That the judges be nominated by the societies in January and balloted for in April. For, 128; against, 113. Rule 12: That the choosing of judges be done by a sub-committee of delegates of the Council, and then submitted to the whole Council for their approval. For, 21; against, 270. Rule 16: That any society not holding an open show (if they pay their share of judges' fees) be allowed to move up two dates each year, same as when holding an open show. For, 159; against, 80. Rule 36: That the Union novice medals be competed for at all the Yorkshire Union shows instead of being divided into halves. For, 201; against 60. Rule 42: That there be no price limit on novice classes. For, 24; against, 222. Show rule 4: If not more than ten entries in a class, only half prize money will be paid. For, 48; against, 212.

BRANDON COLLIERY C.B.S.

Meeting Mar. 7, Miners' Institute. Balance sheet read; we have £4 3s. 5½d. to start with next year—not so bad for the first venture. Officers were all re-elected. Chair, W. Basey; treas., A. Robson; sec., G. Reed. Five members made:—F. Lightfoot, M. Bailes, Geo. Hunter, Jos. Hunter, Jos. Robinson. Carried that annual open show be on Jan. 16, 1915. In future, meetings will be at Workmen's Social Club.—Geo. Reed, Sec.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Meeting held March 7, W. Thompson in chair. Resolved the T. Pattison Cup be given for winner of most points at annual show last Sat. in Nov., to be won twice in succession or three times in all. Gold medal valued at £1 1s. for each year.—W. L. Smith.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Adjourned annual meeting. There was a good turn-out of members, who elected the following:—Mr. J. Hands, chair; I. Leck, vice-chair; R. Harris, treas.; G. Havver, sec.; also a large committee, hon. pres., and several vice presidents. Members elected:—Messrs. Hetherington and Wade (Blaydon Burn) and Mr. Hewison.—G. Havver.

REDCAR C.B.S.

Postponed meeting Feb. 28, Crown and Anchor. Sec. reported a balance of 4s. 9d. from the pair show. Decided to hold the first N.F. show June 6. Yorks, Yell., Buff, and Nov. A.C.; Nor., Yell. and Buff; A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hyb., Linnet and A.O.V. Brit., and that Mr S. Ware be asked to judge. Also decided that the society give following prizes for most points at our shows this year:—Champ. Can., 10s. most points; 5s., second; and 2s. 6d. third. Novice Can., ditto, Mules and Brit., ditto; and that no points be counted in classes where there is no competition. If any novice go into champ. section his points shall count towards champ. sp. No member will be allowed to take more than one of these prizes in one year. Following alterations in rules proposed:—That rule re novices read as follows: "Any novice winning three firsts at one members' show or one first in open competition be considered a champion," and "that the meeting night be altered from Saturday to Wednesday." These matters will come up for consideration at next meeting, March 14, when we hope to see a good muster.—C. L. Mallory.

WEST OF FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting March 7, Cowdenbeath, Mr. T. Wildridge (pres.) in chair. The scheme to extend the League to all strictly C.B. shows in Fife was successful in having delegates from Kirkcaldy and Coaltown of Wemyss, who each in turn stated that his society was quite agreeable to come under the League. We hope to see the rest of the societies represented at next meeting. Officials for 1914:—Pres., Mr. Wildridge (Dundonald); vice, Messrs. Arnott (Kirkcaldy) and Storrar (Coaltown of Wemyss); sec., J. Cordery, 21, Dewars Row, Kelty, Fife; treas., Mr. Rankine (Dunfermline); auditors, Messrs. Campbell and Dickson (Dunfermline). Agreed to alter the name of the League from the West of Fife C.B.L. to Fife C.B.L. Sec. instructed to get 100 rule books printed. Delegates were requested to take schemes to their respective societies for consideration, and to report at next meeting, to be held in Cowdenbeath on April 4, at 6.—J. Cordery.

CRAGHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting March 7, Mr. R. Lawson's Black Horse, Mr. M. Davinson chair. Officers elected:—A. Dawson, sec.; chair, Mr. J. H. Elliott; committee, Messrs. Davison, Lawson, Davinson, Anderson, Pacey, Robson, Barron, and Harwood. Subs. for coming year:—Old members, 4s.; new members, 5s. New members elected:—Messrs. Bloomfield, Grant, Redhead, Clark, Robson, Dawson, Cartwright, and Bewick (of Crest fame). We have had a very successful year; every exhibitor got a good spl. and we paid 10s. a class. We have a grand place for our show. Mr. Lawson gave us £1 and a good spl. Mrs. Lawson gave three spls. value 15s. All we want now is a few good old fanciers to join us to make us the best show in the locality. All are welcome.—A. Dawson, Sec. (Kindly note that notices must be sent in duplicate if they are to appear both in CAGE BIRDS and "The Poultry World."—Ed.)

PORTH & RHONDDA VALLEYS.

General meeting, March 7. Chairman, Mr. A. H. C. Legg. New members accepted:—S. F. Stone, W. Goodyear Robertson (Porth), Thomas (Tonypaudy), Carp (Pentre), D. Gilbert (Glynfach), Escott (Cemetery Road), Smart (Apple Tree). New members are rolling in, and there are prospects of this club being one of the largest in Wales. Ent. fee, 1s.; quarterly contribution, 9d. Decided that no member of this club shall attend on any judge at a show where he (the said member) is exhibiting. Decided that the sec. order 200 closed rings, and see to all printing matter, rules, agreements, etc. Mr. F. J. Stone had on view several beautiful medals, etc., which he intends giving to the society as special prizes. Mr. A. H. C. Legg was elected permanent chairman, and Mr. F. J. Smart permanent vice-chairman. Other officers elected:—Treas., Mr. Davis; trustees, B. Hillman, F. J. Smart; auditors, S. Stone and M. Jones; bankers, Bank of England. Next meeting last Sat. in Mar. at 7. All new members are invited to attend at the Aviaries, 66, Pontypridd Road, Porth.—John Shephard, Sec.

DYSART C.B.S.

Meeting, March 7, Victoria Bar Rooms, before a good attendance. Report of the recent cup dispute was made by the president, who stated that he had received the cup back in good order. Discussion took place about altering the count of points, but on a vote it was decided to let the matter remain as before. Show fixed for Oct. 24, and judges nominated. Mr. D. Walker re-elected pres., J. Davidson vice-pres., and J. Logan sec. Committee's selection left over for next meeting, March 21. Two new members enrolled.—J. Logan, Hon. Sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting, Mar. 6, headquarters, Mr. J. Guy chair. There was a good attendance. Members made:—Mr. Lester and Mr. Spruce. Mr. John Guy gave a paper on "Pairing," which was very interesting. Many questions were asked and ably answered by the lecturer. The chairman promised to give a paper on "Feeding" at next meeting, April 3. Please remember the date.—E. Rone.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held March 7th, Co-operative Hall, Low Westwood. Mr. Geo Barkess chair; moderate attendance of members. Decided to have our show on our old date, viz., Oct. 24, confined to members only.—Jameson and Johnson.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

General meeting, Mar. 5, Mr. M. C. Potts chair. Following new members elected:—Messrs. Marmion (Newcastle), English (Usworth), Kennerson (Sunderland), Rowcroft Bros. (Ashington), and Webber (Newcastle). Decided to hold N.F. show, July 4. Judges—Nor., Mr. Butler; Yorks, Mr. Tomlinson; Bord., Mr. Johnston; Brit. and For., Mr. MacGeon. Arrangements for hall for open show were left in the hands of the sec. Resolution was passed instructing the sec. to write to the "Evening Chronicle" protesting against the increased charge for advertising the sale of birds. Decided that we have a discussion on breeding at next monthly meeting, April 2. Committee meeting March 19, 8. Subs. now one.—J. W. Reed.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

Annual general meeting, election of officers, and prize distribution March 5. Cup for most points Yorks, Messrs. Taylor and Wright. Cup for most points Nor., Mr W. Nichols. Cup for most points Brit., Mr. H. Burrows. Spoons, medals, and other sps. also presented to the respective winners. Balance sheet adopted as read, showing a balance in hand of £1 6s. 4d. Decided to remove the radius and make the society open to the United Kingdom. We hope by this to increase the membership. Sub. 4d. per month. Four cups to be won outright this year. Annual show fixed for Nov. 12. We are also holding young stock show, table shows, and having lectures. Meetings first Thursday in month at St. John's Schools, Southall. Further particulars from J. Jefferis, 40, High Street, Southall.

CITY & COUNTY OF PERTH O.A.

Meeting Mar. 2, Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, A. G. Forrest, pres., in chair. Members took part in a Linnet judging competition, with Mr. D. Brown as final judge. Results:—Forrest, 15 points; Blyth, 13; Carstairs, Robertson and Smith, 12 each; Livingston, 5; Borrie and Bruce, 3 each. Agreed to have a Goldf. and Siskin competition at next meeting. Meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chairman.—J. L. Smith.

DONCASTER C.B.S.

First annual dinner Jan. 28, Leopard Hotel, when between 30 and 40 sat down to an excellent repast provided by Host and Hostess Crompton. After the loyal toast by the chairman, Mr. T. W. Stott, Mr. Truman proposed "The Society." In doing so he pointed out the struggle we have had to keep going, but seeing our membership is gradually increasing and entries keep improving at our open show, we can look forward to being one of the strongest societies in England. Mr. F. Barker responded, and said that from small beginnings they had increased steadily until they had at their last show 650 entries. Whereas three years ago they had not a single cup, they now had five. The next item was the presentation of the cups won at our last show. Winners were:—Mr. and Mrs. Leel's cup, Mr. Truman; Smedley and Raynes' cup, Mr. Simpson; Harry Barker challenge cup, Mr. W. Blanchon; Dr. W. J. Gray's cup, G. Hunt; F. Barker's cup, Mr. Truman. Songs were capably rendered by Miss Milly Worthington, Miss Stella Mayne, and Messrs. Barker and Jones, with a recitation each from Mr. Stott and Mr. Truman. Mr. Davis presided at the piano. After vote of thanks to the chairman and artistes, a most enjoyable evening came to a close. Members attend next meeting, Feb. 14, Black Bull, 7.30. Business very important.—G. Hunt.

DUNFERMLINE C.B.S.

Meeting Feb. 28, Co-op. Hall. A novel judging competition was held, which all the members entered, and for which Mr. Wm. Rolland had been appointed referee. Competition was keen and close, only a few points separating the winners, who proved to be Messrs. D. McLaren, R. T. Campbell, and G. Rae in order named. The pres., Mr. T. McLaren, presided at the meeting. Sec. intimated a donation of £2 from the Gothenburg Society towards the funds. Report of West Fife C.B.L. was found satisfactory. Agreed to appoint judges for our sixth annual show at next meeting, Mar. 28. Our visit to the Naturalist Museum is on Mar. 25. Will members who intend being present kindly meet at St. Margaret's Hall at seven prompt? One new member enrolled. Votes of thanks to Mr. Rolland and the chairman terminated the meeting.—Robt. T. Campbell.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Mar. 3, at headquarters, "Rose and Crown" Hotel, Waingate, Mr. T. Down presiding. A very interesting lecture was given by Mr. G. Fletcher, of Sheffield, which took the form of a lantern lecture on British birds. The lecturer proved a thorough master of the subject. The lecture was in two parts, as follows:—Part 1, "The Common Birds of Our Gardens; Their Habits and Food." The lecturer drew his remarks as to their food and habits from notes written by Mr. Cecil Hooper, M.R.A.C. British bird keepers who were present should now be able to keep their birds in excellent condition on their natural food. The second part, "British Birds, Nests, and Eggs," was equally interesting, and proved a great draw. A vote of thanks closed one of the most interesting and enjoyable evenings ever held under the society's wing.—J. A. T. Woodall.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

General meeting, March 3, St. Thomas School. Rev. C. E. Gaul presided over a good muster. F.F. show fixed for July 11, Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) judge. The last of the series of table shows was held for Brit. and Muling pairs. Mr. W. Fairhurst judged an entry of 30, and his awards met with general approval. Table shows have improved upon last year, 130 birds competing in the three shows. Principal winners were Messrs. Boothman, Hope, Hill, Holland, Warburton, Walshaw, Massey. Winners of sps.: 1, Thorpe; 2, Boothman; 3, Brown. Vote of thanks given Mr. Fairhurst for judging. Mr. Fairhurst replied, and promised to give a lecture on "British Birds and Bird-room Remarks," which will be on the syllabus. Next meeting Mar. 11. Mr. H. Boothman will lecture on pairing up, etc. Fanciers and friends welcome.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF DUNDEE C.B.S.

Meeting March 4, Doig's Rooms; Mr. A. R. Towns chair, with a fairly good turnout. One new member enrolled. Meeting closed with usual vote of thanks to chair.—A. Law.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting Feb. 26, 81, Kilbowie Road. Members appointed to look after hall for annual show reported that they had secured the Lesser Town Hall, and it was agreed to accept same. Nominations were made for judges for F.F. and annual shows, and sec. was instructed to write. Discussion took place on the use of closed rings, and decided that we could not alter our rules till annual meeting. New members elected: Messrs. Hendry, Brown, Campbell, and McEwan. Sps. won at pair show were paid out.—Wm. Kane.

NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

Pair show, Mar. 4, The Hall, Royal Street. The room was fairly crowded Mr. J. W. Metcalf judged. A pleasant surprise awaited the sec., who was the recipient of a handsome presentation. Mr. Metcalf was asked by the chairman to say a few words—a request to which he willingly responded. In the course of his speech he dwelt upon the esteem in which the sec., Mr. Broadbent, is held by the members, and remarked that much of the success of the society was to be attributed to his labours. He had pleasure in asking Mr. Broadbent to accept the pair of figures which were before him as a small token of appreciation for his services. The chairman, Mr. Holden, said that the progress the society had made in its first year was entirely due to the good, sound, businesslike way in which Mr. Broadbent had managed things, backed up by a hard-working band of officers, and even went one better than Mr. Metcalf by saying that the society should be proud of its secretary, as it had the best any society could have. Mr. Broadbent, in acknowledging the gift, said he had only done his duty as secretary, and if he had had the good fortune to bring success to the society he had been well rewarded. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Metcalf for his kindness in judging.

BRANDON COLLIERY C.B.S.

First annual open show, held Feb. 14; it was in every way a huge success, entries, attendance, and subs. all exceeding the most sanguine expectations of the committee. The venue was the Miners' Hall, a place capitally adapted for the purpose, nice size, well lighted, and free from draughts. Entries came up splendidly, totalling 327, 264 open and 63 members'. Norwich made a fine display. Yorkshires were only poor in numbers, but some capital specimens were staged. The feature of the show was, however, the Mules and British, and such a glorious display has seldom been seen in the North of England. The class for Mules and Hybrids was a stormer, and in such keen competition many really grand birds had to stand cardless. British classes contained many magnificent specimens, some of them coming direct from the Palace, and competition was of the keenest possible description, grand teams being staged by Dr. Wilson, Messrs. R. D. Parlett, W. H. Butler, W. Foster, W. Davidson, R. Gentleman, R. Wilford, Jamieson and Johnson, and J. Scott. The society appears to be exceptionally fortunate in the choice of its officials, and the President, Mr. C. Christon, is one of the right sort, kindly and obliging, and always willing to do his best for the welfare of the club. Mrs. Burrell and Miss Burrell are generous patrons, and further the interests of the society in every possible way. Mr. A. Robson, the hon. treas., undertook the duties of show manager, and his arrangements left nothing to be desired, and although he was not enjoying the best of health, he stuck to his work in a wonderful manner. Mr. Geo. Reed, the hon. sec., is just the man for the position, for he thoroughly understands how to work a show, and in his hands the clerical work receives the best of attention; the whole of his work was got through without the slightest hitch. Mr. W. Basey, the genial chairman, heads a grand body of fanciers, composed of Messrs. J. Briggs, A. Bailes, W. Hunter, senr., W. Hunter, Junr., J. Gates, J. Mills, R. Mills, W. Thompson, J. Watson and W. Wilson, all of whom gave of their best for the good of the show. The attendance was excellent, the takings at the "gate" reaching a good figure. Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland, judged.

NOR. YELL. CK. (7): 1, 3, Morrison, two nice ones, leader cl., grand shape, short, well rounded body, neat head, good qual., hot col.; 3rd, cl., again nice shape, good size, and col., nice carr., not the finish of leader; 2, Fraser, wing tkd., nice size, lovely shape, neat head and wing carr., equal to winner in all but col.; 4, Thompson; vhc, Clark and Foster; hc, Hanson and Scorer. GRANTHAM C.B.S.

Annual pair show, headquarters, Brewers' Arms, Feb. 28. Norwich were a special feature, Mr. Jackson staging two grand pairs. In novice class competition was very keen, W. Bailey wiuning with a pair that should do good service. Mr. Walton had an exceptionally good variety. Norwich cock, but was beaten owiug to the hen not being good enough. Norwich are certainly improving in Grantham, and members should be able to breed some to hold their own in good company next year. Mr. Loekton judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NOR. PAIR: 1, sp., 2, Jackson; 3, Twilley; 4, vhc, hc, Ratcliff; c, Tebbutt. NOV. NOR.: 1, Bailey; 2, 3, 4, Geeson; vhc, hc, c, Walton. GOLDF. OR BULLF.: 1, 2, Bailey. YORK.: 1, Brewin; 2, Twilley. MULING: 1, sp., Ratcliff; 2, Bailey; 3, Twilley. HYB. PAIR: 1, Bailey. LINNET: 1, Bailey. BRIT HEN: 1, Geeson.

MACCLESFIELD C.B.S.

Pair show, March 5, Dalbrook Street School. There was a good muster of members, who brought some really good pairs. Mr. W. Lee judged. CHAMP. (10): 1, 3, Barrett; 2, Hunt; 4, 6, Cundiff; 5, Hall. NOV. (14): 1, Mollard; 2, 3, Cundiff; 4, 5, 6, 7, Steel. Next meeting night April 2, Brit. bird show.—H. Hall.

1st, Palace, 1914

Pair of Green Budgerigars, exhibited by Allan Silver, Esq.; the cock of this pair was bred and sold by us to the exhibitor, thus proving our giant bulldog strain of Budgerigars THE FINEST PROCURABLE. Yellows, 7/6 pair; Greens, 5/6 pair; guaranteed breeders. Proof, not paper swank. We supply and bred more winners than any other advertiser, and are giving constant proof of wins. Our prices are no higher than asked for inferior or imported stock, therefore be wise and send to THE FOUNTAIN HEAD. All our own breeding or our strain bought in from private breeders (not imported and sold otherwise). To those who cannot afford cash down, send for particulars of our INSTALMENT SYSTEM, 1/6 PAIR, BALANCE 1/- PER WEEK. Ours is the largest, freest breeding, and best coloured strain living. Hundreds bred monthly. No waiting; birds dispatched same day as order received. All other foreigners kept. Lists free. ('Phone, 849 Richmond.).—COLLINGBOURNE AND CO., East Sheen Aviaries, East Sheen, Surrey; and at Sunbury-on-Thames, Middlesex. (1353)

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to a misleading advert we beg to state that the 1st Palace, 1914, winning Budgerigar cock we bred and sold to Allan Silver, Esq., was bred from a strain of Australian imported giant Budgerigars imported some eight years back and carefully bred down by J. Leadbury, Esq., whose entire stud of 263 birds we secured back last spring. That blood, and that blood only, is in our strain. Any birds we secured from Teddington have been for selling and we have always advertised as that one strain (see advert. some few weeks back); re Rabbage's entire stock we bought we advertised as inferior in size and colour at cheaper prices. Don't be deceived. Call and inspect both our establishments and judge for yourselves. Established 1891: Collingbourne and Co. 'Phone: 849 Richmond. (1353)

THE increasing popularity of Spratt's Foods for Canaries and other Cage Birds is due entirely to their superiority.

Whether you keep your Birds as pets, as songsters, or for profit, always remember that it is in your best interests to give them only those foods which are sold in Spratt's original packets—packets upon which the name is plainly printed—the name which guarantees quality—

Spratt's

Only the choicest seeds are used in the various mixtures which we supply for Cage Birds, and these are carefully blended and entirely free from dust, being treated by a special process to secure absolute purity. Further, all our manufactured foods are also of the highest quality and every ingredient entering into their composition specially selected.

We shall be pleased to send you Samples of various foods, also 6d. Book on Canaries or British Birds, on receipt of 3 penny stamps to cover cost of packing and postage.

"Information most valuable and practical."

7, Smith Street, Lower Walton.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the safe delivery of OUR CANARIES from you.

I should like also to say that I am very satisfied with it. I think that all lovers of Canaries should be in possession of a copy. The information it contains I consider to be most valuable and practical to all bird fanciers, as a guide and help in keeping their birds in a healthy condition. I am going in for Norwich Greens, and feel quite safe while I am acting according to the advice in the book, especially when I see the names of all the leading judges and fanciers in the country.

Thanking you, I beg to remain,

Yours faithfully,

ED. JONES.

P.S. — All working-men fanciers would do well to secure a copy of OUR CANARIES.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-ides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—It the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

"PHOSTO"

It is really wonderful what this greatest of all foods can do, and is doing, in the Fancy. "Phosto" puts life and vigour in the stock birds, that means fertile eggs. Where Phosto is used bad feeding is unknown. Every young hatched is reared. Hens will feed on Phosto, and young thrive. Startling proof. Bagden Hall Stables, Huddersfield. March 4, 1914. Dear Sir,—Kindly forward three tins of Phosto. I never lost a single youngster after using Phosto last season. Yours truly, W. Everett. 14, Livingstone-st., Norwich. March 7, 1914. Sir,—Received tin of Phosto, with thanks. Using it last year on my Crests I found Phosto a great success. Yours truly, J. Carlton. Sold in tins, 1/-, 2/6, 4/6: Judge Silk, Whitstable.

SOFT MOULT, NOT SINGING

Special notice to all bird lovers. We are anxious that every fancier should know the value of our bird medicines. Ditchfield's Medicines have been used by most leading fanciers for over six years, and are supplied to the London Zoo. They are genuine remedies, which can be given with confidence to all classes of cage birds. Fanciers, we want a trial. We guarantee to return you every penny paid if our medicines fail to give you satisfaction. Special offer: If you have any birds you are relying upon for the breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, try Ditchfield's Tonic Drops. We guarantee you a perfect cure. This medicine is without doubt the grandest medicine ever introduced for bringing birds into breeding condition. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are an absolute cure for Not Singing, Soft Moult, Going Light, Egg Binding, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. In 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For Bronchitis, Wheezing, and Hoarseness, get Ditchfield's special Lung Tonic. It is the grandest Medicine ever offered for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For cases of Constitutional Weakness and Debility get Ditchfield's Famous Revivo. There is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. As a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing, Revivo is absolutely unequalled. In 7d., and 1/1 bottles. In cases of severe Diarrhoea use Ditchfield's Famous Diarrhoea Powder, in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. It is perfectly safe, and can be relied upon. When ordering Medicine, kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles any kind for 1/9, three for 2/6. The 1/1 bottles are treble the size of the 7d. bottles. All medicines are sent, post free, per return. All bottles broken in transit replaced. Also two valuable Seed Recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Song, given free to all Purchasers of our Medicines. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, OLDHAM. (1427)

A Marvellous

collection, which must be seen to be appreciated, and I mean both in quantity and quality; besides, you can save

By Purchasing Your Norwich Direct from Me.

Compare the quality with anything you can get elsewhere, at much higher prices. It is not what bought-up birds at absurdly high prices have done that matters to you, even if led to believe that they are not so procured. What you want to know is where you can get the greatest value for money. I sell the Winners, and can easily save you money, and at the same time give you birds that others would reserve.

Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6. Hens, 3/-, 3/6. Pairs, 8/6, 10/6. High-class Cocks, fed, 10/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/-. Hens 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- per pair. If you don't see what is required, write to me. Detailed list free.

400 Champion Rollers in Stock.

I have just received a magnificent collection of pure Seifert Rollers, consisting of 400 cocks, and a large number of hens. These birds have not been picked over. They have come direct from the rooms of some of the best breeders in Germany, and include some exceedingly good birds. They are in full rolling song, with a good variety of tours, and are sure to give complete satisfaction anywhere. Kindly note the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Hens, same pure strain, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each. Genuine schoolmasters, specially trained for contest singing, 20/-, 25/- 30/-, 35/-, 40/- each upwards. Travelling cages 3d. extra in all cases.

I am also offering a limited number of hens bred from some of the best strains in England, at 7/6 and 10/- each. These are worth treble to any breeder. All B.R.C.C. rung. I invite fanciers requiring Rollers to come and hear these birds, and make their own selection. To those who cannot come I offer to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on 10 days' approval, and undertake to return cash in full, if not absolutely satisfactory. Is it possible to make a fairer offer?

SILVER CUP,

4 Firsts, 2 Thirds, Etc.

Once again my birds have wound up the show season by securing highest honours at the Great National Show (see report of Palace Show. That they have won consistently all through the season is shown by the fact that they have secured 76 Specials, 89 Firsts, 74 Seconds, and 60 Thirds This Season and have been shown in open champion classes only, in hottest competition at all the leading shows. They have also won the N.P.C. Champion Trophy, the O.N.P.C. Champion Trophy, 3rd in Y.C.C. Competition, also several Silver Cups and Bowls, Gold and Silver Medals, Diplomas, and numerous other trophies.

I have also supplied birds that have won highest honours for my clients, including winners of this year's Palace show, in very strong classes. I have letters filed here for anyone to see in proof of this; also a large number of letters from fanciers who have bred winners from stock bred and sold by me.

These are FACTS, needing no comment. They speak for themselves, and they cannot be disputed. I am now offering marvellous value in the following varieties:—

CHAMPION NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN.

Grand, short, thick-set birds, cocks or hens, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards. Matched pairs, personally selected by me for breeding winners, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- to 100/- per pair. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and I am prepared to give a written guarantee that the above are bred by me from my noted strain of winners. I have also a few real good cobby birds bred from other well-known strains at the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 7/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/0, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Grand cobby hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, with good position and in full song, 7/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Erect racy hens, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Matched breeding pairs, personally selected and ready for immediate breeding, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair. Also a few special pairs bred from open winners and personally matched by me for breeding winners, at 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. I am in a special position to give amateurs a good start with the best blood in the Fancy, or to supply the old hand with good stock birds, either Cocks or Hens, at a reasonable price.

CRESTS AND CREST-BRED.

Having just received the entire stock of a well-known breeder, I am able to offer remarkable value in this variety. Every bird bred from noted stock, and capable of breeding winners. Kindly note these prices:—

A Few of the Contents.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Bobden. A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS. By W. H. Gibb. The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRD-CATCHING. By J. W. Steel. A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make bird-lime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

MISTAKES BIRD-KEEPERS MUST AVOID. By Claude St. John. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby.

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP AND BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS. By F. Meakin. This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES. By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

16, Mill Platt, Isleworth.
March 10th, 1914.

Sir,—Your "Cage Bird Annual" to hand. I am delighted with it. I have been looking through it, and it has surprised me to see the information it gives, and no Fancier should be without it. I also wish to thank you for my advert. in same. Wishing "Cage Birds" every success.

Yours faithfully,
W. H. PHIPPS.

A Passing Opportunity.

"CAGE BIRDS 1913 ANNUAL" will not be reprinted. Are you, then, going to let this grand opportunity pass you? If you do, it means that in your quest for success you will go along blindfold, when for the small outlay of sixpence you might have a clear road. Make sure of it by ordering NOW.

Lovely Coloured Plate of Yellow and Green Borders. Many Art Plates and other illustrations. Much other general information of a highly useful nature.

For a Complete Knowledge of British Birds You Can't Beat

THE

By H. NORMAN.

The Most Thorough and Practical Work on British Birds ever Produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth. Part I. Hardbills. Deals in the fullest manner with Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II. Softbills. With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

Price complete, bound in cloth 2s., post free 2s. 3d., in parts 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

MULE and HYBRID BREEDERS make your 1914 breeding season a record in every way by purchasing a copy of CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid.

Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

THE PRACTICAL AND COMPREHENSIVE WORK WHICH ALL HYBRID BREEDERS REQUIRE.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL.

The author, that well-known expert and judge, gives much useful instruction on AVIARIES and CAGES, BREEDING, MOULTING, EXHIBITING, DISEASES & THEIR CURE, SEEDS, Etc., and devotes a separate chapter to each individual variety.

Get a copy now, it will help you this coming breeding season.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Table show Mar. 2, headquarters, with nearly 50 entries, comprising Yorks, Nor., and Burds. Most of the members present took part in a judging competition, which proved not only amusing, but instructive. Winner was Mr. Wallace, runner-up Mr. Marsh, both scoring a very good average of points. A spl. prize of 2s. 6d. for best bird was won by Mr. Marshall with a fine Nor. Vote of thanks to the final adjudicator, Mr. B. F. Forse, terminated a very pleasant evening.—A. W. Farmer.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting, March 14, Mr. Mennard chair. The greater part of the evening was taken up with the pair show, which had brought together a large muster of members and friends. 74 pairs were staged in five classes, which gave the judges, Messrs. T. Baldwinson and Hattersley, a very difficult task, in which they acquitted themselves well. Mr. W. Hornby handed 13s. to the sec., which had been collected by him for the special fund and the funds of the society. CHAMP. YORKS (24): 1, 4, vhc, Norton; 2, Smith; 3, hc, Rhodes; c, Pyrah. NOR. Abbot, Geo. E. McCreight, R. Watkinson, H. Laughing, and T. Green were elected members. Ernest Norton, Hon. Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Annual pair show, Mar. 4, Palmer Hall, followed by a lecture on the birds present, by Mr. J. Robson, the judge. Entries totalled 73 pairs, a record for pair show. Nor. led the way both in quantity and quality, the judge remarking it was the finest lot of Nor. he had judged this season, special mention being made of the nov. birds. Mr. Dearlove's winning champ. pair afterwards changed hands at a large figure. Yorks. were good, but there was room for improvement. One or two pairs needed changing about a little, and the owners would do well to strike a bargain between themselves. Six good muling pairs, chiefly Goldie-Canary, and some promising Hybrid pairs were also shown. Only four pairs of Crests, with one extra good pair amongst them. The room was packed (the overflow having to stand in the corridor) with enthusiastic members, all of whom were well pleased at the prospects for the coming season. Four members elected. Decided to extend the boundary for the S. Pike cup to a radius of 30 miles.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Held Jan. 31. Over 150 birds faced the judges. The system, common in life, of a mutual agreement whereby the most experienced members are appointed to judge contemporaneous members' events speaks well for the good feeling which exists in Fancy circles here, and Lochgelly were fortunate in securing three such experts from the Kelty ranks as Mr. Barclay for Plainheads and Crests, Mr. J. Anderson Borders and Yorks., and A. Anderson British and Mules, their awards being well received. The quality in the Nor. and Brit. was excellent, many of the winners being well known in the open arena. We noticed that quite a few visitors who had hoped to pick up a bird here had to come away unserved, a reluctance to sell being manifested by owners of Plainheads in particular, both Mr. Grewar and Sneddon refusing tempting offers for stock, and many envious eyes were cast on the winners, the yellow cocks being of that desirable weight, combined with quality, so difficult to obtain. In the British Linnets and Redpolls were the best, the winners being of outstanding merit. An undoubtedly foreign Bullfinch, which figured here, was, we were informed, a local capture, and gave no indication of being an escape. Do these northern species occasionally visit our shores? Borders were the poorest feature of the show, the variety having few adherents in this district, which may also be said of the "Bird o' circle," which failed to provide an entry. The show was well patronised, and afforded further proof that an inter-club show would do well in this district.

HORNSEY & WOOD GREEN C.B.S.

Table show March 3, Nightingale Hotel, Wood Green, when 52 birds in the pink of condition were staged. There was a very good muster of members. Unfortunately, Mr. Hodder who was down for judging failed to put in an appearance, and Mr. Titchner, an old member, kindly consented to officiate, and gave every satisfaction. He was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. The society is holding a supper at the above, April 2, 8.30; tickets, 2s. each; fanciers and their friends will be made welcome. Ladies specially invited. Full particulars may be obtained of Mr. P. Brooks, hon. sec., 3, Trinity Road, Wood Green, or any of the committee.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Tenth annual show of Can., Hyb. and Muling pairs, Mar. 3, headquarters, Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, Peckham. The entry was exceedingly good, over double of the previous year. 54 pairs were staged, which gave Mr. A. G. Cant great satisfaction for his first show; quality also was exceedingly high. The Nor. and Yorks. specimens were very keen. A few choice specimens of Bord. and Crests were to be seen. Mr. Cant was supported by Messrs. Cole and Tomsett, Mr. Hodson, the late secretary also being present. Mr. John Robson judged.

RICHMOND C.B.S.

Annual show of pairs, matched for breeding, and of Brit. birds, Mar. 2, St. John's Hall. There was a nice display of good Nor. and Yorks., these being the strongest sections. The merit of the nov. birds was remarkably good, many of the pairs being quite equal to the champion. Some very good pairs for hybrid breeding were shown, and a few smart hybrids and Brit. birds completed a well-arranged show. In Mr. W. Nichols this society has a most able and enthusiastic sec., backed up by a good chairman, Mr. W. Phipps, and an excellent committee in Messrs. Parmiter, Cripps, Springett, Buck, Stevens, Snow, Perritt, Harris, Lathern, Huxley, Keary, and Birch. The attendance was good, and the exhibition in every way a success. Mr. J. Robson judged. NOR. Twitterings.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe will judge at Llanrwst August 26, and Longton Oct. 3.

Newark C.B.S. annual members' show will be held Nov. 21, writes Mr. W. Lidgett, hon. sec. Mr. W. Vardy will judge.

Messrs. Abbott and Austin, secs., Dover C.B.S., inform us that their show will be held on Oct. 21 and 22. Mr. C. A. House will judge.

Societies desiring the patronage of the Norwich Plainhead Club should make application at once to F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Burnley, sec.

The show of the Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S. is fixed for Dec. 4, 5, writes Mr. T. Parnaby, sec. Two popular judges. Hoping other societies will not clash

Will secretaries and others, to avoid clashing, please notice that we have fixed our open show for Nov. 25? write Messrs. Hill and Cook, hon. secs. Wiveliscombe F.A.

Mr. A. Wyper, sec. Cumnock C.B.S., writes that the judges for the show, Nov. 28, will be: Scots. Fancy, A. Nisbet (Galston), Nor., W. G. Muir (Killie), Bord., F. Ritchie (Lesmahagow); Brit., P. McQuiston (Ayr).

Mr. G. Greenwell, hon. sec., writes that the Nest Feather Show of the Wallsend C.B.A. is fixed for July 25, and the annual open for Nov. 14. Judges, Messrs. Sceley and S. Dixon, Canaries, and J. Maddison, British.

Allow me to congratulate you on the splendid Annual you have again issued this year. It is a book all bird-lovers should have, especially novices, as it contains a host of information for both young and old.—Jas. Napier (Juniper Green).

Will secretaries, to avoid clashing, please note that we have fixed our annual open show for Jan. 16? writes Mr. Geo. Reid, sec. Brandon Colliery C.B.F.S. Mr. T. Dixon, Bedlington, will judge Canaries, and Mr. F. Marwood, Eglescliff, British.

Kindly correct a mistake I made when sending in report of last meeting, writes Mr. P. Knight, Press Correspondent, London C.B.A. I gave the date of the annual show at the Horticultural Hall as Dec. 4, 5 and 7, but it should be Nov. 26, 27 and 28.

Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) and Mr. E. Brunskill (Southport) were elected to judge our open show, Nov. 27 and 28, writes Mr. Horace Whitney, assist. sec. Sale C.B.S. Mr. C. C. Blackshaw, of Altrincham, has again taken up the Fancy, and joined our society.

The following well-known fanciers will judge at our annual show, Nov. 7, Village Hall, Juniper Green, writes Mr. Jas. Napier, Sec. Colinton and Currie Parishes O.S.:—Scotch Fancies, Mr. J. McLennan (Edinburgh); Borders, Mr. Collan Hyslop (Stirling); Nor. and Brit., Mr. Jas. Winter (Edinburgh). Mr. J. W. Steel (Dalkeith) will judge all varieties at N.F. show, July 11.

We hear that Mr. J. C. Barnes (Walkley, Sheffield) will judge at Walkley Nest Feather June 20; Sheffield C.B.S., N.F., June 27; Sheffield O.S., N.F., July 4; Liverpool, Oct. 23; Sheffield O.S., Nov. 6; Warrington, Nov. 13; Rotherham, Nov. 20; Stocksbridge, Nov. 28; Gateshead, Dec 18; and members' shows—Walkley, Nov. 14; Lincoln, Dec. 5.

Schedules of our forthcoming open show (Easter Monday) have been sent to all known exhibitors, writes Mr. W. Nolan, sec. Menai Bridge C.B.S. If any have been overlooked, will they kindly inform me, and I shall be pleased to send one per return. We hope that all exhibitors will give us their best support. Should anyone find it inconvenient to send birds to arrive here on the morning of the show-day, I will undertake to look after all exhibits over the week-end. (See advert. in this week's CAGE BIRDS.)

In respect of the Red naped Whydah, a drawing of which appears on page 267, we quote the following from Shelley's "Birds of Africa":—

The Red naped Whydah ranges from Kilimanjaro Mountain into Abyssinia. Mr. Jackson writes: "Only seen in long reeds and bulrushes at the swampy end of the small lake on the top of Elgeyo, evidently breeding, this bird has a curious habit of making a playground for itself. I noticed several in the long grass, and I saw the male evidently playing as it darted several times into the air to a height of about four feet, and then darted down again. Their playing-ground is a work of some time, as the grass is all worn away in an irregular circle, with the exception of a small tuft left in the centre with two or three little recesses at the base, which are evidently the result of the birds' play." On the Mau Plateau (8,700 feet) he procured a male in breeding plumage on August 3rd, and remarks "plentiful in boggy hollows; where the grass is long I saw this bird at its game of jumping up and down.

A Rung Bullfinch Caught.

The enclosed ring, marked 596, Witherby, High Holborn, was caught at Northwood, near Watford, last month, writes Mr. J. Goodall, Watford.

The Seaham Harbour Greenfinch.

I see in this week's CAGE BIRDS that Mr. Witherby wants to know when the Greenfinch was caught with the ring on at Seaham Harbour. I caught it on Feb. 9.—R. Walker (Seaham Harbour).

A Successful Charity Show

We have handed over to the Leicester Children's Hospital Fund the sum of £6 15s., the proceeds of a combined show, held between the Leicester Hand-in-Hand and the Leicester C.B.S.—J. Hardbattle, A. Freestone (hon. secs.).

What a Chemist thinks of "C.B. Annual."

Please allow me to say, as a chemist, that the article in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL for 1914, entitled "A Handy Guide to Bird Medicines and Their Uses," is exceedingly well done, and shows the hand of an expert.—Thos. Yule (Cowdenbeath).

One of the Early Birds.

Mr. Robson, Ryton, Co. Durham, has a young Thrush which must have been hatched from an egg laid as early as January. When the bird was a nestling it was picked up by Mr. Robson on his way to work, and secured under an old pail until his return in the evening. The orphan was then taken to Mr. Robson's home, and thrived most satisfactorily.

Is this a Record?

I am in receipt of your cheque, £2, being the amount of CAGE BIRDS cash prize won by my yellow green-marked Yorkshire, at the Palace; please accept my very best thanks. The bird was claimed at £15, and it would be interesting to know if this is a record price for a Yorkshire Canary. I think it is certainly a precedent for a bird bred in the South of England to win 1st and special at Bradford National.—R. L. Crisp.

"Cage Birds" Special buys a Grandfather's Clock.

Enclosed please find receipt for the hand-coloured Diploma and your cheque, £10 10s., which came to hand to-day. I am very pleased with the Diploma, which I shall have suitably framed and given the place of honour in my bird-room. As regards the prize-money, I wanted a permanent memento of being the first winner of your most generous Coupon Prize Scheme, so I have bought a grandfather's clock with the money, and shall have a suitable silver plate fixed on it, describing particulars. I may say this will serve another purpose, as it has pleased my wife, and has been a veritable "bit of sugar for the bird." I must also compliment your artist, Mr. Norman, on the sketch you published of my bird in the Crystal Palace Number front page.—Alfred Jas. Smith (Erdington).

Reading Secretary Resigns.

I am resigning the secretaryship of the Reading C.B.S. at next meeting, writes Mr. W. H. Pyke, and should like to thank all our members and exhibitors who have done their best to make my term of office a pleasant recollection to me. I have a bundle of letters in my drawer, many of them written by fanciers known to me by name only, and every time I look at them I feel that my four years' stewardship has been one of the happiest times of my life. The splendid co-operation of members, who have all put their backs into it, has resulted in record shows, record membership, and record balances; and now we have a new sec. coming along, who is a real worker to put us up still higher. Now is the time when he wants a bit of encouragement, and I trust members and fanciers will do their best to help him along as they have in my own case. I shall still remain a member, and as I am not leaving this district, shall be able to keep in touch with fanciers.

The Southern N.P. Club Patronage.

I have had a good number of applications for patronage, writes Mr. F. S. Matthes, hon. sec., but owing to the rule made at annual meeting that the same judge shall not officiate at two shows under our patronage, some of these must be left out; and I should like a few more. Eight classes in champion, six classes in novice. The notice in Press concerning my resignation is an error. I shall hold that office until the end of the year, as promised. Unfortunately for the club's business I have not been able to take up its duties since the Palace meeting, as I have had the misfortune to lose, by death, my brother and my aunt, and all my spare time from a very busy life has been used up; but I will soon again give my attention to the club, and answer all letters and send along receipts for donations and subscriptions. Will those members bear in mind our Special Prize Fund this year, when sending their subscriptions, and try to get some of their friends to join.

"Please thank the 37 persons who answered my advt. in CAGE BIRDS of March 7th. I have answered all who sent stamp for a reply."—JOHN KNOWLES (Preston).

"Please thank all those that answered my advert in CAGE BIRDS. I had so many replies that I could not answer them all."—E. T. HAMES (Bournemouth).

"I had very good results from my last advt. Letters from Scotland, England and Wales. Sold all advertised. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success."—D. BETTY (Goodinch).

"I have sold 64 Norwich through my small advt. and have sent a lot of orders back again."—H. GATER (Troedyrhiw).

"Thanks to advertisement in your valuable Paper re Green Borders, I have sold the Borders offered."—RAWSTHORNE (Seaforth).

"You will no doubt be pleased to hear I have had several good sales from a small advt. in your issue."—W. R. MILES (Chichester).

The first feather show of Redhill C.B.S. will be held July 1, judge Mr. G. Gardner, writes Mr. A. W. Bacon, hon. sec.

Correction:—In our last issue, in Mr. J. H. Clark's advt., under Foreign birds, the price of the White Javas should have read 7s., not 1s.

The syllabus of Stratford and East London F.S. has reached us, and contains an interesting table of fixtures. In addition to rules and regulations there are particulars of cups and trophies, and a list of members' names and addresses.

Kindly allow me, through the medium of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. E. Hudson, to tender my best thanks to the sixty members who voted for me as Vice-President of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S., and also to convey to Mr. Butler my good wishes on his elevation to that office.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Roberts.

We are sorry to hear of the sad loss sustained by Mr. Tom Roberts, of Llandrwst, in the death of his wife at the early age of thirty-six years, leaving Mr. Roberts with one child of the age of twelve. Mrs. Roberts was always deeply interested in the hobby of her husband, and rendered him at all times the help which can only be given by a wife when she is in entire sympathy with her husband in the proper keeping of his feathered pets. Fanciers will join us in our condolence with Mr. Roberts in his bereavement.

Mr. John Bell, Leith.

I regret to say, writes Mr. Percy West, that Mr. John Bell, a well-known breeder of the Scotch Fancy Canary, passed away suddenly at his residence in Iona Street, Leith, at the age of sixty-one. He was at work until Saturday, March 7. He was a member of the Edinburgh O.S., and the now defunct Edinburgh and Northern. Being a cabinet-maker by trade, he had a wide reputation as a cage-maker, especially of Scotch Fancy show cages, which were always in great demand. He was predeceased by his wife about two years ago, but leaves a grown-up family, to whom fanciers will extend their heartfelt sympathy.

All Bathgate prize-money has been paid, specials will follow later. We thank exhibitors for the hearty support they gave us, writes Mr. A. Nicol, hon. sec.

Kidwelly P.P. and C.B.S. intend holding its annual show Nov. 4. Mr. J. H. Payne (Gloucester) will judge. Mr. Chas. Price, "Velindre," Kidwelly, has been appointed secretary.

The R. McKie Fund.

I wish to thank our members and friends who have helped to start Mr. R. McKie again, writes Mr. G. Greenwell, sec. Wallsend C.B.S.. We have received £2 in money, as follows:—CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE 10s., W. McGinn, Lumsden, 5s. each; J. Heslop, Greenwell, C. Stubbs, W. Studholme, W. Stephenson, J. Craig, C. Wilson, Mathewson, 2s. 6d. each. Also Canaries, as follows: G. Scott, Buff Nor. ck.; G. Chambers, ditto; C. Kay, ditto; Holden, yell. Nor. ck.; N. Hymers, pair Nor.—Geo. Greenwell, sec.

Please allow me space in CAGE BIRDS to thank those members of Wallsend C.B.S. who so generously subscribed to assist me in rebuilding up my stock, after having lost my birds through fire. I hope none of them will ever be so unfortunate as to lose theirs, but if ever they should, I hope I may be in a position to assist them, as I should like. I thank you for your very liberal subscription of ten shillings to start the ball, also Mr. W. McGinn, Walker, and Mr. A. Holden, Gateshead, who gave such liberal assistance. I should like especially to thank Mr. G. Greenwell, sec. of Wallsend Society, for the trouble he has taken to get me assistance. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success.—R. McKie.

SHOW DATES FIXED.

To secure insertion in this column, a guarantee that the show will be advertised in "C.B." to the extent of at least 25/- must be sent to our manager. Please note that we only insert those that guarantee, so our list is a bonafide one.

Correction in Report.

The awards in the house moulted Linnet class at Bathgate should read 1, 7, Robertson; 2, Inman; not 1, Strachan; 2, Juman; 7, Sinclair, as reported.

Praise Indeed!

Allow me to congratulate you on the excellent sketch of my Palace winner, the Chinese Starling, writes Mr. R. Sharples. It is a credit to your artist, Mr. Goodchild. I could not have done it any better myself. I may say I have been a reader of your valuable paper since its second number.

DRY HEAT FOR AILING BIRDS.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

THOUGH this has been used by many aviculturists more or less in a casual way for a considerable period, very few aviculturists have made definite provision for its use, or provided a small chamber, which could, in a few moments, be put into operation for any case that might suddenly arise. A paper from the pen of Dr. Lovell-Keays in the current issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, reminds me that dry heat has never been given the prominence it deserves, as a factor in the reduction of losses from many avian ailments, especially when acquiring a stock of birds.

First I propose to give a brief resume as to how it has been used in the past, and next to quote from the aforesaid article, and finally to suggest one or two simple, or more elaborate, methods of providing accommodation for the treatment. In a more or less "rough and ready" sort of fashion dry and moist heat has been used in the past both for the acclimatisation of birds which have passed into a state of collapse shortly after arrival, and also as remedial agents in extreme cases, when established birds have suddenly been picked up in extremis.

Fresh Air and Robust Health.

Perhaps, I had better allude to my own methods—very crude—and then quote a particular case as an illustration. I had better first remind my readers that I keep scarcely any birds indoors, being a firm believer in the outdoor treatment all the year round. The flights, to which heat can be applied, are two, and are placed in the lobby which forms the entrance to my aviary. Each of these flights has a ground area 10ft. by 4ft., and range from 5½ft. to 8ft. high. In the passage-way, between the two, a small heating stove stands during the winter months, but during sharp periods the temperature frequently falls as low as 30 degrees F. in the early morning. This is all the heat I supply, and consequently have no really heated place, large or small, to use as a sick-ward. However, with me, such is very seldom required, and my death-rate always ranges very low being seldom more than 5 to 7½ per cent.

It has been my invariable practice when coming across a bird in a state of collapse (others do it for me when I am not at home) to take such indoors, partly envelope it in flannel and put it in a small cage on a bedding of fine hay, standing the cage on the top of the kitchen range, or even putting it in the oven. Of course, the heat of the range was the governing factor, determining which procedure was taken. After recovery the bird is kept in a moderately warm room for a short period. Then it has the protection of four walls only for a time, being ultimately returned to the outdoor aviary.

Keep a Spare Cage Handy.

This takes place in the spring, for I seldom have such cases arise save during cold weather, and very few at any time. Still, very sharp periods find out the weak and ailing both among animals and human beings, as we have had brought to our notice during a recent cold spell. We should be prepared with some place to treat such cases as they arise, and have appliances, in the form of a cage, practically ready for use, so that there may be no loss of time in applying the treatment, whether by the primitive use of kitchen range or a special apparatus.

Now before leaving my personal experiences, let me quote an instance as a typical case, for in the course of years many birds have been saved which have been picked up in an apparently hopeless condition. I am choosing rather an extreme case, the better to illustrate my subject, and also to show the need of being prepared. The bird was a hen Magpie Mannikin, which had been in my possession for five years, during which time it had brought up several broods of young. The period was during a very severe spell of several weeks' frost and snow without a break.

How a Sick Magpie was Revived.

It was one of some fifty birds occupying the aviary, all the others including Tanagers, varied Lorikeets, etc., being healthy and vivacious, and apparently quite unaffected by the weather conditions. It but just lived when it was brought indoors, being too helpless to move. It was wrapped up loosely in flannel, and put in the small cage on hay, and the cage was placed on the top of the range. By midday (it was picked up at 9 a.m.) it was beginning to move about a little, being fairly lively by night. It was left on the range all night, the fire being "banked," not only for the sake of the bird, but also for the hot-water apparatus, and a light was left burning

The following morning it had apparently recovered, but to make sure the nursing was continued for several days, with the flannel and hay removed from the cage, and no light at night. It was then put into a room in which a fire burned during the day, but not at night, and later kept right away from the fire, at the opposite end of the room. After this it went into the outdoor birdroom, in which a little heat was given, but not sufficient to keep out frost during severe periods. Here it did well, there being no relapse, and it was put out of doors again in the spring. It lived for a further three years, but was eventually found dead (mid-summer) after having been eight and a-half years in my aviary. During the last two summers it was the mother of five young hybrid Mannikins, being mated with a Bronze Mannikin.

Space will not permit of quoting other cases, neither is it necessary, as there is a great similarity in all the cases. I would point out that the above is the case of an acclimatised bird—watchfulness and promptitude will keep losses down to a minimum. Further, I have found the treatment equally efficacious for hard and softbills.

More Methods than One.

As to others' methods. Some have applied heat on similar lines to the above. Others have used a box, divided into two chambers, with a lamp or gas jet burning in the lower one, the top one as the sick-bay. Others, again, have used a similar appliance for the reception of new arrivals, keeping them therein a few hours, or days, in the case of birds, which arrive in a more or less prostrate condition.

I know of more than one series of large aviaries which have, not only a heated bird-room, but also a hospital-room, with radiators capable of keeping up a very high temperature. Yet others have made use of hothouses, where the temperature ranges from 60 to 80 degrees F., both for acclimatisation and temporary quarters for sick birds, but in the latter case it would be moist heat. The latter two cases are almost outside the scope of my readers, but are mentioned as giving some indication of the extent to which heat has been used for the acclimatisation of ailing birds, even by the exponents of outdoor aviculture.

THE RED-NAPED WHYDAH (Penthetria laticauda).

One of the most beautiful of African birds, and one of the rarest importations to this country among the Whydahs. Excepting for the crimson on the nape and throat, it resembles the better-known Crimson-throated Whydah, which generally takes a high place among the honours at any show in which it is entered. (See note on the species in "Twitterings.")

The Birds of Flamborough Headland.

By J. FEW (Wigan).

THE headland is likewise the home of the noble but rapacious Peregrine Falcon, and of the Kestrel; the former is strictly protected by the Yorkshire Naturalists' Union. Rock Pipits and House Martins, too, share with the larger birds the hospitality which the cliffs afford. It appeared to me that the accommodation on the great sea wall was altogether inadequate for such a vast concourse of birds. I traversed nearly a mile of the cliffs, and the bird scenes I have depicted were reproduced over and over again; all the shelves, minute ledges, holes and fissures were already appropriated, and the majority of the birds flying alongside the cliffs seemed to be searching for a resting-place. In their fruitless efforts to find a foothold, the poor birds repeatedly planted their webbed-feet against the perpendicular wall, presumably for a momentary respite.

Sounds like a Football Crowd.

At times the sound made by this whirl of feathered life is almost deafening, and can, perhaps, be best likened to the applauding of thousands of human beings at a football match—heard from a distance. Just below me on a ledge about four feet long by about two inches wide, and almost within reach of my walking-stick, is a small party of nine Guillemots, particularly loquacious. Their gutteral notes are quite audible, and each bird seems to have a tale to tell; and simultaneously they are bowing, as if they assented to all that is said.

What does this bird language mean? We are acquainted with some of the notes of birds and their significance, e.g., the call-notes and alarm-notes, the notes of challenge, and in some cases of love and distress; but there is much that is meaningless to us, though doubtless well understood and appreciated by the birds themselves. One could almost imagine that these Guillemots were using strong language about the rock-climbers (or "climmers," in local parlance) for filching their single egg, and were telling each other of some shelves they had discovered which were inaccessible to these depredators. An instance of a very remarkable change of habitat, as the outcome of similar persecution, is that of the Herring Gull, which nests in trees in some parts of North America, to escape the plundering fishermen.

Many of the birds on the sea-wall are occupied in domestic affairs. Quite close to me a Rock Dove is cooing at the entrance to its domicile. Here a pair of Puffins, only about four yards below me, are entering with waddling gait their nesting quarters, a hole in the rock. There a pair of Razorbills have their home in a cranny, and I can hear them "grunting" quite plainly. The Guillemots are in possession of most of the shelves and ledges, where the single egg is laid with no pretence of making a nest. The egg is remarkable for its size in comparison with the size of the bird; weighing on an average a quarter of a pound, or one-eighth of the weight of the bird. Its form is that of an elongated pear; and, therefore, it is less liable to roll off the ledges than an oval-shaped egg. The hen holds the egg between her legs with its point outwards. She usually sits facing the cliff, having, as it were, resolutely turned her back on the blue waters for the all important duty of incubation.

> . . . . "all on tasks of love,
> To hatch the pregnant egg, to rear and guard
> Their helpless infants, piously intent."—Mallet.

The Guillemots' eggs on Flamborough headland are noted for their variableness of colour and markings. They can be obtained in almost every possible variety of green, blue, red, purple and brown; also white and cream; some marked by blotches, streaks and pencillings; others plain. It is said that no two eggs are exactly alike. One Hull collector has made a special point of securing eggs of unusual shapes and sizes, irrespective of their ornamentation, and has obtained them varying in size from a double-yolked Guillemot's egg; weighing 6ozs., to a small example, the size of a Blackbird's eggs! In shape he has specimens assuming extraordinary outlines, somewhat resembling sausages, bottles, and other odd forms.

The Intrepid "Climmers."

To obtain the eggs it is necesary to climb the cliffs by means of ropes. There are four or five gangs of "climmers," consisting of four men each, and each gang restricts its operations to a definite part of the cliffs. The outfit of the climmer consists of two stout hemp ropes, two hempen loops, or "breeches," an iron spike surmounted by a pulley, two linen bags, hung by the side of the climmer and crossed over to the opposite shoulder; and last, but not least, a hat which is stuffed with hay or other padding. This latter item, which usually takes the form of a "billy-cock," a superannuated top-hat, or a soldier's helmet, is a very important item in the "rig" of the climmer, who knows no fear beyond that of falling pieces of chalk, which are sometimes dislodged upon him. "Broken Head," a name given to one part of the cliffs, indicates a spot where the padding was once not sufficiently effective. Accidents, however, are of exceedingly rare occurrence; in fact, by no means so common as they are in what might be looked upon as much safer occupations.

The method of climbing is as follows: The climmer places his legs through the two loops fastened to the end of the lowering rope, which is inserted in the iron pulley attached to the top of the iron spike stuck in the ground near the cliff edge. His mates sit on the grass above, with their heels firmly implanted in the soil, and with the rope wrapped round them, a broad leather belt preventing the sliding rope from doing harm. The climmer backs towards the cliff edge, slides over, and is lowered by his mates.

THE NIGHTINGALE.

By C. A V.

IT would be vain to attempt in sober prose a description of a bird which has been a favourite with poets of all ages and of every calibre. All that we shall venture, therefore, to say to those who have not heard its song is, "Go and hear it in the Spring"; to those who have heard it we can convey no information. All who inhabit the districts which the Nightingale frequents are familiar with its entrancing voice, but the manners of the bird, in a state of nature, are not so well known.

It is strictly a bird of the rich and well cultivated, and, at the same time, well wooded country. The valleys of Devon, though among the sweetest as well as the warmest in the Kingdom, have no charms for the Nightingale, nor is it heard upon the more arid parts of the regions that it does inhabit. Lofty woods by clear waters, among rich meadows and fields, where there is an exuberance of vegetation, and, consequently, an ample store of soft and smooth caterpillars, are the places for the Nightingale. In these it sings its song and rears its brood in the closest retirement and with the most tender and assiduous care, and when it has accomplished that, the grand object of its visit, it retires with the same quietness as it came, not flocking with its kind before its departure, as other birds.

The Puzzle of the Nightingale's Preferences.

What may be the cause of the Nightingale being so confined to particular localities in this country has not been ascertained, any more than why the range of the Dartford Warbler, which is a resident bird, should be even more limited. It resorts regularly to countries that are less rich, and climates that are colder, than those localities in Great Britain in which it is never heard. The only way in which a solution of the problem would be likely to be obtained would be to find what there is peculiar in the entomology of the Nightingale districts, for where temperature and facilities for nesting and concealment are the same in two different districts, and a bird which is left to the free range of nature is to be found in one district and not in the other, the most probable reason is that of food; of caprice, in the sense in which we apply it to man, there can be none.

Birds in Nature are difficult to study, but they are exceedingly interesting, and therefore those who wish to be thought wise upon the subject of birds must say something about it.

Their songs are always what we would call songs of joy, even when, as in the case of the Turtle and Wood Pigeon, they are in the most plaintive key. Generally, too, the birds that migrate and those that nestle in thick covers are the most melodious singers, while those that frequent open wilds have the loudest calls or whistles.

"The Voice of the Charmer."

We are not acquainted with the way in which these melodies of the male birds act upon the females, but it is evident that they are intended to bring together those that are concealed from each other by the depth of groves or the expanse of the wilderness. Nothing could be better adapted for the purpose, and the notes are so varied that there is no chance of mistake. Yet there is nothing of what we call choice of freedom of election in their curious call and answer. The call is perfect, and the answering is immediate.

The full song of the Nightingale is always a song of courtship, and if we would allow ourselves to become sentimental upon the subject, it would be easy to blame him as a "Careless husband," because he never "sings round" after pairing, except when he loses his mate and seeks another. One can see a meaning in the song before the pairing, but not so much after, as the song of the Nightingale cannot, like that of the day birds, take the Hawks out of the way of the female and the nest. Still a portion of the song is retained during the incubation, as a call-note, and when one brood has been hatched early, there may, in favourable seasons, be a second song, as in warmer countries there are more broods than one in the season.

After the nesting has begun, the male has other occupations than singing. The nest itself is indeed a very simple structure. It is upon the ground under a thick bush or hedge, or if on a tree it is on the very lowest part of one that is branched down to the ground, and thus, though safe from birds of prey, it often falls a sacrifice to small quadrupeds such a weasels and polecats. The nest is formed of dry leaves, lined with withered grass, and thus in structure resembles that of the Warblers, but the eggs differ inasmuch that they are only of one colour, an intermediate shade, made up of brown, yellow, and green, and not very unlike the colour of the nest. Five is about the average number.

The male brings food for the female, and occasionally relieves her in the nest till the young come out of the shell, and then both parents feed them with the greatest assiduity. Smooth caterpillars of the leaf-rolling insects, and also some of the saw flies, are understood to be the principal nutriment of the young, and the slender bills of the old ones are well adapted for taking the former out of their folds, or the latter out of their holes and crevices. When food is found very near the nest the birds carry the caterpillars one by one in the point of their bills, but when they make a more distant excursion they fill the whole mouth.

This assiduous feeding lasts for about two weeks, at the end of which time the young birds, though they cannot fly far, hop from twig to twig and partially procure food for themselves. When fully fledged, the male is said to lead them out to where they can find their food independently from their parents.

The Nightingale is larger than any of the Warblers, being seven inches in length, between ten and eleven in the extent of the wings, and weighing about three-quarters of an ounce. Its colours are plain and simple, and without any decided markings. The upper part is deep brown, with a shade of yellow; the sides of the neck, the breast and the flanks grey, the throat and belly grey, and the rump and tail pale brown, with a shade of orange. The bird, in fact, is coloured a good deal like its nest, and those shaded and grassless places in which it is constructed, and that, no doubt, is one of the means of protection.

A TALE OF FOUR YELLOW WAGTAILS

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

[Note.—The first instalment of Mr. Teschemaker's article contains a delightful account of the "Heart of Wagtail Land," the Norfolk Broads, with views of the Broads and photographs of a nest of the Yellow Wagtail, and of a ten-day old bird hatched in the author's aviary.—Ed.]

EVERYWHERE the Wagtails were flitting to and fro, some to the reeds, to which they clung after the manner of a Bearded Tit, some to an adjoining cattle-pasture to fetch hair for lining their nests, while some were hawking flies with dexterous wing among the tufted cotton-grass. Now and again an old male, with a breast of yellow more brilliant than anything the Canary-breeder has ever been able to produce, would spring into the air and hover over his nest with quivering wings and trailing feet in the thrill and rapture of the love flight; in this way was revealed to us the site of two nests—one half finished and the other containing one egg.

Now, birds suggest very different feelings to different people. The "collector," had he been in our position, would probably have thought of a glass case and a pair of Wagtails in the pink of breeding plumage; some of our friends, who do a little trapping, would possibly have thought of the pleasant tinkle of silver coins; an artist would have wished that he had brought his canvas and paint-box with him; but, as for ourselves, we thought of a certain Devonshire aiviary and what a delightful thing it would be to see Yellow Wagtails nesting in it. Here then was the birth of an idea and, though the majority of youthful ideas never reach maturity, this particular one, after many vicissitudes and some long and critical illnesses, did eventually grow up and prosper, and we shall attempt to tell you to-day how it grew up. We might describe to you the home-life of the Yellow Wagtail, and its passage to its winter home, but we wrote such an article about another Wagtail for a recent Birthday number, and it would never do to write two similar articles on similar subjects, for that would mean getting into a groove, and this, as you may have observed, is, for all who write on any subject, the beginning of the end.

The Yellow Wagtail's Relatives.

We cannot hope to induce any shy species to breed successfully in an aviary unless we have first mastered its individual peculiarities, and in order to do this we must try to ascertain its relative position to other species of the same group. The European Wagtails seem to be all closely related, but they show marked differences of habit and of plumage in different areas of their geographical range. Of the five Wagtails of our own islands the White and the Pied may be said to form one group, with longer hind-claw; the Yellow and the Blue-headed another group; the Grey seems, according to first impressions, to stand alone, on which subject, however, we shall have something to say later. The Blue-headed might perhaps be considered the Continental race of the Yellow; if you write for a "Yellow Wagtail" to a German dealer you may be quite sure that you will receive the former species, but in the extreme south of Europe it is replaced by a grey-headed form, and in the extreme south-east by a black-headed form.

We shall conclude then that all the European Wagtails are very closely connected and grade into one another through a very large number of forms, the most distinctive of which are found in the far East, namely, the Black-headed Wagtail (of the Yellow group) and the White-winged Pied Wagtail (of the Black and White group), excellent coloured drawings of which may be found in Bree.

Water Wagtails and Land Wagtails.

When we come to study the distinctive habits of the different forms, however, we shall find a marked divergence. The Grey seems to be the most aquatic of our British Wagtails. In the West Country this species is hardly ever seen far from water, and its favourite nesting place in South Devon is in the ivy which clings so picturesquely to the ancient stone bridges which span the moorland streams. It seems to fairly revel in the swirling, racing current, and with remarkable boldness will run along submerged masonry or timbering and snatch some drowned insect from the swiftest stream.

The Pied also deserves the title of "Water Wagtail," but it is not so bold as the former species, and generally prefers smooth shallow water. Between the Pied and the White we note an important difference of habit, for the latter is sometimes found in quite dry mountainous districts, as, for instance, in the Pyrenees. The Yellow and the Blue-headed, on the other hand, are essentially land-wagtails, nesting and foraging by preference on the dry open sward.

Wagtails as Musicians.

Some years since we saw in a contemporary the statement that "Wagtails have no song" and, though we frequently come across odd statements about birds, this seemed to us quite one of the oddest. One would think that the most casual observer could hardly have overlooked the pretty warbling song with its occasional quaint staccato notes.

The most robustious singer of the family is the Pied, commencing early in the spring and continuing for several months. We well recollect one cold February day, when a dense throng of several thousand electors of the East Devon division awaited the result of the poll in the Market Square at Newton Abbot. Perched above the heads of the crowd, on the tower of the Market Hall, was a Pied Wagtail which seemed to take a great interest in the proceedings, and sang lustily for the best part of an hour.

We also well recollect an old cock Pied Wagtail which lived in a small aviary for several years, and used to sing to us day after day and month after month; in fact we were so pleased with his vocal efforts that we brought him into the bird-room and installed him in a Nightingale cage. But this was a blunder; we had broken one of the canons of aviculture which tells us never to shift a bird which has got into a particular groove, and is doing well in that groove, to different surroundings. The old bird not only ceased to sing, but at once began to pine, and if we had not released him in hot haste we should have lost him to a certainty.

The White Wagtail is also a good singer; we have heard him singing lustily on sunny days in September during the autumnal migration. The Yellow and Blue-headed have with us only sung in the nesting season. One standard work states that the latter species has no song, but this is an error; we have heard it singing during the past two seasons in the aviary during the month of May.

"What We Have We'll Hold."

The champion heavy-weight of the British Wagtails is the Grey. We once saw a battle royal between the latter and the Pied, which was all the more convincing because the latter had right on his side, and, as you may have observed, birds have consciences, and a definite sense of right and wrong, and the issue of their battles seems to depend quite as much on the above considerations as on the relative strength of the combatants. Like the lords of creation, however, though they know the right, they frequently do not follow it, especially in the matter of annexing territory which does not belong to them. A pair of Pied Wagtails had for years nested on Trusham Bridge, near Chudleigh, and had established a right prescriptive to the adjoining territory, but one spring a pair of Greys set covetous eyes on the bridge; the result was a desperate series of combats which ended in the complete defeat of the Pieds, although they had on their side both moral right and possession which, as we know, is nine-tenths of the law.

The Pied and White Wagtails seem very evenly matched. Last summer we released a pair of Whites, and two of the brood which they had reared, and a day or two later were pleased to see them sunning themselves on the top of the aviary and having a talk to their former companions inside the latter. But an old cock Pied, who has for several years nested in the immediate neighbourhood, appeared upon the scene, and, after a real good tussle, routed the White Wagtails, and, to our great regret, drove them right away from the garden.

The Yellow Wagtail is only a "lightweight," compared with the Pied, and never ventures to put on the gloves with the latter; moreover it seems to be a much more amiable bird. For the past two seasons it has nested with us in the same aviary as the White Wagtail, and we have above noted that it will sometimes nest in a colony with others of its own species.

How the Species Differ in Hardiness.

In a domesticated state we find marked difference between the five species in the matter of hardiness. The Pied will winter in any aviary, no matter how exposed, and on very common fare. The White is decidedly a difficult species to domesticate; it is, to quote a popular phrase, "as wild as a Hawk" when first trapped, and we once had to hand-feed one for two whole days before we could induce it to even pick up a mealworm on its own initiative. Once "meated off," however, it will stand quite as much cold as the Pied, and we have wintered it year after year in the open, but with the important distinction that it requires very much better feeding than the former, and a regular supply of insect food.

We pointed out in a former article ("The White Wagtail at home and in Captivity") that this species nests almost exclusively in the mosquito countries, and suggested that the reason that it did not normally nest in our country was probably that it could not find sufficient winged insects to rear its young. It was on account of this peculiarity that we failed many times to rear a brood from the White Wagtails which we caught in the Isle of Man; they used to attempt to rear the young on moths which they flushed by beating the grass with their wings, and flatly refused to feed with the live-bait we provided. We finally succeeded with a pair caught in Central Europe, which did not seem to be so particular in the matter of diet.

The Grey is almost as hardy as the White, and frequently winters in Devonshire, but the Yellow and Blue-headed are decidedly delicate birds, and in our experience require some heat to bring them through the winter in really good fettle and colour. All the Wagtails are thoroughly good livers when once established, and always look spick and span and in good spirits, if properly managed; three of the above species have lived with us for more than four years, and would no doubt in some cases have lived longer had we not released them.

Clashing of Plymouth and Clapham Shows.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Hose's letter in last week's Cage Birds, I must again state that I have not received any reply to my letter to him when first Clapham's dates were published. Mr. Hose and the Clapham committee must have known that by fixing their show on Plymouth's usual dates they would thereby limit the chances of both shows for specialist club patronage. As most of the specialist clubs have both a London and a Provincial committee, it is bound to go hard with a provincial show which comes on the same dates as a London show, and probably Clapham consider themselves safe for patronage owing to their expectation of the London committees' support. In Plymouth there is a strong suspicion that the committee of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club intended last year, and again intend this year, to leave us out in the cold (in spite of the fact that we give five prizes per class to the value of 25s., for an entry fee of 1s. 6d., which is a better prize list than any other show, including Clapham, offers), and that Clapham's change of date to Plymouth's usual time may have some bearing on this.

Thos. Pope,

Amalgamation of Clubs in Pelton Fell.

Sir, I am in favour of the three shows—Pelton Fell, Chester-le-Street, and Birtley District going together, but I am not in favour of making a man be in all three against his will. I know some men in Pelton show are in five societies at the least, and I know other members who have paid 5s. year after year and never won a first prize. I think we will lose members instead of gaining new ones by forcing fanciers to belong to all three. Let the three shows go together, and if a man wants to become a member of any of the three societies, let him pay 2s. 6d. subscription to the one he is a member of (and let him show at the club he is a member of), while if he has any young birds ring with the club ring, let him show them with the amalgamated birds. If there is a man starting to keep a few birds in any of the three districts, British or Canaries, he would like to have them tried, but he is not going to pay 8s. 6d. without he is a moneyed man, and a novice would not have a chance against old fanciers. I am in favour of all the Canaries being young birds, or Mules either, rung or not, and all members to breed their own birds. We have had some very good members' shows around the district, and I would like to see this encourage new fanciers and the British fanciers as well.

How to Distinguish Roller Tours.

Sir,—I should like to thank Mr. Tomlinson for his very interesting article on "The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe" running through the columns of your most valuable paper, Cage Birds. I am sorry to see, however, that in this, as in all other articles I have read on the Roller Canary, there is to my mind one thing lacking, and that is the explanation of the various tours in such a way that we novices can distinguish one from another. I happen to be one of those to which Mr. Tomlinson refers in his article of March 14, as living in an isolated district, and whose lot he says is a hard one. I can assure him it is a very hard one indeed, for the nearest member of the B.R.C.C. lives about twelve or fifteen miles from here (Skipton). As Mr. Tomlinson says, one has to be exceedingly fond of the hobby, otherwise one would be so disheartened as to fall out of the Fancy altogether. I should be glad (I think I am speaking for the novices in general) if an article could be written giving the names of the various tours in what may be termed plain English. For instance, I have seen some of them likened to a rapidly running sewing machine, the clucking of the broody hen, the emptying of a bottle, and the tinkling of a bell, similar to those used on the necks of pet animals. I should at any time be glad of a visit from a fellow fancier, to give me a practical lesson, and of such there must be a fair number who call at this town during the summer months, it being a popular resort for holiday-makers; or I should be willing to visit some fanciers outside this isolation, for I feel sure if some method of visitation were adopted it would be to the benefit of the Fancy in general. I should be pleased to correspond with any fancier willing to fall in with my suggestion.

The Cinnamon Canary as it is and as it Ought to be.

Sir,—I have read with considerable interest the letters from Mr. Bentley, and others, but they fail to touch the spot. The writers blame everyone but themselves for the slump in Cinnamons. Specialist Clubs are supposed to exist for the benefit of the breeds with which they are connected. What does the Cinnamon Club do to justify its existence? It holds a meeting once a year, at the Palace Show, but we seldom hear anything about it from February to February. If the club would guarantee classes at shows up and down the country the Cinnamon would quickly become more popular. It is no use the Cinnamon Club nor Cinnamon breeders sitting down and expecting show committees to come along and pop a silver spoon into their mouths. If they want the Cinnamon to regain its lost position they must be up and doing.

Mr. Bentley says 70 per cent. of the schedules sent out have no classes for Cinnamons. Why? Because exhibitors do not support them. If there was a demand for classes by exhibitors, the show committees would soon provide them. If the members of the Cinnamon Club want classes they should guarantee them. Mr. B. next has a tilt at the judges. They are wrong in A.O.V. and special awards. Mr. B. is not altogether correct in his assertions. He is much too sweeping in his condemnation. There are some judges who are very fond of Cinnamons, and who invariably give them all they can either in the way of specials, or A.O.V. awards.

It is said that the world takes a man greatly at his own valuation. The Fancy certainly takes its Specialist Clubs in this fashion. A well-managed, progressive, up-to-date club has no trouble in regard to either judges, or classification. Show committees are found tumbling over each other to secure the support of some clubs. If they are not so anxious for the support of the Cinnamon Club there is a reason why, and that doubtless is the apathetic manner in which the club is worked.

Mr. Bentley concludes that the fault is outside the club and its members. I differ with him. As one who, many years ago, had some of the best Cinnamons, I am persuaded that if a more progressive policy was followed, both by the Cinnamon Club and breeders, we should quickly see larger entries, extended classification, new fanciers, more demand for stock, consequently better prices, and a more flourishing state of things generally. All that the Cinnamon wants is booming, and the persons to boom it are those interested in its production. It is an age of advertising. The Cinnamon needs publicity. Its own beauty will do the rest.

Sir,—I am pleased fanciers seem to be waking up to the fact that it is time something was done to bring the Cinnamon Canary to the front, and was pleased to see the letter of your correspondent, "Cinnamon." Like him, I was disappointed with the Cinnies at the late Palace Show. At present I have not a Cinnamon Canary in my possession; I did have Cinnamons for years, but having to give up the Fancy for a time, I have not been able to obtain a good pair of stock birds to start afresh. Some may hardly credit that it is so, but I have tried for several years to get a good pair of stock birds and cannot. I have had birds on approval from our big breeders and big exhibitors, at big prices, but in my opinion the birds I have had sent me have been no use whatever for breeding good birds, being small, pinched in head, and as long as a good Yorkie; others I know have had the same experience. I believe that is one reason why the bird is not seen and bred more, especially in and around London. I hope this correspondence will be the means of advancing this grand variety.

May a Chairman Vote?

Sir,—Referring to your reply in Cage Birds of Mar. 14, to a correspondent under the heading "General," permit me to quote Laurence M. Gibson, M.A. (Handbook for Literary Societies, Hodder and Stoughton, London, 1900), on this point:—"It should be noted that if the chairman intends to vote in his private capacity, he should distinctly say so before it becomes clear which way the question is likely to be settled. If the votes are equal, then the chairman has a casting vote, even though he may have voted previously. These two votes of the chairman arise from the fact that he is acting in two capacities, private and official.

E. Battersby.

Mr. S. A. Sandy kindly sends us the following extract from the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908: "Proceedings of Directors. . . . Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes the Chairman shall have a second or casting vote."—(Ed.)

A Lady Bird Lover's Experiences

Sir,—I have felt for some time I should like to tell you how very helpful I have found both the paper, Cage Birds, and the Annual. I am exceedingly fond of birds, but have only the time to devote to a few pets. Acting upon the valuable hints and advice that I have read in your papers and annuals, I have been most successful, both in breeding and rearing Canaries and in keeping down the pests of insects in their cages. My birds are in the pink of health and feather, and one Goldfinch I have with them is so smart in markings and tight feather I think if he were only a larger bird I might be tempted to show him. They are kept in a cold room summer and winter, and with the exception of a sunrise lamp that is used for about 1½ hours every morning through the winter (for my own convenience only); they have no other heat in the room. I act upon the advice given in one of your annuals, and feed them liberally with teazle seed, hemp, and canary. I firmly believe teazle seed is a most nourishing food, and I think the hemp is necessary for birds kept always in a cold room. Every year I breed with one pair of Canaries, and all the egg food I have given them lately (when breeding) has been a small piece of yolk and white taken from my egg at breakfast, and put back into the saucepan to boil hard for them. I keep a tin of crushed Osborne biscuits, crushing ½ lb. at a time, and mix some with the egg in a mortar. In the early morning I scald some teazle seed, let it stand for about five minutes, then drain the water off and dab quickly with a clean rag, and I keep them supplied with that in a separate glass all day, changing again in the evening, and I find that seed does not go sour as rape does. I keep them supplied with scalded teazle all the breeding season, and until the young birds are about two months' old. I never now trouble to give them rape seed as the teazle seems to be so nourishing and yet not fattening. Of course, I supply cuttlefish bone and a tin of Pink's or other firm's bird sand, but now I never put it on the floor of the cage, but use fibre dust, consequently I keep much cleaner cages, and they do not get their feet clogged with dirt, and their perches never get so dirty as formerly when using all sand on the floor. Once a week they all have a large bath with about a spoonful of concentrated essence of quassia chips added to the water, and I keep an ordinary spirit bottle, which I suppose holds about a pint of liquid, filled with paraffin, and I think 2½ ounces of camphor dissolved in it. I just dip my rag in it and go over the floor and woodwork of the cages, when I clean them out, and it seems to preserve the cages, and I feel sure has been a great help in freeing the birds from the insect pests that are such a drawback and torment to them. I am just sending these experiences of mine because I attribute the success I have had through simply taking and acting upon the advice given in your weekly paper and annuals. I supply my birds with green food all the year round, but am very careful to remove all that is left in the cages every evening, and during the breeding season give a little once or twice a day, so that the hen only has a certain quantity, and quite fresh for her young whilst they are in the nest. Perhaps I ought to say I am exceedingly particular about the seed I give them being thoroughly good and sound, especially the hemp, and I buy them separately and mix the proportions myself. The keeping of pets has been, and is a great pleasure to me, and I think is a help in diverting the mind from the cares and anxieties, and sometimes the monotony of daily life. I am a member of your Cage Birds League, and have been from its commencement, I believe, for I think it is an exceedingly nice and good movement, and I wish you all success in your work.

(Mrs.) M. J. Parker.

A Good Move by the South Co. Dublin C.B.A

Sir,—I am sending you herewith three essays on the Bullfinch, written by junior members of the South Co. Dublin Cage Bird Association. It may be interesting to note that a junior club, for boys under sixteen years of age, has been started by one of the committee members of the above Association (Mr. Ward). The subscription is 1d. per week, and as soon as a member has subscribed enough money he will be supplied with a show cage (British). The balance of the payments will be given as prize money in their own section at the annual show. Mr. Ward has arranged for a series of lectures to be given at his house. The first lecture was on the Bullfinch, and an essay was written subsequently by the boys. It is interesting to note that a boy of 12 years of age carried off the prize, and, judging from the character of the essays on the whole, we may look forward to the time when our members will be able to hold their own on the show benches throughout the country.

D. Smyth (Hon. Sec.).

[We have read the three essays with considerable interest, and agree with Mr. Smyth that they show great promise.—Ed.]

Questions and Answers.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

ONE IN ADVANCE (J.E.H.). It is nothing very unusual for a hen to lay a casual egg, and not lay again for a week or more. This may make no difference at all to the future clutch, which will follow in due course, and may be of quite the usual number. At the same time, there are some hens which lay casual eggs at more or less long intervals, and rarely produce a normal clutch, or do much good at breeding. You omit to say what was your hen's performance when she resumed laying, so I cannot tell whether she is likely to be one of the abnormal ones or not.

ROLLER OUT OF SORTS (A.B.C.).—(1) Yes, certainly, you can treat the Roller the same as a Norwich or any other breed for the same cause, with the exception that a staple diet of two parts of canary to one part summer rape should be given. With this little alteration, treat your bird the same as advised to "Jake" in last issue. (2) I do not consider the rape, of which you sent sample, a suitable kind for Rollers. I do not profess to know what this seed really is, but good summer rape is of a more reddish-brown tint, and the grains barely half the size of the seed you sent. It should also have a pleasant nutty flavour.

A "NESTLING" NORWICH (A. B. McFadyen).—I am afraid you do not give me any clue to assist me to be of any use to you. What do you mean by "nestling?" Does the bird merely sit on the cage floor as if nesting, or does she appear to be ill in any way? You had better write again and give fuller particulars, and describe any symptoms of illness which she may exhibit. Meanwhile, examine her eyes to be sure whether the sight is unaffected, also the feet to see if the claws are overgrown so as to make perching difficult or painful. In the former event there would be no remedy, but in the latter case the remedy is obvious. If she has been ill any length of time it is scarcely worth while attempting to breed with her. You do not even say how you have fed her. Whilst writing us again, you may try giving her a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar daily, and add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the drinking water each day for a week.

NORWICH WITH DIARRHŒA (Johnsee).—See that the cage is kept scrupulously clean, and also the perches, for the time being. It will assist in this if you cover the cage floor with sawdust instead of sand, and clean it out and burn it at least every second day. Also see that all your foods and the vessels containing them are sweet and clean. Stop giving the boiled carrot and the apple until the trouble is entirely removed, and do not give any green food for a week or so. In addition to the staple diet give a morsel of bread soaked in scalded milk, and dusted well with carbonate of bismuth every second day for a week, and on the intervening days give half a teaspoonful of good sound hemp, and add to the water a small teaspoonful of ordinary chalk mixture, of which you can get a pennyworth at any chemist's. Give the water vessel a shake occasionally when the latter mixture is in the water.

CONCERNING CAGES (M. E. Jones).—(1) Certainly I would limewash a breeding cage when new before the birds were put in instead of deferring the operation for a time. I do not quite see what your object can be in waiting some time before doing this, unless it is that you think the wood may be warped by limewashing too soon. This is of little moment, as if your cages are well built of sound well-seasoned material, there is practically no more danger of their warping at the beginning than after being in use for a short time. I take it you prefer limewash to any other medium, otherwise it might be the soundest economy to give the cages two or three coats of good hard-drying enamel. With this there would be absolutely no danger of warping the wood, and it would wear considerably longer, and look better. (2) Am not quite sure what you mean by nest cage. Is it a nursery cage, or a small cage to hang outside the breeding cage for the nest pan to go in? In any case, I could not give addresses here. Get a catalogue from any of the firms who advertise appliances in our columns, and you will find what you want. (3) Undoubtedly "Our Canaries," which you will see advertised every week, has the most information. But if you want something smaller than this, then "Canary Breeding for Beginners" is the best for general information. For books dealing with particular breeds, see inset in these replies nearly every week.

IN SOFT MOULT (J. Bell).—It is quite clear now that, as I suspected in my last reply, the bird was not by any means in good health. Continue the general advice given in last reply to overcome its nervousness, and treat as follows for a month or so, and then report progress. Keep in a fairly cosy temperature, not necessarily overheated, but as equable as possible. In addition to the staple of canary or canary and rape, as the case may be, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day, and also a young growing stool dandelion. Give the whole crown with the root cut off just below the ground, and the dirt removed. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana and a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, linseed, teazle, and broken groats. In the drinking water give in alternate weeks five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Give pure water in the late evening works.

VARIED (Luck).—It is very difficult to advise you now as to whether the birds should be separated for the short time you have before being mated for the season, for the simple reason that some, if not all, of them may have taken matters into their own hands and selected mates of their own choice by this time. As a matter of fact, they should have been separated many weeks ago. If the hens do not seem forward you may take the risk, and separate them by placing the hens in the cages in which they are intended to breed; cage the cocks separately and hang each beside his intended mate, and add a little egg food to the diet each day, and in the case of the cocks a little mixed seed also. Give each bird three crisp young dandelion leaves daily. Then, if ready for mating, put them together the last week in this month or the first week in April. (2) Sorry, but it is totally impossible to tell you how to pair the birds without either seeing them or having a very full description of their typical points and qualities, and also their failings, colour, markings, etc. Because a bird is a prize-winner it does not follow that it will breed prize winners, or that another prize-winner would be a suitable mate for it. It is essential to consider very carefully each bird regarding its typical perfections and its weak points, and then select for a pair two birds in which the weak points of the one are counterbalanced by extra quality in those particular points in the other, so that the two birds between them possess as nearly as possible a full complement of the typical points of the breed. If the birds are suitable mates in other respects there is no reason why you should not pair the young cock hatched last May with the variegated hen whose mate died, and also, if hatched reasonably early, the daughter of the variegated hen with the prize-winner cock. This would be preferable to mating the two young birds together. (3) The two young birds should, if possible, be mated with birds over one year old. See No. 2. (4) Had you said how you fed the birds last year, I might have discovered some possible cause of the hens deserting the young. Have you "Canary Breeding for Beginners"? If not, get our Manager to send you a copy, post free 7d., which should help you to avoid this trouble in the coming season.

A RAVENOUS ROLLER (Arthur).—The query you refer to sending last week probably reached us too late to be dealt with last week. A reply to a similar query appears under another heading this week, and also refers to a sample of rape, so perhaps this is the reply to your first query. There was no sample in your second letter as you say. Keep the bird in a comfortable temperature. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed daily for a week or two, and twice a week a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, and teazle. Give two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. Add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water every second day for a fortnight.

STARTED MOULTING (F.H.).—Glad to hear the bird has made good progress. The voice will become stronger and the song improve quickly as soon as this moulting is stopped. Continue the same general treatment as advised in last reply, but make these slight variations in the dietary. Instead of the bread and milk, give now half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day. Also omit the linseed from the mixed seed previously advised and substitute the same quantity of hemp. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three until the feathers cease dropping. Stop the other medicines now.

IS SONG ESSENTIAL? (W. Witham).—It is certainly possible for a cock to breed successfully which is not in song, provided it is in good health and condition otherwise. At the same time, it is rather the exception than the rule for robust and healthy cocks to be out of song at the beginning of the breeding season, so that there is a large amount of improbability of a cock not in song fertilising eggs. Full vigorous song is the ideal condition for breeding cocks, although not absolutely essential in every case.

THE BEST FOOD (J.F.J.).—I prefer not to dogmatise on this subject, because, in my opinion, there is a great amount of truth in saying that the best food is just that with which one succeeds best in each individual case, let the food be what it may. The most important thing is to get something which the parent birds approve of, and will use freely for feeding their young. The usual egg and crushed biscuit has the test of a vast amount of experience behind it, and if mixed rather dry, with no added moisture, it would suit your purpose very well, so long as the weather kept reasonably cool, but if the atmosphere became warm and muggy it would certainly be very risky to use it in the circumstances you name. You could not do better than make a quantity of the food named several times lately in this column, viz.: Crush a pound of maizena wafer biscuits to a coarse powder, add half-a-pound of desiccated egg yolk, and mix thoroughly. Store in air-tight tins in a cool dry place, and it will keep good several months. To use, take the quantity required for immediate feeding and very slightly moisten with a drop or two of water, add a sprinkling of maw if desired, and give to the birds. I think this would quite suit your peculiar needs. Failing this, you might use either of the egg-foods prepared by good firms, which have a fair proportion of egg in their composition, or even scalded dog biscuit, any good brand without meat. The latter food has been used with much success by many.

SOFT-SHELLED EGGS (S.J.W.).—Possibly the hen is a trifle too fat. If this appears to be the case keep her on a spare diet for a week or so, and add a pinch of Epsom salts to her drinking water daily. After this feed in the ordinary way, and in addition to the staple diet give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, linseed, and broken groats every second day, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water. Continue this feeding until she has gone to nest again. When she is nesting next time keep the cage floor well strewn with old mortar, smashed up into a coarse powder and mixed with the sand, and add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinking water on the days between giving the Chemical Food. You may also strew a few grains of hemp on the sand daily to induce the hen to pick about well. Do not give this hen any dandelion as green food.

ARE THEY FERTILE (T.R.).—It is quite possible for the eggs, which were laid a week after the cock was removed, to be fertile, but there is no means by which you can ascertain whether this is so or not except letting the hen sit on them until the germs have grown sufficiently to be seen when the egg is held up to a strong light. The best thing for you to do is to let the hen sit out her full time and patiently await the result. Candidly, I think it will be nil, and that the hen is of no use at all as a breeder. If these eggs prove unfertile I would advise you to discard her altogether.

A TRIO (A.S.).—(1) No, the German hen, being mated with a Norwich cock last year, will not affect the quality of the young she will breed this year when paired with a pure Roller cock. (2) It is very late now to begin the overhauling of cages. This work ought to have been done at the beginning of the month, or earlier. Still, better late than never. Place birds in temporary cages, well scrape the old dirt off cages, then thoroughly saturate them with paraffin inside and out, and place in the open air to dry. Repeat this next day, and on each occasion work the liquid well into any crevices or open joints with a small paint brush. When again dry, scrub them out with a solution of soapsuds, in a gallon of which mix a tablespoonful of carbolic fluid, Jeyes' or Izal will do as well. When dry from this, re-limewash, distemper, or paint, as you may prefer, and polish up the outsides, and when this is quite dry you may return the birds. Well scrub the rack, if you have one, with the carbolic solution, or otherwise attend to the place where the cages have been kept, before returning the breeding cages to their usual position. Give birds a bath daily, in which you have mixed a little quassia essence whilst in temporary cages. (3) It is entirely a matter of taste whether you use limewash, distemper, or paint. The two former require the most frequent renewal. A good hard-drying enamel, with a "flat" or "semi-flat" surface, looks and wears best. Different makers have various names for similar colours, but the tint I like best for cages is termed "electric green" by the makers of a certain enamel. Cannot mention names here. Better get a few shade cards from different makers and select a tint to your own taste, or, if you like to send me a stamped envelope through the Editor, I will send you the name of enamel to which I refer.

LOSING FEATHERS (L.N.).—Yes, breeding would certainly be out of the question if the moulting continues, but there is no necessity for it to continue. The following treatment for two or three weeks will set matters right. Keep bird free from cold draughts and in fairly equable temperature. Give a staple diet of a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle, every second day, and on the alternate days a little sponge cake prepared as advised to "F.H." in this issue. Also give the quinine mixture the same as advised in that reply, and as green food give two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily.

ROLLER COUGHING AND SNEEZING (F.J.S., Rhondda).—Honestly, I think you are wasting the service of the hen to pair this cock, as even if there should be any result of the union, which is doubtful, the young will scarcely be worth the rearing. You cannot treat him properly whilst he is mated. If you care to separate the pair and cage him alone, the following treatment may do some good. See first of all whether he is troubled with mites or grey lice, and if either are found exterminate them. Give a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats every second day, and also a morsel of banana. On the alternate days give a little bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and two leaves of dandelion. In the water add six drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and glycerine every second day for a fortnight. Allow bird to bathe freely when weather is quite mild. You may slightly smear the bare places twice a week with Lanorylin.

MOPING NORWICH HEN (Jack, Mac).—Continue the treatment you have just commenced for at least a fortnight, and if the hen does not show material improvement by that time then make the following variations. Instead of the bread and milk give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two large fat mealworms minced and mixed in it every second day for a week or two. Go on giving a small stool of dandelion fresh daily, and in the water give 20 drops of Chemical Food each day for a fortnight or so. Keep in a comfortable temperature and see that she is quite free from cold draughts. Let her have a fair amount of space for exercise, and allow her to bathe freely in mild weather provided she does not appear susceptible to chill afterwards.

ALL ALIKE (D. Sheret).—As you say every bird you have ever had, from sources all over the country, has suffered in the same way, there can be no doubt that the cause of the trouble must lie either in your management or the conditions under which the birds are kept after you receive them. Being kept in the living room I should suspect one or other of these causes to be at the root of the mischief: cold draughts from doors or windows, perhaps aggravated by keeping the birds in open wire cages; sudden and extreme fluctuations of heat and cold, such as hanging too near the fireplace, near or over a burning light in the evenings, or in a window; or being hung near the ceiling where the air is always more or less impure. You should look into these things and remedy any or all of them which exist, and then, if you will write again and give me full particulars as to how you manage the birds, feeding, probable ages, and how long they have been ill, I will endeavour to put you on a more successful track. Meantime give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar daily for a week, and add to the water during the same time six drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and glycerine daily.

NOT SINGING (A New Beginner).—There is too much linseed in the mixture, of which you sent sample, for regular use as a staple diet for Canaries, otherwise the mixture is a good one, although when using such a mixture as this there can be but little room for any real variation of the diet. Keep the bird in a cosy part of the room, not necessarily very warm, but let it be as equable as possible, and quite free from cold draughts. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part good summer rape mixed together. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar, and on alternate days give a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture of which you sent a sample. Give two leaves of crisp young dandelion daily. In the water add ten drops of lemon juice and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week or so. Continue the above dietary for three or four weeks.

ROLLER QUERIES (F. S. Doble).—(1) Glad to hear the bird has improved so well on the previous treatment. As regards the seed mixture, it contains much more linseed than is advisable in a mixture for use as a staple diet. The rape it contains is just a fair quality, and I see no reason why the bird should eat this freely and yet refuse the other rape you have offered, unless the rape you obtain is of a quite different quality. Get a good sample of summer rape of mild nutty flavour, and mix with canary in the proportion of two parts canary to one rape, and I think you will find the bird eat it all right. For extras, give twice a week a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. On two other days give a small teaspoonful of egg food or a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake or bread and milk. This, with the usual supply of green salads or fruit according to season, will suffice to keep the bird in perfect health. You may add ten drops of lemon juice and a small pinch of Epsom salts to the water every second day for a week. (2) I am afraid I can only say that Canaries are fed largely on canary seed because that seed has been found by long years of experience to be the best all round staple diet for them. The same remark applies to your question about Linnets, etc. In both cases the recognised staple doubtless approaches tolerably close to the natural diet of the respective genera. In the case of Rollers more rape is required for feeding high-class singers because specialised breeding and training have so modified the vocal organs that a staple of plain canary seed is found to have a bad effect on the song of the bird. (3) White and red millet are very similar in all save colour, but few Canaries care about the red. They have comparatively little feeding value, the chief use being to add a little extra variety to seed mixtures. Linseed is much too oily and fattening for regular use, and is apt to upset the digestive organs and bowels. Teazle is stimulating and appetising. Cole is an oily seed somewhat similar to rape, but its oiliness is of a more relaxing nature. By the way, you should get a copy of "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds," 1s. 2d. post free, from our Manager, for full details on these points.

A QUESTION OF MATING (Doubtful, N.E.C.).—There is probably nothing at all wrong with the birds except that they are not quite forward enough for mating. Keep them separate for another fortnight or three weeks, and in the meantime give the cock half a teaspoonful of egg food, or any substitute you may use in its place, and also a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, and broken groats, daily. Give also two young leaves of dandelion. Give the hen the same quantity of egg food every second day, and mixed seed with one part of linseed added to it on the alternate days. Give her also two or three dandelion leaves daily. Then you may mate them at the end of this month or the first week in April. Do not be too anxious to mate them the moment you see the cock begin to take an interest in the hen. Keep them apart until the time named, and then, when you have put them together, leave them to manage the affair themselves. Do not worry about the cock ceasing singing, as this is nothing at all unusual. Have patience, and things will come right in the end. Follow closely the instructions in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." The wall opposite the window will, I should say, be best to hang the cage on. You can have either the door or window open so long as there is not a draught directly through the cage, which is not likely to be the case with the cage on the wall opposite the window.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

HYBRID BREEDING (O. S.).—I think you would do better if you tried your birds in cages. You have more command over them, and of course they are not interfered with by others. (2) I have frequently found that wild birds outside an aviary have had a bad influence upon those of the same species inside, and have known several cases of promising clutches of eggs spoilt by their presence. (3) You can use the birds as you mention, pairing up a cock Goldie with hen Bullie, and one with hen Siskin, and a Linnet and Twite with Canaries, but you could not rely upon them breeding in this way in the aviary. If you turn them in there, only put in one cock Linnet.

BULLFINCH FOR SHOW (Darwen).—To be fit for show, a Bullfinch should be in perfect health and feather, this is obtained by careful feeding and management, and a free use of the bath. I would advise you to get our Nutshell Booklet, No. 11, on The Bullfinch; this will give you much more information than I can in these short answers. Then if you are in doubt about any special point, I shall be pleased to advise you.

CHAFFINCH AND GREENFINCH.—Make the following mixture: Canary and teazle, 4 parts each, summer rape and linseed, one part each; this will be their stock mixture. Give sunflower seeds daily, and a little hemp once a week. Offer a mealworm or two every day, and later collect all the live food you can possibly lay hold of, such as greenfly, caterpillars, beetles, etc. Give all kinds of green food and wild seeds, shepherd's purse, dandelion, chickweed, etc. There will be no harm in trying them with a nest and nesting materials later on. Freshly caught birds will sometimes mate as freely as cage moulted ones. You will require a good cage or flight for them, and give them every facility for bathing. In fact, do all you possibly can to keep them healthy. Push a handful or two of heather, or bush of any kind, up in one corner, and place an old Greenfinch's nest in among it; such an arrangement will frequently induce wild birds to nest.

LARK FOOD (W. H. D.).—The food you send is a very good sample, and your birds should do well on it, although I am inclined to think an occasional change is good for them. Just now they should be well fed to get the best of song from them; therefore I would advise you to purchase a little good insectile food and give it to them twice a week, and I think you would do well to give them an hour or so in the open-air on fine days; this will frequently induce shy singers to open out. Have you our Nutshell on the Skylark, if not, I would advise you to get one.

LINNET MATTERS (F. S. Doble).—You are feeding your bird correctly, and I do not think any other mixture is necessary, unless you can obtain a packet of good wild seed mixture; if you cannot get it locally, you can by post. Look through our advertisement columns, you may find what you require there. The sample of hemp sent is fairly good. It is rather strange that your bird will not eat hemp, because, as a rule, they are rather greedy for it, but, anyway, it is not of much consequence, as there are plenty of other seeds, and hemp is not absolutely necessary to his existence. Chickweed is common, nearly everybody knows it, especially gardeners. Ask one to give you a handful; they generally have too much. Rape seedlings are particularly good in the winter, but during the summer there is a host of other wild plants that can be given in its place. Shepherd's purse is not of much use until the seeds are set. Dandelion leaves are good just now. (2) Try to darken the hopper, so that he cannot see to feed when he gets his head in; he knows where the seed is, and will take a grain and stand outside to shell it. (3) Many birds are very troublesome about bathing; try turning him in with a known bather, or hanging the bath on for him to drink from. If you handle a bird it will sometimes cause him to bathe. If none of these methods answer, you must give him a spraying occasionally.

WHAT BIRD? (A. W. W.).—The bird you have, of which you send a description is the Red Legged Partridge. If you wish to retain it in captivity, you could feed it on seeds such as wheat, oats, hemp, rape, etc., growing grass and clover, also all kinds of insects. Put these on poultry meal; he will then possibly eat a little, which will make a nice change. (2) Make a mixture of whiskey, fresh lemon juice, and honey, equal quantities of each, and put a small teaspoonful in the Thrushes' drinking water. (3) I should feel inclined to use the larger of the two Greenfinches to pair her Bullie, that is, if she will take to him; if not, try the other one. (4) Let the Corn Bunting have Canary seed as a stock mixture, and as he appears to like the oats, be liberal with them. You might offer some wild seed mixture, a little rape, and cracked hemp, although you will find canary and oats will be his chief food. Try him with a spoonful of soaked ants' eggs, and place them on a little good insectile food; give all kinds of insects, and try to get him to take a mealworm from the hand. If you can manage this, you will have no trouble to steady him. They are generally pretty difficult, so have patience.

FOOD FOR GOLDFINCH (No Name).—You have omitted to send your name and address, which is contrary to our rules; perhaps you will kindly send them on a postcard. Why are you so anxious to get your Finch on to Canary seed? I have kept many in my time, but never one entirely on Canary, and would not expect it to thrive if I did. Make up the following mixture as a staple food: Six parts of teazle and hemp, 4 parts canary, 1 part German rape. Then make another composed as follows: Two parts niger, one of maw; give him half a teaspoonful every other day, and on the day between, half a teaspoonful of a good wild seed mixture, which may be bought at most good seed merchants. In addition to this, give him half-dozen sound sunflower seeds three times a week. You should lightly crack these, so that he is able to get at the kernels. Let him have a spray of seeding chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, dandelion, or some thistle leaf and other wild food as it comes in season. Don't forget the bath, and a fly in a good sized cage for exercise.

BREEDING WITH GOLDFINCH (Ed. Gale).—You will be unable to breed with your Finch while he is in moult. I presume he moulted in the autumn, and his losing feathers now is quite out of order. The food you are giving him is hardly suitable. Read the advice given to No Name, and treat your bird on the same lines; also give a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food in his drinking water, fresh daily, for a week, afterwards giving every other day. Keep him out of draughts, and not too warm. He will not be ready to breed until he has quite recovered, and his beak clear; even then he may not fertilise eggs; moulting out of season frequently spoils a bird entirely for the summer. If you have no other Finch, you had better try him, but do all you can to get him in good health first.

KEEPING A BULLFINCH (Kathleen Davis).—One of the reasons for keeping a Bullfinch in a box cage (that is, one boarded on all sides, but the front) is that the bird is much less liable to take cold from draughts, and he is generally more tractable, but if you prefer an open cage, there is no reason why you should not keep your bird in one, providing it is of good size, so that he can take a fair amount of exercise. You may hang him in the sun for an hour or two, especially at this time of the year, but I would not advise you to do so in the middle of the summer, it would be cruelty, and might possibly have a fatal effect. If you are observant you will find that wild birds spend a great part of a long summer day in the shade of the trees and bushes. It is quite a mistake to think they are always out in the open.

LINNET HYBRID (Enoch-Matthews).—Pleased to hear the advice about your other birds was satisfactory. As regards your recent purchase, I scarcely gather from your letter what advice you require. I think your best plan is to feed the bird well, and so get him into song. The fact of his singing a little is somewhat in his favour, if it is really a cock bird, a little extra crushed hemp should soon bring him on. I hope you have not made a mistake. As a rule, if a dealer is in doubt about the sex of a bird, one need to be careful.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (Wantorno).—I do not think the size of box used for breeding mealworms makes much difference, as I have bred them in one nearly three feet square, and one sixteen inches. I should think the boxes you have would do admirably with a drawer at the bottom. The false bottom I have seen made in two ways, one was of perforated zinc, and the other made of wood; it was smaller than the inside of the box, and rested on two cross pieces. All the worms would not find their way into the drawer at the bottom; there would still be some among the sacking to turn to beetles. A warm cupboard in a kitchen is just the place for the boxes, but I am unable to say how many you would require. As a rule, fanciers, who breed worms for their own use only, have two boxes going; they use from one while the other is resting. I think you could safely make use of the sweeping, of which you send samples. I should feel inclined to make a mixture of all of them, adding a little bran and crushed oats, just enough to keep it open. If you are putting up several boxes, you might try one, using this mixture only.

TROUBLE WITH LINNET (E. E. R.)—If you are quite certain there were no symptoms of bareness round the head and neck, before you put your bird out on the balcony, I should think the trouble was caused by his dashing about the cage; otherwise it looks very much like a case of grey lice. These pests always eat the feathers round the neck first. Did you notice any when you handled the bird? If not, have another look. Hold him in the hand for a minute or so, and blow up the feathers on the under part of the body. If present dress with insect powder, and put a little essence of quassia in his bath. If the trouble is wounds and loss of feathers through dashing about the cage, you cannot do better than touch the bare places with a little boracic ointment. There is no need to get rid of the bird, he will be all right in a very short time if attended to.

VARIOUS QUESTIONS (Worried Boy).—If properly fed and attended to both the Thrush and Linnet should be in stout song, especially the Thrush, but some Linnets are rather late before they are singing at their best. (2) The fact of your bird having whitish legs is no indication of old age; it simply means that he is house moulted; the oftener the whiter the legs. (3) Maw seed, gold of pleasure, and niger should only be given in moderate quantities. Dandelion is good for the liver and can be used more freely. Teazle may be given to almost any extent, you can use it in the following proportion for your Linnets. To every three parts of canary use 2 parts of teazle. (4) You can now procure young dandelion leaves, flowering head of groundsel, chickweed, and presently shepherd's purse; they may be given rather freely, but give a little at first and gradually increase them, especially if the birds have been without all the winter. (5) Linnets relish a pinch of salt occasionally, and I think they are all the better for it, it aids digestion. (6) A show bird should be large, good bold shape, full head and neck, rich colour, and distinct in markings, and, of course, tight in feather when exhibited. (7) Birds are colour fed by mixing a little tasteless pepper with soft food. It should be commenced in July, some time before the birds moult. Give a very little at first, gradually increasing it until the maximum quantity is given. You need not start so early with the Blackbird, as the beak and eye care are the most important parts to colour feed, and in his case this is accomplished at the end of the moult, but a little given all through is not wasted.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT PARROT (Hibernix).—I will consider your description and give you a definite reply in our next issue.

SCAN GREY (Regular Reader).—Please give full particulars about this bird; how long have you had it? How have you fed and treated it generally? In the interval give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, every other day, in the drinking-water, but if the voidings become watery-loose then cease giving the magnesia for a week at least. Spray it with a tepid quassia solution twice a week, choosing genial days for this, and just before noon is about the best time of day, during the cold months; keep carefully out of draught till dry. Keep pieces of wood in the cage regularly for it to exercise its beak upon. I presume yours is an all-grey bird with a red tail; upon receipt of information asked for will reply further.

TEACHING TO TALK (W. H.).—(1) There are two main methods; by constant repetition of words and short sentences, not a mixed medley, but keeping at one till it is learned before taking up another. Also by keeping it where it will hear all that is going on, fussing about with it, talking quietly to it while feeding it, and whenever it is in a restful mood. When once started a bird will pick up many words and phrases for itself and also mimic such calls as it hears. There is no royal road! It is a case of patience and perseverance. (2) The bird ought to have toned down by now, and I am afraid it will not learn much till it has steadied. Again, this is a case of quiet and steady movements when in its vicinity or renewing food supplies, watching its demeanour and avoiding anything which you see annoys it. There are many Amazons and also other kinds, especially those caught when adult, that will not permit familiar handling, though otherwise steady and tame. Many such birds are good talkers and amusing pets, though they will not permit any familiarity with their persons. If it is steady apart from the snapping then proceed with its training on same lines as given above. Studying its special likes as to tit-bits, and offering these with your fingers is as good a way as any for steadying it.

SATISFACTORY PARROT (Jaco).—(1) Speaking of the majority of both kinds, the Grey is the more satisfactory, and if you get an established (acclimatised) bird, a Grey is as easy to keep fit as an Amazon. Our Nutshell "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager, will give you full.st details. (2) I cannot make any comments regarding respective firms, but, I may remark, that cheapest is often dearest in the long run, and that the lower prices you name are not marked value of established and talking birds, while the highest prices named are not excessive. The lower prices are, I should say, for birds not very long imported, which are beginning to chatter; at the same time, a finger-tame bird, if healthy, should soon develop into an interesting pet. (3) Keep fairly warm at first, then the main thing is to avoid quarters where the temperature is very variable—any ordinary room will suffice where such conditions rule, and any position which provides light and air without draught. I know of Greys, Amazons, and other rare Parrots kept in a room in which a fire (or other heat) never burns and they are frequently and successfully shown at large London shows. (4) I favour the square cage and advise a 24in. (5) Had you not better leave this till you have got your bird, and know which kind? At any rate, when buying ascertain how it has been fed, you must not make any sudden change, but if diet is unsatisfactory you must gradually bring it on to a recognised wholesome diet; which I shall be pleased to give upon hearing which species you have.

AILING PARROT (E. J. C.).—I presume by grey and red African, you mean a bird with grey body and red tail. Its diet is not sufficiently varied; give it a seed mixture of oats, hemp, and sunflower seeds in equal parts, and also keep a tin of canary and white millet (equal parts) in its cage. Also supply daily any kind of ripe fruit it will eat; nuts, varions; plain biscuit and stale crusts. Keep pieces of wood in the cage for it to cut up, also cuttlebone and grit. Keep it warm, yet where it will get light and air, and be free from draught. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking-water, and on the days you are not giving the Magnesia put half-a-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Get a small box of honey and borax (stocked by all chemists) and put a little in the bird's mouth daily: it is easily given on the end of a stick, the bird will nibble the stick and thus get the mixture—the stick must be cleansed each time before being put into the mixture.

PENNANT'S PARRAKEET (C. S. D.).—I do not keep queries by me, and my correspondence is too heavy to trust to memory, even with the printed reply before me. Will you please give me the fullest details you can, and I will then do my best to express an opinion as to cause.

BUDGERIGAR (Miss S. C.).—Sorry to hear you have lost the bird, the fault lies in putting it among the others too quickly, a bird that has been ailing is not fitted to buffet with the crowd as soon as it appears a little better. It evidently got chased beyond its strength by some ardent male—many birds are lost from this cause after apparently recovering from some indisposition. Such should not go into the general flight till they have fully recovered their full energy and strength. And even apart from this like some human patients, a bird that has been ill should not be allowed to work off the exuberance of returning health beyond its strength.

WHAT IS THE CAUSE (Drewton).—Either it is the mice or you have one or more of the birds that has developed murderous habits. In the latter case all you can do is to watch till you catch the culprit or culprits in the act, and then get rid of them by giving them freedom or passing sentence of death. In the former case, the most expeditious course is to remove all the birds to temporary quarters and to put down poisoned seed and grain till you have got entirely rid of the nests; then, of course, you must carefully clean up, so that not a poisoned seed or grain is left behind, cleanse nest receptacles, and renew where necessary before putting back the seeds. About a week should suffice if you get some canary seed, wheat and oats impregnated with prussic acid, which you had better get some chemist, who knows you, to prepare for you. It is wearisome work getting rid of mice by traps where they are numerous, but once rid of them, keep the traps going, protected by wire netting against the birds, so as to keep them down in the future.

RED-HEADED CARDINALS (Peggy).—I am inclined to think you have a true pair, for if they had been both hens, the common practice is for a double clutch of eggs to be laid, and the birds to take turn and turn about at incubation, but spend some portion of their time sitting side by side in the nest; for this reason I think you have a true pair. Last year was not an ideal season—too many dull cold days, and your birds may do better this year. Usually the cock has quite a nice song, especially at pairing time. All the hens I have been able to examine—a fair number, in which sex was certain, having been ascertained either by seeing the bird pair, or anatomically after death—had the nape and back of the neck a little more mottled with white in the female, the culmen (bridge) of her upper mandible less arched, and the entire beak a little longer, and less stubby than that of the male.

BADLY FEATHERED (H. G. Mooney).—(1) You have either weakly stock, or stock which has been closely inbred for some time, which practically amounts to the same thing. If there is any local fancier near you who will exchange either your cocks or hens for you (always providing you did not obtain original stock from him), this should meet the difficulty. The alternative is to sell half your birds (does not matter which sex, so long as those you retain are healthy, vigorous, and well feathered birds), and then purchase others from some totally different source to which you obtained your present stock. (2) The cause is above; the old birds lack stamina, and consequently produce weakly offspring, though probably you have been aggravating the trouble by removing them to the flight cage before they could properly feed themselves. Young Budgerigars should be left with their parents till well able to crack seed for themselves. I should not attempt cure, as these birds will always be weakly, and in my opinion should not be used for stock purposes. It would be far better to painlessly destroy them. If you do not care for this course, then give them syrup of phosphates in their drinking water, and give each bird two drops of cod-liver oil direct to the beak daily.

MACAW BITING ITSELF (Miss K.).—With your bird it has actually become a vice, and a cure will be very difficult. If anything is to be accomplished some sort of a bandage must be fixed over the wound, after annointing it with a little antiseptic ointment, and a collar (punchinello sort of affair) fixed round its neck, which will stick out like a washer and prevent it getting at the wound. This collar can be in two parts, and of light metal, with the part that comes against the neck protected so as to prevent chafing. How to fix the bandage and keep it there must be a matter for your ingenuity, but the collar will hamper the bird's movements in trying to get rid of it. In addition to its seed mixture, give it a couple of Brazil nuts daily, any ripe fruit it will take, biscuit, stale crusts, and a piece of plain cake (for some time to come put five drops cod liver oil on this daily). Supply grit and cuttlebone regularly, and also pieces of wood for it to cut up. Also fix within reach of its stand a good sized piece of a natural branch for it to exercise its beak upon. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water every fourth day, and continue this for some time to come. As the season advances, if you are where you can get it, a small branch of a fruit tree with the leaves on would be beneficial. Shall be pleased to hear how it progresses, but you must block it getting at the wound by some such means as indicated above.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (R. H. Withers).—Apparently your bird has caught a chill, and she is having trouble in passing an egg. Subject her to dry heat for a couple of days, and then gradually reduce heat, but keep her warm till she picks up again. While you are giving bread and milk, put three drops of castor oil into it, till the bowels have been cleared. Then follow with the same quantity of cod-liver oil till the bird is looking itself again. The probability is she will pass an egg, and then soon appear all right, but after heat treatment you must not put her out again till she has been properly "hardened off," about Easter would be a good time. Alternating mild and cold weather, with mixed gales of wind, rain, and sleet make a very treacherous period for birds on breeding intent, and being two or three weeks late in making a start is generally a gain in the end.

GREEN BUDGERIGARS (W.E.A.).—A pair of Green Budgerigars should ultimately go to nest and breed in your cage, and you could put in husks at once, one at each end, and leave the birds to settle down to housekeeping according to inclination. You give me no particulars as to your aviary, but if they have been kept in a cold room it should be safe to put them out at Easter. Of course, I can't tell you if it's wise to do so in the absence of all data. If you have Finches, etc., in your aviary, then there is the risk that the Budgerigars may maim them in their mischievous play, for, considering the different construction of the beaks of a Budgerigar and Finch, the latter would be at a decided disadvantage, but where they are not crowded together, some keep them in the same aviary with only an occasional mishap at rare intervals, and others get frequent mishaps, temperament of individual birds being the deciding factor.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (Avis).—You ought not to exceed a dozen pairs if you wish to have any prospects of breeding at all, though your aviary will accommodate fifty. You could choose your foreign Finches from the following: Long-tailed and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches (20s. to 30s.), Gold-breasted Waxbills (4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.), Avadavats (2s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.), Zebra Finches (8s. 6d. to 10s.), Grey Singing Finches (4s. 6d.), Bib Finches (4s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.), Bronze Mannikins (3s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.), Silverbills (2s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.), Cordon Bleus (3s. 6d. to 6s.), Magpie Mannikins (5s. to 7s. 6d.), and you could put in as extras, whether they breed or not, pairs of Orange-cheek and Grey Waxbills. As regards British Finches, you could put in to mate up, either Siskin, Goldfinch and Bullfinch, or Canary hens for muling.

COCKATOO (S. Galloway).—You really give no details, and I can only gather from yours that the bird is little more than out of tone. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day for a month, and on the other days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. As regards diet, give the following—canary seed, white millet, hemp, dari, maize, oats, sunflower, wheat, and pea nuts; get equal parts of each, and well mix together. Also give ripe fruit, biscuit, nuts (one or two Brazil nuts daily), greenfood (lettuce, green cereals, green peas, etc., according to season); keep cuttlebone in the cage, supply grit daily, also pieces of wood for it to cut up. If it is tame enough to be let out of its cage, a little exercise daily out of its cage will be very beneficial for it. If the bird is thin, give it half-a-dozen drops of cod liver oil twice a day on a piece of biscuit, bread, or plain cake, according to which the bird will take most freely. Keep it out of draught, yet where it will get light and air. Unless it gets worse, report progress in a month. If you have to write sooner, give me a short history of the bird since you have had it, including your treatment generally.

JAVA SPARROWS AND CANARIES (J. Bridgman).—If you mean, will the Java Sparrows and Canaries cross-mate, I should say the union was a very improbable, but not impossible, one. If your query is, will they agree together in a cage, this entirely depends on the size of the cage; but in confined quarters some Java Sparrows, both the Grey species and the White variety, are very spiteful. They have immense beaks and are somewhat dangerous company for the ordinary crowd. I do not consider a pair of Canaries and a pair of Java Sparrows in the same ordinary size breeding cage to be safe; but a pair of either in the ordinary breeder should do well. With Java Sparrows, the plumage of the sexes is alike, but the beak of the female is more wedge-shaped, and the culmen of the upper mandible less arched than that of the male. The male is bolder in demeanour, more noisy and demonstrative than the female. In a roomy aviary they should do fairly well together.

FEATHER-PULLER AND BUDGERIGARS (Novice).—Pleased to note your bird is on the mend. Continue the treatment till the unfavourable symptoms cease. The treatment should also help to check the feather-pulling. This will most probably be less freely indulged in when the bird is once really fit again. Give some ripe fruit, such as it will eat, daily, and do not omit to give Parrot grit regularly. You might try painting the parts it is regularly addicted to pulling, with Spratt's "Pannakura," but do not get the whole plumage greasy, put it on lightly. (2) I fear the bars of a Parrot cage would be too wide to contain Budgerigars; and as regards a young Grey, you must not dream of bringing it into contact with an established bird till it has been quarantined for five or six weeks. As regards screeching, that is a matter of individualism, and unless you procure an established and trained bird, already talking, etc., there is no warranty that you will not get a screecher. A Grey or an Amazon (Blue-fronted) would be the best, but your only safe course is to get an established and trained bird. All young birds squawk considerably at first, and till this has ceased you would have to keep them apart, but as soon as they get fairly quiet and steady they could be kept in the same room. Their introduction to each other would probably cause much excitement, and probably some screeching, but they should soon settle down.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Recipe Wanted (A Beginner).—The preparation you mention is a patented article, and we should not be allowed to give you the prescription even if we knew it. You should send your full name and address in asking questions. Kindly see rules.

A Question of Specials (C. Bryden).—As the matter seems to be of purely local interest among your members, we think we should scarcely be justified in giving space in our columns for your letter. Besides this, you are making an allegation against one of your members of spreading a false and damaging statement, and there is such a thing as a law of libel.

Are They the Same? (Novice).—The Yellow Bunting and Yellowhammer are the same bird.

Weight of Seeds (W. Pugh).—A peck of good canary seed weighs 15lbs.; hemp seed, 11lbs.; teazle, 8 to 8½ lbs.

Breach of Contract (W. F. Wilbee). If you have the written promise of payment of carriage both ways in case of returning the goods, we think you could certainly recover.

Newspaper Cutting (E. Harcombe).—Thanks for your kindness in sending cutting. We will keep it by us and use it as space permits.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest, March 14, "George and Dragon," Bridge Street, for four minutes' time singing; 45 birds entered, and some very good singing was done. Mr. J. Brindley's bird sang 62 seconds at one break, which I think is a record for the Castleford club: 1, Williams, 105; 2, Liversedge, 95; 3, Nelson, 89; 4, Brindley, 85. Also March 15, 20 birds entered. Three good prizes for three minutes' time singing. 1, Nelson, 64; 2, Morley, 61; 3, Wainwright, 53.—J. Brindley, Sec.

LEIGH.

Linnet singing, March 7, Albion Inn. Forty-two birds sang for eight prizes, quality and time. Time singing was very good, but the quality not up to the usual style. Winners for quality: 1, Page; 2, Aimson; 3, Smedley; 4, Barnes. Time: 1, Statham, 149; 2, 4, Knowles, 128 and 112; 3, Benson, 124. Judges for quality, J. W. Jones and T. Gibbons; for time, Mr. Holcroft. J. Halliwell. Minute man and bird man, J. Lunn. We had Mr. W. Sisson down from Leeds, but he had bad luck in his bird not going off.—R. Disley, Sec.

LEEDS.

Open contests for quality, "Prince of Wales" Hotel, Wandsworth-st. Thirty-two birds sang for three prizes. 1, Playford; 2, Mooran; 3, Smith. Judges, Messrs. T. Dobson and J. Googwill. Also March 15; 29 birds sang for three prizes, our host adding one. 1, Smith; 2, A. Mcgran; 3, Playford. Judges, Messrs. Sissons and J. Mcgran. W. Lipman, Sec.

Open Linnet contest March 14, Fox Inn, Woodhouse Carr, for quality. Mr. Bowyer gave the first prize. Thirty four birds entered. Fanciers came from other Linnet clubs and made it a great success. 1, 2, Ward; 3, Bribiner; 4, Towers. Judges, Messrs. Green, Lunn and Clayton. March 15, 26 birds sang for four prizes. 1, Ward; 2, Towers; 3, Holt; 4, Rosendale. Judges, Messrs. Pyrah and Lunn.—Wm. Lunn, Hon. Sec.

Weekly contest for quality Linnet singing, March 14, Albion Hotel, Saville Green. Twenty-five birds sang for three prizes. 1, W. Sissons; 2, E. Wood; 3, S. Hardcastle. Judges, Richardson, S. Butt and Naylor. Also March 15; 22 birds sang for four prizes. 1, Johnson; 2, 3, Wood; 4, Buttery. Judges, Richardson, Mellia and Naylor.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Thirty Years' Experience in Bird Breeding.

Sir,—I have often thought of writing a few lines to Cage Birds, of which I am a constant reader, with reference to my experience in breeding. I have bred birds for the last 30 years, chiefly Canaries, but have also bred Mules with Goldfinch and Siskin. I have a Greenfinch, a Linnet, two Goldies, and six pairs of Norwich ready to pair this season, and hope to have some success. I find the birds are best by themselves if it is possible to keep them so. I have built a kitt in the garden, it is nine feet square, partitioned up by quarter inch mesh netting. In the corners I have put some pieces of fir tree and find the birds build their nests very readily in them, and I have little trouble with bad breeding hens. I find they do much better than in the ordinary cage. Of course, I have cages into which I put the young until they are able to do for themselves. I feed my birds as follows: Staple food, plain canary seed with various tit-bits. In the season I gather as many wild seeds as possible, such as dandelion, hardhead dock, shepherd's purse, and plantain. I buy a little German rape, maw, teazle, niger and wild seed from the seed merchants and mix them together, giving a teaspoonful every other day all through the winter, adding a little hemp occasionally. I never force my hens, preferring to leave nature to take its course. I may say that I always give dandelion leaves, and the heart as soon as I can find them, and grass seed for the hens when feeding the young in the nest. I have always had good results by taking notice what the hen feeds on. If she likes hemp give her plenty of it, if egg food, let her have it. I have had a hen refuse everything but grass seed, and I gave her plenty, and she reared me a nest of four fine birds. It is to this that I attribute much of my success, namely, humouring the birds with what they like best. You can't force them into your way of feeding, let them have whatever they prefer. My egg food is Osborne biscuit and new laid egg, one egg to about four biscuits well mixed together. I find Cage Birds very helpful, and look forward to Friday morning for it. Many thanks for Cage Birds Annual. It is very useful, and a guide in many ways.

Cup Running at Irish Shows.

Sir,—Although I cannot properly understand from his letter what grievance concerning the novice members of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of I., "Hard Hit" wants rectified, I must confess a real grievance exists at the provincial shows that have the patronage of the above society. The novice has too liberal a classification, and specials are so placed that the genuine novice, with only moderate exhibits, has no chance to recoup his outlay. It is all right at the Dublin fixture, giving six classes for Yorkshires, where they get from fifteen to twenty-five entries per class, but at the provincial shows that have the patronage, the allocation of six novice classes is the ruination of the Fancy, as they can only command an entry of about three or four birds per class, with the consequent result—half prize-money or entry money returned to the exhibitor who is unfortunate enough to get three first prizes (in this poor competition), the compulsion to exhibit in champion classes, where in nine cases out of every ten he cannot get in the money prizes, so gives up in disgust, and leaves exhibiting to the fancier with the long pocket. Another serious grievance is the compulsory nomination of three birds for the novice cup. It is just a game of chance, more especially with the novice, whether he nominates the right ones or not. In the first place, being a novice, he does not know his best birds till he sends them out, and then again the birds that one judge prefers may be left cardless by the next. So I would respectfully suggest that the three highest birds count points towards cup, also that they reduce the novice Yorkshire classes at patronage shows to four, and that members giving specials for novices will place them out of the money prizes, and so encourage both entries and the genuine novice.

Champion Exhibitor.

Sir,—In reply to "Hard Hit," allow me to say that the meetings did come off. I was a good attendant, but did not see "Hard Hit" there. "Hard Hit" denies that he wrote that the novice, unless he has a long pocket, receives any advantage from the champions' experience. What does he mean by the statement "that the long-pocket novice enjoys a monopoly of the champion stock"? Does he suggest that the winning novices were exhibiting borrowed birds? If so, this is a serious accusation to make in the Fancy Press under the seclusion of a nom-de-plume. If "Hard Hit" is a genuine fancier, let him state openly at the general meeting, shortly to be held, who the offenders are, and have them dealt with by the society, according to their deserts. "Hard Hit" is, I believe, a type of fancier sadly common in Dublin at present, and elsewhere it seems; who, if he fails to annex the cup at the first attempt, instead of resolving to take his defeat cheerfully and having another try next year, immediately proceeds to flood the columns of the Fancy Press with pessimistic drivel, and makes all kinds of insinuations against all who have the effrontery to dare to successfully compete with him. "Hard Hit's" suggested definition of a novice is an absurd one. How does he intend to prove that the birds exhibited by any fancier were bred by that fancier? Could not a long-pocket fancier send rings to Yorkshire to some of the cracks, and so have birds bred outside of his own room? No! It is impossible. I think "Hard Hit" had better look up his geography if he does not know that Ireland's length is over 320 miles, and that in his first letter he was referring to fanciers, not shows. Even so, the distance from Cork to Derry is as near 300 miles as makes no matter, and there were shows at both these cities in the last season. "Hard Hit," I am sure, would not like to pay the fares to Dublin of delegates of either of these societies. "Hard Hit," if a novice, has no lack of self-estimation if he thinks he can manage the affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland better than the fanciers who were fanciers before he was born (unless, that is, he is one of those who are novices all their lives). "Hard Hit's" reference to my stock is distinctly amusing. He is angling for my identity with a bait of falsehood, but that fish is not to be caught with such commonplace tackle. There is no necessity for me to angle for his name. Fanciers having read the report of the phantom City of Dublin C.B.S. would be dense indeed if they failed to see that "Hard Hit's" first letter was hatched in the same nest.

The Norwich Plainhead Club and Its Competitions.

Sir,—In his report to the members of the Norwich Plainhead Club at the annual dinner, Mr. F. Cunliffe made a passing reference to a certain member who had written to the press over a "nom de plume," and added that it would have been better if he had written direct to the committee. When any suggestion to alter the existing administration of a club is made, it should not be dealt with by the committee alone, but by the whole of the members. My reason for using the Press for the purpose of outlining my scheme was not because I was ignoring the committee, but because I wanted the whole of the members to know what it was. If I had written direct to the committee, and they had not approved of the scheme (and from the remarks the sec. let fall at the dinner, it is evident it was not favourably viewed in that quarter), the members would not have heard anything more of it. What else are the correspondence columns open for, if not for the ventilation of grievances and the propounding of fresh schemes for the benefit of the Fancy?

Of course, anything which disturbs the calm serenity and complacency of the N.P.C. Committee is anathema, but if the Committee are really not unmindful of the steady decline in the membership, and want to arrest it, let the scheme have a trial. Any average fancier will prefer a known certainty to a possible betterment, and this scheme is a certainty, so far as arresting the decline in membership is concerned. Mr. Cunliffe was considerably troubled about the want of patronage of the members, and the steady decline of same since 1900, and badly wanted to know the reason. I should say the reason is obvious to anyone. After the first show, those who are not in the running for the trophies simply leave off showing, or patronise some show where the competition is less keen; and many of them cease membership because they don't see what use the club is to them. Offer the members an inducement, and they will show up all right. Those exhibitors who are not members soon will be when they see the good things they are missing. If we can find some fancier with the means and the philanthropic spirit to give a trophy, by all means accept it. If subscriptions other than the usual subs. can be collected to buy one, by all means get one, but use the club's funds to further the interest of the members as a whole, and to further the popularity of the Norwich Plainhead Canary, the objective for which the club was formed.

I can assure the committee that they, as fanciers and committeemen, have my respect and admiration; but on matters such as these we may possibly be at variance. Still, that should not be anything to raise their ire, any more than the anonymity of the writer. Personally, I always examine any scheme suggested for the benefit of the Fancy, irrespective of the author's signature. On the other hand, I have to allow that it is difficult to get some people to understand that one is not always seeking notoriety through the columns of the Press.

Sub Rosa.

Are We Dissatisfied with the Winning Norwich Plainheads of To-day?

Sir,—I was pleased to see two letters in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, Feb. 28, re the above subject, as I was the first to publish a letter after visiting the Palace show. I am sure it is very gratifying to see some of the old hands taking this matter up. This is a point that must soon be settled, either to benefit the novice exhibitor or kill him. As I have stated before in your columns, there is nothing more down-heartening to a novice than to journey miles to visit a show, and gaze on the winners in the champion Plainhead classes, only to find them with browing and long in tail. A prominent exhibitor asked me at the Palace show, jokingly, "Is this the Crestbred Class?" I said, "No; it's meant for the yellow Norwich Plainhead Class." Being but a novice at the game, I have done my best to submit to fellow fanciers' opinions a model, which, after studying out carefully, is as near to my idea as I can picture a Norwich. I have exceeded Mr. Floyd's sketch by ¾in. in length, ¼in. deeper in chest, and ¼in. shorter in wing. Now, fellow fanciers, especially novices, do come forward and express your opinions of this suggested model, as I have done my best to give some idea of a Norwich Plainhead. I trust other novices will do the same, and stick to their guns, for I think the time will come when we shall get satisfied.

The Goldfinch Class at Bathgate

Sir,—The owner of Goldfinch No. 6 at Bathgate show has refused £9 9s. for him, and I have been asked by quite a few why the bird stood cardless there. Perhaps the judge would state if he had any doubts as to nationality, as no other reason seems feasible. Mr. Pringle, owner of the bird, would feel obliged by an explanation. This bird has been under 17 judges, and has only once been defeated (2nd Palace). Steel.

New Society for Port Talbot.

Sir,—A new society has been formed for Port Talbot and district. Several members have been enrolled already; a meeting is to take place at 11, Clarence Street, March 23, at 7.30 p.m., for election of officers and other important business, and it is hoped that all intending members will kindly take this as an invitation and attend on that night.

Bird Clubs in New York.

A Special Cage Bird Show Foreshadowed

Sir,—In the Xmas copy of Cage Birds you make reference to Foreign breeders. I have waited to see if anyone else in New York would write you, but I have not seen any letters in Cage Birds from anyone, so am writing myself. I am a bird breeder, and keep almost every kind of English bird, and Finches from South America. I belong to the Empire C.B.C. of New York. We have but one other club in the City; our club is composed mostly of Englishmen and breeders of English Canaries. Mr. Hibbart, of 1929, Washington Avenue, New York City, is Sec., the entrance fee is one dollar. The dues are 25 cents per month. I am quite certain that any Englishman would do well to join, as, apart from the birds, he will go a long way in this country before he will meet as fine a lot of Englishmen as belong to the club. I am sure I am only expressing the wishes of all my fellow clubmen in extending a hearty welcome to any reader of Cage Birds in this City to one of our meetings; a line to the Sec. will give them all particulars, and they may find a few very old friends from the Old Country. Our shows up to the present have always been run in connection with the poultry shows, but we shall soon have enough members now to run them on our own, and Maddison Square Gardens may yet look like the Palace on a show day. At present, even with all the clubs in the U.S. it would not.

The Need of the Novice.

Sir,—Please allow me to answer "John O'Gaunt's" letter in last week's Cage Birds. He asks what a local secretary can do for novices; if "John O'Gaunt" read a letter in Cage Birds of Feb. 14, he would have seen a novice asking for the fanciers to help novices to buy birds. That writer suggested getting a man of experience to look at the bird, and if he thought it was worth the money, to send word, and be paid for his trouble. I answered, "Could not secretaries of societies take it up?" There was no harm in that. "John O'Gaunt" says "the outery of novices is about professionals showing in novice classes, but this cry of Mr. R.'s is something new." Then he says some won't be said, led, or driven; I would ask "John O'Gaunt" down to my place, for I am willing to learn anything about the Cage-bird Fancy, if he will sign his full name. I might know him, and I hope he will send his address. What a vast amount of difference between Mr. Hargreave's letter and "John O'Gaunt's." Hey, Jack, thou art pulling thy own leg!

The Record of a Champion Bramblefinch

Sir,—It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge with many thanks receipt of cheque value £3, also the coloured diploma of honour, as winner in the British Hardbill Champion Section of Cage Birds Championship Competition at the recent Palace show. The coloured diploma is most beautifully designed and charmingly executed by your clever artist, Mr. Norman. I need hardly say how delighted I am in gaining this distinction, more especially as the honour was conferred upon my well-known Bramble, my sole representative in the competition. I consider the scheme a brilliant idea, and judging from the many complimentary remarks I have heard expressed by exhibitors at the numerous shows I have visited where it has been in vogue, I think there is little doubt but that the same view is shared by many others. I believe I am correct in saying I was the first to gain a diploma in the British Hardbill Champion Section my Bramble gaining the award (at the first attempt) at Longton, which I think was the first show at which the competition was held, then by winning the championship at the Palace, this bird has had the unique experience of being first at each end of the competition. For the small sum of one shilling, I gain £3 and a charming hand-coloured diploma of honour, not a bad investment, by the way. This bird has now won thirty-three firsts (twice at the Palace), in addition to many other prizes, including second at the recent Scottish National, and has been adjudicated upon by no less than twenty-three different judges. Wishing Cage Birds the success it so richly deserves,

Pet Thrush Dead After Ten Years.

Sir,—It is with much regret that I write to tell you that our hen Thrush which mated, laid eggs, sat on same, and hatched out one young bird in a Canary double breeding cage in 1908, has at last gone over to the majority. She was a great favourite, and wonderfully tame, and would answer to her name. She was housed in our back-yard for upwards of ten years, and was always bright and happy and in the pink of condition, with a beautiful bloom on her plumage. She once got out of her cage in the early morning, and was missing for half-a-day. We thought we had surely lost her entirely, but at mid-day she turned up again and hopped through the open cage-door into her old home. If appearance be anything to go by, then I say she was brimming over with happiness in finding herself at home again after her escapade. How does her story tally with our opponents' story of the cruelty of confining our pets in cages? Oh, that they had a little more knowledge of the subject, and a little more tolerance, tempered with wisdom, for us poor town dwellers who have a keen love for nature and our feathered pets!

Novice Mules at the Palace Show.

How Perseverance Brought a Southern Fancier Success.

Sir,—Last week I saw (not in "C.B.") "Rambler" in his notes stating that he heard many strong comments about the winning Mules in the novice classes at the Palace show, i.e., that neither the birds nor the exhibitors appeared to be novices at exhibiting; that genuine novices were not capable of turning out birds in such fine condition; and that if they had been got up by a champion, then they ought to be shown in the champion classes. Comments such as these, might, unless contradicted, make many novices throw up the Fancy in disgust, in the belief that they have to meet unfair competition. Being the second prize-winner in the Dark Mule class, upon which exhibit the criticism in Cage Birds states "Staged to Perfection," I take some of these remarks to myself, and for the benefit of those complaining should like to state the following facts:

1st—That the bird has been in my possession sixteen months, and since then no one but myself has ever handled him.

2nd—That the bird has never been washed in his life. I might state here that none of my birds at the Palace show were hand-washed, except one of my Grecnies, which I considered my best bird. Having heard so much of hand-washing, I thought I would try my luck at it. Result, four or five feathers minus from each wing, so I came to the conclusion that birds looked better with all their feathers unwashed, than with only a few feathers left washed.

3rd—That previous to this show season I have never shown outside of Brighton, except at one small fixture (Lewes).

I trust that these remarks will establish that I am still a novice. I would like to add, for the encouragement of novices, the following experiences. A year ago at our club open show I exhibited twelve birds, bringing home one glorious honour—he.

This set me thinking. After spending every moment of my spare time getting these birds in condition to the best of my ability, and getting one he, was it worth the trouble? I came to the conclusion it was not sportsmanlike to take this lying down; so I made up my mind to go to a few of the principal shows and see what really constituted a show specimen. My next move was to get in touch with a few catchers, and by paying them a fair price, obtaining the pick of their catch. By this means I have got most of my stock together. But what a job! I would not advise any but those gifted with an abundance of patience to start this way. I get over the steadying part of the difficulty now by promising the wife and children a little present for every fresh caught bird they can get to take a seed from their fingers. (Novices, take note; it works wonders.)

I think there is much more pleasure in buying your birds in the rough and moulting them yourself, than in buying winners; and I am very pleased with my success this year, having made 49 entries at the principal shows and getting 41 in the tickets. In addition, out of ten entries at the Palace, I secured one first, two seconds, two thirds, one fourth, one fifth and a commended. My Mule was claimed at £3, my Chaffinch for £2 10s., and I was sorry to part with both birds. I hope my success will encourage novices to continue to try. Make up their minds that they are going to win, and success is theirs. I must also add that my success has been due, coupled with the hard work, to the reading week by week of the valuable articles issued in Cage Birds, and not only to the reading of them, but to the digesting of them.

Not Always the Nightingale at Night.

Sir,—I was passing this morning through a village called Glenfield (Leicestershire) at 1.30 a.m.; the moon was shining, it was as light as day. The Blackbirds and Thrushes were singing at the top of their voices. I thought this rather strange, for I have been out all hours of the night for getting on for 9 years, and I have never heard the birds whistling so early in the morn. I don't know if any of our readers of Cage Birds have ever heard of such a thing before. I thought it might be interesting to bird lovers.

Who is Liable for Specials at Shows?

Sir,—At the meeting of the B.R.C.C., held March 10th, the question of a special promised by Mr. — was brought up, and I am requested to bring the following to your notice. At the International Show held by the B.R.C.C. in 1913, Mr. — promised to give a special, value £1 1s., which was gratefully accepted by the Committee, and allotted. Mr. — was notified who had won his special, but from that date to this the special has not been sent on by him, though he has been written to a good many times. He has made excuses for the delay, and promised to send it on, but, as mentioned, it is not to hand yet. At the meeting it was thought that, for the credit of the Club, something ought to be done; a proposal was made that the members present subscribe for same, which was quickly done, in fact more money than was needed was subscribed; £1 2s. was decided on, £1 1s. for the special and 1s. for postage and packing. The special was bought the next day and sent on. The names of the members who kindly subscribed are: Messrs. Aspinall, Buffin, Clapinson, Fisher, Gutierry, Guttridge, Hocking, Lester, Norris, Neugebauer, Sauter, Webb and Williams. The question arises—Are the promoters of shows liable for the specials printed in their schedules, or the donors?

J. W. Norris,
Hon. Sec. B.R.C.C.

[In the absence of any statement from the donor we have withheld his name as given by the secretary, but the answer to the question raised is as follows: The promoters of shows are liable for all the specials offered in their schedules.—Editor Cage Birds.]

Sir,—It is not surprising to me that so few of the "Novices" enter the different competitions if they are all treated as I have been. On 1st Jan. I entered a bird for the Paisley Show. I got Mr. ——'s "special," but up to date, Mar. 16, I have received no prize. I have written two letters to the secretary of the Paisley Club, and in his reply to me dated Feb. 17, he says that if he does not get the prize from the donor, do I expect him to go and steal it? Comment is needless. W. Thomson.

New Society for Alfreton.

Sir,—A meeting was held at the Red Lion, Alfreton, March 14, to form a Cage-bird Society for Alfreton and District. There was a good attendance, and the following officers were elected: Mr. W. Marsh, Pres.; Mr. J. Adnit, Vice-Pres.; Mr. G. Beardall, Chair.; Mr. J. Smith, Treas.; and Mr. L. M. Inman (Cressy Road, Alfreton), Sec.. Will intending members in the district note that a meeting and show of British birds and Mules will be held at the Red Lion, Alfreton, April 4, at 7; Mr. J. Smedley, judge?

L. M. Inman, Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Birds Shelling Seed.

Sir,—In answer to "Yell.-Green," re birds shelling seed and not eating same, I would like to submit the following solution for his (and others) approval. Some time ago I had mine do the same, viz., eating nil, but destroying all seed in hopper. I gave it earnest thought, and after a time came to the acceptance of either of two answers to the riddle! 1st, seed not sun-dried but kiln-dried after getting soaked in ear whilst ripening, and consequently "must" setting in. 2nd, bird getting surfeited with nothing but plain Canary, and wishing a change of diet. Milk sop was my alternative, and it seemed to work the cure. En passant, I would like to warn all young readers against the false economy of buying cheap canary, as it sometimes causes dire harm to young stock. About four years ago I got some seed from a wholesale grocer's at a penny per lb. cheaper than that at the seed-shop. After using it a week I was bereft of four promising young birds, which died without warning, as if they had imbibed poison.

Prize-money at Bristol C.B. Show.

Sir,—I should esteem it a favour if you, or any of your numerous readers, could inform me whether the prize-money won at the show held by the Bristol C.B.S. in November last, has yet been paid. I have written the sec. three times, asking if mine has been overlooked (the last occasion I enclosed a stamped-addressed envelope for reply) but have been unable to obtain a single word in answer to my enquiries.

The Clashing of Kelty and Markinch Shows.

Sir,—I see that the Markinch secretary, Mr. J. Lindsay, complains that Kelty and Blairadam have taken up their date for their open show. Why not? Kelty and Blairadam is a go-ahead society, catering solely for cage birds, and if they think that date is suitable to cage bird fanciers, I don't think that they will lose entries by clashing with Markinch. A society that can get a club show with more entries than Markinch Open Show will never feel the pinch. Is there a remedy? Certainly. First call a meeting of cage bird fanciers, through Cage Birds, and I am sure that the fanciers of the district will turn up to form a club. It is only money needlessly spent sending notices of meetings to local papers, wherein no fanciers look for such things. Secondly, get men appointed for committee that have the Fancy at heart, and do not turn up only on the show day. There are some of the present committee who are good men, and these are the few that keep it going. A hint how to avoid clashing with Kelty and Blairadam. It is this, shift your date. It is not yet too late. Leave November alone, and get the show held in the middle of January, 1915. There are no shows held in Scotland at that time, as all the shows are crammed in the last three months of the year, and the birds are lying idle two months before the breeding season. Now, then, Markinch fanciers, wake up.

GLASGOW DERBY O.A.

Annual meeting Feb. 20, Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, Mr. J. F. Renwick chair. Balance sheet submitted and adopted, showing a small credit balance. Office-bearers for 1914 elected:—Pres., Mr. J. J. M'Ilwain; vice., Mr. J. F. Renwick; sec. and treas., Mr. Jas. Stewart, jun.; auditors, Messrs. Scott and M'Mahon. Rules passed as submitted, except Rule 5, which was amended as follows: "Any member taking prize in wrong sex or class will be required to return same to sec., who will retain it till next year." A motion was made that all classes be limited to 10 guineas. After discussion, vote was taken, and the previous question was carried. Vote of thanks to past office-bearers, and to the chair, brought meeting to a close. Fanciers caring to join can have full particulars from Jas. Stewart, jun., 21, Ormonde Park, Muirend.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, March 5, Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones (Pres.) in chair. A good number present, and a very enjoyable meeting was spent. Minutes passed included some very important items, such as classification and judges for season's shows; also that fixed prize money will be paid at all shows during 1914. Entrance fees as usual, all particulars in syllabus. Decided to have a closed ring competition. Discussion took place on the subject of closed rings, and the following committee was elected to formulate some scheme to bring before the April meeting: Messrs. Woolhouse, Furniss, Carr, Beven, Richards, White, and Jones. Any suggestions will be welcomed. Interesting pairing competition was held. Judges, Mr. J. G. Cowley, Nor., and Mr. W. T. Furniss, Yorks. The members naming most correct pairs were: 1, tie, Messrs. Sparks and Marcroft; 2, Bagshaw; 3, tie, Messrs. Holt and Sissons. Committee is indebted to following members for bringing birds, Messrs. Drabble, Jones, Webster, Kelley, Sissons, L. Woolhouse, J. Woolhouse. Members elected, Messrs. Drabble Bros., Howe, Senior, Brookes, White, Goodison, and Bearder. Next meeting, question night by ballot; fanciers invited.—J. Woolhouse.

BRADFORD WEST C.B.A.

Annual tea and prize distribution Mar. 14, headquarters. There was a grand turn-out, 52 members and their wives sitting down to an excellent tea. A long and entertaining programme was gone through, with Pres. Mr. W. A. Cowgill in the chair. The three cups were won by the following: Champ. cup, Mr. E. Clegg, Dewsbury; Payne cup, Mr. G. A. Bennett; nov. cup, Mr. S. Ratcliffe. Mr. G. A. Bennett wins the 21s. tea service given by Mr. Crabtree. Mr. S. Ratcliffe, the 15s. tea service by Mr. Cooper; and Mr. E. Clegg, the 10s. tea service by Mr. Cooper. The club sps. were won as follows:—CHAMP. SECTION: 1, E. Clegg; 2, Whitwham; 3, Whitley. NOV.: 1, Bennett; 2, Ratcliffe; 3, Butterfield. Money specials: Mr. Bennett won 5s. for most points gained at F.F. show; 5s. specials were given at each old bird show for best bird each colour, Mr. Clegg winning three of them; Whitley, 5s.; Ratcliffe, 5s.; McEwen, 5s.; E. Clegg, 5s. sp. for most entries in champ; sec. throughout the year. Mr. Neesom, 5s. in nov. sec. for most entries. Mr. Cowgill said that competition had been very keen in the past year, and he hoped it would be as keen again next, as the prizes and money sps. were well worth winning. The musical programme was then proceeded with, the following artists acquitting themselves very creditably: Messrs. Bennett, Brook, Birbeck, Whitley, Woodgate, Medley, Gorrill, and Starr. Last, but not least, was Mr. F. Hills with his electric shocks. Votes of thanks to the host and the artistes who had kept us without a dull moment throughout the evening, were carried, also to Mr. H. Lee for his able work at the piano. This brought a very agreeable evening to a close.—W. H. Kilburn, Sec.

Handley, 23, Coventry Road, Wavertree.

SWANSEA C.B.S.

Annual pair show, headquarters, Oxford Coffee Tavern, March 10. The inclemency of the weather unfortunately caused a slump in entries. Mr. Harry Jenkins judged, and gave every satisfaction. On April 14, Mr. Jenkins will give a very interesting lecture on "The Egg," dealing with the incubation period, and as the lecturer has made this one of his chief studies, we may look forward to the lecture being of great educational interest. The meeting is an open one to all fanciers in Swansea and district, to whom a hearty invitation is given to attend.

LONDON C.B.A.

Adjourned annual general meeting, Mar. 10, El Vino; Mr. J. Robson, chair. Balance-sheet was passed, and votes of thanks accorded to the officers for their services for the past year. Mr. Wallington elected assist. sec. An ordinary meeting was held after committee. Mr. A. J. Clark declared winner of Mr. R. L. Crisp's teapot for most points at the young bird, annual, and pair shows. Messrs. Wallington and Watcham were elected delegates on the London Federation for the ensuing year. Messrs. V. Wynn, C. R. Tyson, W. Taylor, and F. Wright nominated for membership. Mrs. Warren Vernon kindly promised a 2-guinea cup for competition. Unfortunately the lecture on "Mating" had to be postponed owing to pressure of business. Vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting. Next meeting April 21.—F. Knight.

NORTHERN BRIT. MULE & F.B.C.

Meeting Feb. 28, Lockbart's, Grainger Street. Chairman, Mr. Pettersson, presided over a fair attendance. For final table show, decided to have classes, Linnet, Redpoll, Siskin, or Twite, Bramble or Chaff., Greenf., Goldf., or Bullf., A.O. Brit., Mule or Hyb. pairs, and Foreign. Mr. Maddison judge. Decided to hold next meeting (annual) Mar. 28, at above address, to give country members a chance to attend, and we hope they will also bring some birds with them. Birds to be staged at 7. Winners of cups and medals over the shows where our patronage was given: Mule cup Mr. Butler, British Mr. J. Scott, Foreign Mr. T. Almond; medals: Newcastle show, Messrs. Butler, Scott and Almond; Carlisle, Messrs. Butler, Scott, and Christer; Alnwick, Davison and Almond; Gateshead, Bertram and Pettersson; Sunderland, McGuire and Waters. If any other member claims to have won a medal, please write at once. The annual dinner, April 1, will be held in connection with the Northern Yorks. and Norwich Clubs, at Princess Restaurant, Bigg Market; tickets, 2s. Those desiring a ticket please write at once, as number is limited. Table show was held; Mr. Jobling, Shields, judged, and gave every satisfaction. LINNET: 1, 3, Waters; 2, McGuire. BRAMBLE OR CHAFF.: 1, 3, Bertram; 2, Pettersson; 4, Hooper. A.O.V.: 1, vhc, Pettersson; 2, hc, Hooper; 3, McGuire; 4, Waters. Birds at next table show are to be field-moulted, except pairs for Mules or Hybrids and foreign; two specials will be given for first and second most points, only the three highest birds to count. Entrance fee 6d. Following were elected members: Messrs. Carr and Cairm, Chopwell; Jobling, Shields. Vote of thanks to the judge brought a pleasant meeting to a close. —W. Curry, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting Mar. 12, Mr. Havenhand presiding. Mr. Perry, in a short lecture, gave us some valuable hints on the selection of stock suitable for building up a successful strain. He also dwelt on the treatment of birds previous to the breeding season, which treatment must have a great influence on the success of any fanciers' breeding. The lecture was followed by a number of questions put to the members present by ballot, and these questions gave Mr. Perry, as well as others, an opportunity to give their views on other subjects interesting to all. We made two new members, and the meeting ended with a unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. Perry. At next meeting Mr. G. Fletcher has kindly consented to act as critic and judge. This is a British table show, so please let us have some entries.—E. Johnson, Sec.

GLASGOW AND WEST COUNTIES.

Meeting and pair show Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, on Mar. 7. Mr. Peter Pettigrew presided over a good attendance of members. Four members enrolled: Messrs. Wm. Cassells and Jas. Dinwoodie, Glasgow; John Liddell, Cambuslang; and Jas. Dick, Glasgow Bridge, Kirkintilloch. A grand lot of Plainheads faced the judges of the pair show, but Borders did not come up to their usual pitch. Messrs. J. Liddell, Cambuslang, and Wm. Telfer, Lesmahagow, judged, and their decisions were well received. Show of muling pairs, April 4. Goldf.-Can., Linnet-Can., A.O.V. muling pairs, Hybrid pairs. Awards of show:—NOR. CL. (2): 1, Macfarlane; 2, Pettigrew; 3, Bannerman; 4, 5, Findlay; 6, Campbell. VARIEG. (17): 1, sp., Campbell; 2, Macfarlane; 3, Findlay; 4, Bannerman; 5, McGowan; 6, Halbert. BORD.: 1, Findlay; 2, Pettigrew. A.O.V. CAN. PAIRS: 1, Findlay; 2, McGowan.—Jas. McGowan, Sec.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Meeting, March 10, Roe Buck Hotel, Mr. Ratcliffe chair. Proposed and carried that Mr. P. E. Barker be again appointed Sec.; Mr. Ratcliffe, Chairman; Mr. Walker, Vice-Chairman; and Mr. J. Davies, Pres. A vote of thanks was passed to retiring officers. Subs., are raised this year to 4/- instead of 3/-, and new members pay 1/- entrance. Proposed that four specialist judges be written to as regards their fee for judging our annual open show. We retain our old date (first Saturday in October) for open show, which Mr. J. W. Metcalfe will judge. Decided to spend 25/- with Cage Birds for advert. in that paper, and that we ask for full patronage of the M.C. and Y.C.C.. Also decided to hold next feather show one week before Stoke-on-Trent Soc., and that the Sec. write Mr. F. J. Weaver as regards judging the same; also that we have the Longton Town Hall for our open show.—P. E. Barker, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE C.B.S.

Meeting, Mar. 2, Mr. J. Roberts, chair. 15 members present. Decided to hold young bird show, July 1. Mr. J. Jeffries will judge the annual show, Nov. 11 and 12. Results of the monthly show were: NOR. (Please write on one side of the paper only. Ed.)

SCOTTISH B.B. AND M.C.

Annual general meeting, March 7th, 142, High-st., Edinburgh, before a rather poor turn out of members. Mr. Watson chair. Balance sheet was gone into and passed, the Chairman remarking that considering the great quantity of medals given this year the balance in hand of £4 10s. was very satisfactory. Office bearers elected: Pres., Mr. Alf. Hoyle; Vice-President, Mr. J. McHolen; Sec. and Treas., J. Allan, 5, Duncan-place, Leith. Committee same as last year.—J. Allan, Sec.

WINGATE F.S.

Meeting, March 14. Decided to have another open show and a members' show. Dates and judges to be fixed at next meeting, March 28. The Society has a six miles radius, and all who would like to join will be heartily welcomed at this meeting.—J. Burdett, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting Mar. 11, headquarters, Marlboro' Hotel; Mr. Willmott, chair. Mr. Cowley, Little Bromwich, was nominated a member. Important items were dealt with, and Mr. Burke gave a very instructive lecture on "Canary Breeding," dealing chiefly with suitable cages, how to prevent egg-binding, etc., etc. Many useful items were included in his paper, which was very enjoyable, and a very warm vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Willmott, seconded by Mr. Stevens, and carried with the heartiest support of all present.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

CINNAMON CANARY CLUB.

Season's specials won as follows: — CLUB'S TROPHY: Proctor 90, Mrs. Tweddle 85, Donmer 69, Bentley 62, Rev. B. Nume 58, Godley 44, S. Wilson 24, Smalley 15, Roberts 12, Hartup 10. AGGREGATE: Rev. B. Nume 128, Proctor 118, Mrs. Tweddle 113, Donmer 102, Godley 50, Bentley 42, Wilson 24, Smalley 15, Roberts 12, Hartup 10. NOV. SPECIALS: Cup: Wagstaff 29, Ahardyce 19, Smalley (? novice) 15, Andrew Bros. 12, Chubb 9, Rae 5. Protests to above points must be made to the secretary by April 1, when specials will be paid out. Will members who have not paid their subs. send on at once to be included in the balance-sheet?—J. W. Metcalfe.

MORPETH C.B.S.

Meeting, March 14; Mr. Seely, chair, before a good attendance. The evening was taken up with show classification. Decided to pay members' prize money on the sliding scale. New members made: T. Carman, W. Smails, B. Baird, Henderson, and F. Strong. Terms of membership are 1s. on nomination, and 3s. subs. I shall be very pleased to have the names of any fanciers who wish to join.—W. Summers, 82, Newgate Street, Morpeth, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting, March 14, "Prince of Wales" Hotel. There was a good turn-out of members, Mr. J. Parfitt chair. Schedule for open show was thoroughly gone through and finally approved, with a few additions to the Canary classes. Decided to hold a question night at next meeting, April 11. Questions to be placed in a hat. Each member in turn to pick out of hat and answer the same, or to select a substitute. This should be interesting to all. Mr. Albert J. Salter, Abergavenny, was elected a member. This gentleman was once a fancier of For., and was for many years a member of the Avicultural Society. He has now taken up Canaries, and we wish him every success with his new variety. Any member desirous of altering the rule of competing for trophy should put in a notice of motion at our next meeting.—G. Broome, Hon. Sec.

QUEENS PARK C.B.A.

Meeting, March 12, Emmanuel Hall, Harrow-rd., Mr. G. Glanville chair, and a good attendance. Unanimously decided to purchase a cup for Brit. and For. birds out of the funds, with a view to increasing the competition and membership in this progressive society. After business members listened to a very instructive lecture by Mr. Robson, entitled "Birdy Topics." At the conclusion Mr. Robson was plied with questions, all of which were satisfactorily answered. Hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Robson for his kindness brought a pleasant evening to a close.—H. R. Lowe, Sec.

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

Annual presentation of prizes, March 14, Railway Hotel, Laisterdyke. There was a large attendance of fanciers and friends. I was pleased to see such a lot of City of Bradford members present. The one disappointment of the evening was that our President was unable to present the prizes as expected, therefore that honour fell to Mr. Richmond, an old fancier. I was sorry not to see Mr. and Mrs. Bottomley there as usual. No doubt everyone feels for them in their sickness. The talent was admirable; it would have been impossible to select a more varied programme. Messrs. Atkinson, Langley and Co. gave numerous glees, songs and duets, which were highly appreciated. Mr. Dover gave a few sentimental songs. Mr. Cassell and Mr. Wood gave comic songs and other artistes, including Mrs. Thornton and Mr. Winter, were greatly appreciated. The pianist was Mr. Herbert Binns. The Chairman, Mr. Leo Hodgson, moved a vote of thanks to the artistes. Mr. E. Padgett seconded on the condition that the Sec. and Chairman be included for the excellent manner in which they had got the concert together and the able way they carried it through. I should like clubs round about to have more musical evenings. I think it would be the means of keeping fanciers together better than at present. I would do my best if any club would like one or two musical evenings.—W. H. Syms, Sec.

KINGS LYNN C.C.

Meeting held in the Rechabites Hall, Feb. 18; 18 members present, Mr. Kent chair. A pair show was arranged; 14 pairs were staged. Judge, Mr. Bennell. 1, Hately, extra large and well matched; 2, Thurston, both birds nice size and making a good pair; 3, Harrod, non-fed, nice size and subs., short and typical; 4, Greenfield, tkd. yell. cock and gr. hen, nice pair, but not size or subs. as leaders; vhc, Breeze, good stock pair, a bit soiled, cock bird a good stock bird, might have stood higher up; he, Kent; c, Chapman. Several good useful pairs were cardless, which should breed something good for their owners, and taking the birds all round they were a credit to the club and the members.

After the usual comments had been passed on the birds, questions were asked. Mr. C. Greenfield asked "What are the benefits obtained by use of sawdust in the cages." Mr. Breeze said it kept the birds in a much cleaner condition, and that it was as well to give fresh supply every week, not omitting to give some sand or gravel in a tin. Mr. Ricketts said he found sawdust was cheaper, but caused maggot and lice; these were caused by the dirt and fine sawdust, and he found it advisable to sift sawdust and use the coarser article. He preferred pine dust when obtainable, being more of a disinfectant. Mr. Langford said if pine dust was unobtainable, would it answer the same purpose if one disinfected the ordinary wood dust? "Yes," replied Mr. Thurston, "but Joye's disinfected sawdust would be better; this would do away with all maggots, wood lice, and also stop a lot of bird lice and red mite." Mr. Greenfield asked "What was best for a sick bird?" Mr. Hately asked what the bird was suffering from. Mr. Greenfield said he had not any bird ill, but he meant any bird which was ailing. Mr. Kent said it was necessary to try and find out what was the matter with the bird before doctoring it; birds sometimes suffer with inflammation caused by the change in the weather and errors in feeding. He had found that a small piece of a Beecham pill relieved inflammation, and two drops of rape oil put into the patient's beak. For lung and throat troubles nothing was better than about six drops of glycerine in water and two or three drops mixed with egg-food. Mr. Langford and Mr. Thurston recommended Epsom salts once a week. This, they found, was a medicine which kept all their birds in proper condition, and was a good preventive. A prevention was better than cure. Mr. Breeze said it was astonishing that a lot of fanciers would let one of the best cures, in his opinion, trip them up, and that was dandelion root. This he had found a very good medicine for a sick bird, but what he would like to know is the prevention. Mr. Thurston said an old bird catcher told him, and, in fact, came to see one of his sick birds, and recommended a small spider, which he gave to it, and the bird recovered. This remark caused some laughter; but another fancier said that a spider given to chickens was a good old cure, and he saw no reason why a small one given to a Canary or any other bird should not be successful. He also had found a small piece of Beecham pill was a good cure. Chairman pointed out that questions had been asked as to prevention, and in his mind trouble was caused by feeding the birds on plain Canary seed, with nothing else until just previous to the breeding season, when the sudden change in diet, with the variation in the weather, upset the birds. If fanciers gave their birds pieces of raw apple, boiled carrot, and any nice fresh green stuff, being careful no frost is on it, with an occasional bit of egg food, this would keep the bird's blood and bowels clear during the winter months.

A grand social for the distribution of these prizes will be held Mar. 13 in Lockhart's Cafe, Grainger-st., when all members are invited to be present. Proposed and seconded that the meeting be altered from the first Monday to the first Wednesday in the month.—M. C. Potts, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Meeting Mar. 3, Mr. Dewhurst's room, Fishergate. There was a splendid turn-out of members, along with a few non-members, to hear Mr. J. W. Cleminson, of Ashton-on-Ribble, lecture on "The Norwich Plainhead." Mr. Cleminson took for his standard the Norwich Plainhead Club standard, because, he said, that standard had been drawn up by men who knew what an ideal Norwich Plainhead should be. The lecturer said he thought the Norwich as a variety was the most popular and interesting of all, but that, in his opinion, there had been a great deterioration in type and quality during the last few years, caused through too great a desire to get size in the birds, to the detriment of quality of feather. Mr. Cleminson instanced the great amount of browing to be seen on a lot of the birds that have been winning on the show bench recently, and said that if they had been judged according to the N.P.C. standard they could not possibly have won, as that standard says: "Head, round, full, and neat, with short beak," and if a bird had a good round head it could not possibly be browed. He went on to say that long feathered birds could not stand the wash, as after one or two shows the feathers in the neck came out, and the bird was not fit to show again that season. Short feathered birds as a rule carried a better colour, and could stand washing much better, besides having that sheen on the feather which catches the eye of the judge. He brought a few examples with him so that he could show us the different points that he spoke of. He pointed out that we should always have an object in view when pairing up, and try to breed out any faults the parents might have, not pairing two birds having the same fault. Mr. Cleminson said double-buffing needed careful study, as also did double-yellowing, but that he had got good results from both. The lecturer was asked a good many questions, and answered them all in a most able manner. After a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Cleminson, the meeting came to a close.—H. F. Marsh, Assist. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Special meeting, Mar. 3, Boot Inn, Mr. F. C. Parker chair. Decided that N.F. show be held July 4. Mr. Bracegirdle elected member, and L. Cavanagh hon. sec.—L. Cavanagh, "Berwyn," Vicars Cross, Chester.

ALTRINCHAM OPEN C.B.S.

Meeting, Rigby Memorial Schools, Navigation-rd., Altrincham, was well attended. It was announced that J. S. Procter, Esq., had consented to be the President of the Society, and also that he had generously promised to give a handsome special prize. New members continue to join, and everything gives promise of a prosperous Society. Next meeting March 25, at 8, Station Cafe.—C. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

PORTSMOUTH F.S.

Mr. Heighton also gave an interesting lecture on Hybrid breeding, giving advice on the best and easiest pairs to select. Questions were invited, and a good discussion followed. Usual vote of thanks closed the meeting.—A. Freestone, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Meeting March 7, Nelson's Temp. Hotel, Mr. Jno. Montgomery, pres. chair. Sec. gave detailed report of pair show, stating that Mr. Martin was winner of points' special instead of D. Whitelaw. Owing to the inability of Mr. J. Laurie to be present his lecture was deferred until April meeting. Nomination and voting for judges for annual show Nov. 28 then took place. New members are now being enrolled; all particulars from secretary.—W. Hutchinson, 163, Hospital Street, Glasgow.

GREENOCC, PORT GLASGOW AND GOUROCK O.S.

Presentation and smoking concert, Mar. 14, Imperial Halls, Greenock. A good number of members and friends sat down to tea. Mr. Stewart, pres., chair. The guests of the evening were: Mr. Rodden, late sec., Mr. Bryden, late min. sec., and successor to Mr. Rodden for present year, and Mr. M. Service, who, to the regret of all, was unable to be present owing to a family bereavement. The chairman, on behalf of the members, presented Messrs. Rodden and Bryden with beautiful gold badges, suitably inscribed, as a token of esteem from the members, and appreciation of their work, in connection with the society for the past year. Messrs. Rodden and Bryden suitably replied. Great credit is due to the committee for the able manner in which they carried out their work. The musical programme was of a high standard, and the following artists acquitted themselves with great credit: Messrs. McLaren, Allison, Falconer, McAfferty, Brown, Chamers, Campbell, McDermind, Bryden, and Master J. McCormick. Special vote of thanks was given to the artists, including Mr. Allison, for his able work at the piano. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King" brought a very enjoyable evening to a close. Next meeting April 1.—C. Bryden, Sec.

OTLEY O.S.

Annual dinner and prize distribution March 14, Queen's Head Hotel. About 20 members sat down to a splendid dinner, after which a concert was held, chair being taken by Mr. A. Brown, Yeadon. Songs and recitations were given by Messrs. Stokes, Robinson, Dawson, Tempest, Galling and Thomas, all of which were heartily appreciated. Mr. Brown presented the prizes for the winter show and the cup and specials for most points for season. Mr. Myers won silver cup for the third time. This now becomes his own property. He also wins £1 cash for most points during the season, this too being for the third time. Mr. Wheatly 2nd, J. Iveson 3rd. Mr. Myers received five other class specials for the winter show, remaining specials being won by Messrs. Iveson, Thomas, Crawshaw and Shaw. The first toast was "The Otley Cup-winner," and the Chairman heartily congratulated Mr. Myers on his success. Mr. Myers suitably replied, and kindly offered a guinea gold medal for competition in coming shows. The next toast was the "Otley O.S.," which was drunk with enthusiasm. Mr. Thomas, the Sec., responding, heartily thanked the Chairman for hurrying from London to preside. The toast of the Chairman was then drunk with musical honours. The final toast was to our host and hostess for providing such a substantial repast.—J. Thomas, Hon. Sec.

COKERNUT HUSK NESTS

for Budgerigars, etc The "Improved Secure" husks were originated, imported, manufactured, and sold by me 25 years ago, 3 years before some dealers started in business. They remain unequalled. Don't be misled, as cheap, clumsily-made substitutes, which fall to pieces in use, are dear at any price, causing disappointments, losses and failures. Having bred thousands of Budgerigars, I know their requirements. Am not a bird dealer, and keep no shop. My price 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each. One quality only; wasters are burned. Trade supplied: Harper, Norton, Stourbridge. (1462)

Nonpareil Buntings

North American Nonpareil Buntings, seldom imported, most glorious colours; cocks, show form, 25/- each; hens, 15/- each; only a few left; Indigo Blue Buntings, 13/- each, 25/- pair; G. Chapman, High-st., Birmingham.

TALKING PARROTS

of all kinds, on our four months' trial system; signed talking warranty; also some acclimatised rare foreign birds from extensive outdoor aviaries; holder thousand testimonials, bear names and addresses; also book on Parrots; weekly instalments accepted. (1282)

AVOID UNNECESSARY TROUBLE and EXPENSE

by rearing your birds on

Spratt's COD LIVER OIL CAGE BIRD FOOD.

There is every reason why you should use this Food in preference to the old-fashioned Egg and Biscuit preparation.

It is much more efficacious.
It is more easily prepared and keeps sweet much longer.
It is far less expensive.
It improves the size of birds fed upon it, assists them to feather quickly, and greatly increases their stamina.

For many years the most up-to-date Canary Breeders have regularly used Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food, not only as a food for fledglings, but for a number of other purposes.

IT IS INVALUABLE (a) For feeding during the Moult.
(b) As a medium for giving Colour Food.
(c) For feather producing.
(d) For weakly birds requiring a Tonic.
(e) For Winter-feeding of Adult Birds.

IN THE CARDS AT THE PALACE SHOW.

Two excellent novice Yorkshire Canaries owned by Mr. J. A. Hodgson, of Idle. In the very strong competition at the Crystal Palace Show the unflighted buff hen was highly commended and the cinnamon-marked cock very highly commended. Mr. Hodgson also secured first prize in the class for marked birds.

SOFT MOULT, NOT SINGING

Special notice to all bird lovers. We are anxious that every fancier should know the value of our bird medicines. Ditchfield's Medicines have been used by most leading fanciers for over six years, and are supplied to the London Zoo. They are genuine remedies, which can be given with confidence to all classes of cage birds. Fanciers, we want a trial. We guarantee to return you every penny paid if our medicines fail to give you satisfaction. Special offer: If you have any birds you are relying upon for the breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, try Ditchfield's Tonic Drops. We guarantee you a perfect cure. This medicine is without doubt the grandest medicine ever introduced for bringing birds into breeding condition. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are an absolute cure for Not Singing, Soft Moult, Going Light, Egg Binding, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. In 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For Bronchitis, Wheezing, and Hoarseness, get Ditchfield's special Lung Tonic. It is the grandest Medicine ever offered for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For cases of Constitutional Weakness and Debility get Ditchfield's Famous Revivo. There is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. As a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing, Revivo is absolutely unequalled. In 7d., and 1/1 bottles. In cases of severe Diarrhoea use Ditchfield's Famous Diarrhoea Powder, in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. It is perfectly safe, and can be relied upon. When ordering Medicine, kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles any kind for 1/9, three for 2/6. The 1/1 bottles are treble the size of the 7d. bottles. All medicines are sent, post free, per return. All bottles broken in transit replaced. Also two valuable Seed Recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Song, given free to all Purchasers of our Medicines. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, OLDHAM. (1427)

Norwich! Norwich! Norwich!

Purchase direct, and from a place where they actually are in stock, and which can be seen besides. You save heavily both in cash and quality of birds you receive

By Purchasing Direct from Me.

Compare the quality with anything you can get elsewhere, at much higher prices. It is not what bought-up birds at absurdly high prices have done that matters to you, even if led to believe that they are not so procured. What you want to know is where you can get the greatest value for money. I sell the Winners and can easily save you money, and at the same time give you birds that others would reserve.

400 Champion Rollers in Stock.

I have a magnificent collection of pure SEIFERT ROLLERS, consisting of 400 cocks, and a large number of hens. These birds have not been picked over. They have come direct from the rooms of some of the best breeders in Germany, and include some exceedingly good birds. They are in full rolling song, with a good variety of tours, and are sure to give complete satisfaction anywhere. Kindly note the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Hens, same pure strain, 2/-, 4/-, 5/- each. Genuine schoolmasters, specially trained for contest singing, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 35/-, 40/- each, upwards. Travelling cages, 3d. extra in all cases.

I am also offering a limited number of hens bred from some of the best strains in England, at 7/6 and 10/- each. These are worth treble to any breeder. All B.R.C.C. rung. I invite fanciers requiring Rollers to come and hear these birds, and make their own selection. To those who cannot come I offer to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on ten days' approval, and undertake to return cash in full, if not absolutely satisfactory. Is it possible to make a fairer offer?

Remember! I Invite You to come on any day but Sunday and inspect my stock. You need not announce your visit. Come at any time. You will be sure of a hearty Yorkshire welcome, and whether desiring to purchase or not, will be shown round my rooms and stock.

I have 14 large rooms full of grand stock and exhibition birds, also First-class Songsters, in every variety; all in the pink of health and condition.

As regards the quality of my stock, I need only say that during the show season just ended they have secured 76 Specials, 89 Firsts, 74 Seconds, and 60 Thirds, and have been shown in open champion classes only, in hottest competition at all the leading shows. They have also won the N.P.C. Champion Trophy, the O.N.P.C. Champion Trophy, 3rd in Y.C.C. Competition, also several Silver Cups and Bowls, Gold and Silver Medals, Diplomas, and numerous other trophies, finishing at the Crystal Palace Show with 4 Firsts, Silver Cup, and other honours.

I have also supplied birds that have won highest honours for my clients, including winners of this year's Palace show, in very strong classes. I have letters filed here for anyone to see in proof of this; also a large number of letters from fanciers who have bred winners from stock bred and sold by me. These are FACTS, needing no comment. They speak for themselves, and they cannot be disputed. I am now offering marvellous value in the following varieties:—

CHAMPION NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN.

Grand, short, thick-set birds, cocks or hens, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards. Matched pairs, personally selected by me for breeding winners, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- to 100/- per pair. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and I am prepared to give a written guarantee that the above are bred by me from my noted strain of winners. I have also a few real good cobby birds bred from other well-known strains at the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Grand cobby hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, with good position and in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Effet racy hens, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Matched breeding pairs, personally selected and ready for immediate breeding, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair. Also a few special pairs bred from open winners and personally matched by me for breeding winners, at 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. I am in a special position to give amateurs a good start with the best blood in the Fancy ,or to supply the old hand with good stock birds, either Cocks or Hens, at a reasonable price.

CRESTS AND CREST-BRED.

Having just received the entire stock of a well-known breeder, I am able to offer remarkable value in this variety. Every bird bred from noted stock, and capable of breeding winners. Kindly note these prices:—

Crested Cocks:—10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each. Crested Hens, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Crest-bred Cocks:—8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Crest-bred Hens: 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Matched Pairs:—15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- per pair.

DARVEL C.B.C.

Meeting, March 10, Town Hall. Letter read from secretary of Kilmarnock C.B.C. re proposal made at last meeting that a joint competition be held between the two clubs. Committee of four appointed to interview the Kilmarnock Committee, to see what arrangement could be come to. Moved by Mr. J. Brown, sec. by Mr. H. Allan, that we hold a First Feather show in July. This was agreed to. But arrangements for same were left over to be discussed at next meeting. It was left in hands of committee to arrange rambles for summer season. Table show as follows: NOR. PAIRS: 1, Anderson; 2, Hopkins; 3, 4, Allan. BORD.: 1, 2, 3, Allan; 4, Nisbet. GOLDIE AND CAN. MULING PAIRS: 1, Hopkins; 2, Allan; 3, Connell. VAR. MULING: 1, Allan; 2, 3, Hopkins. BULLF. HYB.: 1, 4, Taylor; 2, Anderson; 3, Molton. VAR. HYB.: 1, 4, Taylor; 2, Anderson; 3, Hopkins. Mr. J. Johnston, Kilmarnock, judged. At the close of show he gave a short address on Mule Breeding, giving results of his own experiences in this branch of the hobby. Vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Johnston for an entertaining hour. Sec. announced result of table show pts. competition as follows: CAN. SECT.: Mr. H. Allan, with a total of 21 points. BRIT. SECT.: Mr. D. Hopkins, 50 pts. Agreed a meeting be held on Tuesday, Mar. 24, 7.30, to make further arrangements re club's proposed shows. Members requested to turn out in force to this meeting.—J. Robertson, jun., Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Mar. 19, Maskell's Hotel, one of the best attended meetings we have had for years. Sec. reported that Messrs. Vardy and Patrick had accepted judging engagements for the open show. Sec. instructed to write a judge for the Brit. and Mule Sec. Election of officers as follows:—Scrutineers, Messrs. Whetton and Banks; chair, E. Allsopp; vice-chair, E. J. Banks; treas., E. J. Davies; sec. and show manager, E. Thomas; committee, Messrs. James, Ball, Smith, Dugmore, Raymond, Wiseman, Merritt, Pearce, and Whetton. Mr. W. Sampson and Mr. T. Mellmish elected vice-presidents. Auditors, Messrs. Smith and Ball, reported audit of books, and congratulated the soc. on the result of the year's working. Mr. Smith saying he had been auditor for a number of years, and this was the first time we had been able to declare a balance on the right side. He appealed to members to pay up all arrears of contributions. After reading of balance-sheets of the open show and general and cup fund, Mr. Whetton, our late chairman, congratulated the sec. on the result of his labour. Mr. E. J. Banks and others endorsed all that had been said by Mr. Whetton. Balance of £13 5s. 2d. in hand, and cups to the value of £30. Mr. Palmer, 150, Pembroke Road, enrolled. Resolved to hold two young bird shows on June 17 and July 15. Resolved to hold table show of Brit. Hardbills at next monthly meeting. Mr. H. C. Smith will judge. Will members please bring birds with them? No entrance fees. Sp. for most pts., box of chocolates, given by Mr. Ball. Resolved to have questions regarding Canary breeding at next meeting. If any fancier in this district would care to join, I should be pleased to supply him with particulars.—E. Thomas, 48, Craddock Street, Cardiff, Sec.

HARROGATE C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, Mar. 18. Chair, pres., Mr. H. Milling, J.P., who said it gave him great pleasure to preside. He was pleased with the working of the soc., and thought many of the well-to-do people in Harrogate might be approached with a view to their becoming patrons. Having looked through the report and balance-sheet, he said he must congratulate the soc. in having such an invaluable sec. Balance in hand, £2 15s. 10d., which, considering the receipts for the year are so small, viz., £43 5s., shows we are in a healthy position. Election of officers as follows:—The Hon. Edward Wood, M.P., and Lady Dorothy Wood re-elected patron and patroness; Mr. H. Milling, pres.; and vice-presidents were re-elected en bloc; committee, Messrs. Brown, Botham, Gill, Ireland, Hamlyn, Long, Leatham, Walker, Veitch; W. E. Fergusson, hon. treas.; and G. H. Barnwell, hon. sec. Vote of thanks to chairman brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.—G. H. Barnwell, Hon. Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, Mr. Brotherton presided over a good muster. Presentation was made to Mr. Foster, host of the "Mail Coach" Inn, of a bird and cage, kindly given by members. Mr. Foster expressed his pleasure at receiving the bird, and hoped the soc. would continue to prosper. Three new members made: Messrs. Dransfield, Clarke, and Allott. Proposed to hold two Nest Feather shows, June 13 and July 11. Points in all shows to count for cup. Also proposed to hold members' show New Year's Day.—J. Taylor, Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH & M.B.S.

Meeting, 142, High Street, with a large turnout of members. Principal business was selection of judges for annual show. The following gentlemen have accepted: Nor., Mr. W. Grewar, Lochgelly; Bord., J. Dewar, Edinburgh; Brit., Mr. C. Sykes, Musselburgh. Agreed to have usual young bird show, July 4, and Mr. Dewar has kindly consented to place the tickets, several specials being promised for this show. Two new members enrolled, bringing the membership up to double that of last year.—Jas. Stormont, Sec.

BANKFOOT C.B.S.

At a special meeting, March 9, it was finally decided to disband the society. For the past few months meetings have been barely attended, and consequently the work of the Society has fallen on the shoulders of a few willing workers, who have always had its welfare at heart. The last three shows of the season had to be abandoned owing to lack of entries, and no doubt this was due to the majority of the members having sold their stock. Events of financial importance have been allowed to be managed by the few staunch members already referred to, and instead of those events resulting as they have always previously done in financial success, there has been a slight deficit. This has been met by the kindness of Messrs. Mitchell, Wilman, and Hudson. The society started the year with a really fine balance, but this has been depleted owing to cause already alluded to. No doubt now that the Society is disbanded, the worst sufferers will be those who were content to let matters drift, so long as they themselves were put to no inconvenience or expense.—F. Gelder.

PELTON FELL AMALGAMATION.

Meeting, March 14, Mr. W. Forster chair, before a good muster of members. Annual show dates fixed as follows: Chester-le-Street, Nov. 7, or near that date; Birtley Show, Dec. 7, or near; Pelton Fell, Jan. 2. Schedule drawn up giving a classification of 44 classes (5 novice), with the same rules as last year. Fanciers residing within six mile radius invited to join. Sub. 7/6, 1/- entrance fee covering all three societies. Next meeting, March 28, at Station Hotel, Birtley.—R. Ward.

GRAVESEND F.S.

Annual meeting, Bat and Ball Hotel. Balance-sheet, which shows a year's satisfactory working, not so much in regard to a slight balance in hand, as to the payment of outstanding accounts, was passed. To the efforts of the hon. show sec., Mr. A. H. Terry, this is attributed, not omitting the able manner in which the hon. treas., Mr. A. E. Lambert, has handled the treasury. The following were elected to office:—Mr. A. H. Terry, chair; H. C. Martin, vice-chair; A. E. Lambert, hon. treas., this gentleman entering on his fifth year of office; W. J. Greenslade, financial sec., a conspicuous member in this year's election of officers, and ardent supporter; A. Caithness, hon. sec.; T. Johnson, assist. sec., this being a new office on account of the pressure of society business. Hearty vote of thanks to committee and members was passed. Mr. A. H. Terry responded, saying how the society had benefited by so able a leader as Mr. Ibbotson, the ex-chairman. Late officers were all duly thanked. Annual open show date settled for Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. Secs. kindly note.—A. Caithness.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Annual meeting, Mar. 13, Mr. R. Topping, chair. Three new members elected: Mr. S. C. Crawhall, Mr. E. Kennerson, Sunderland, and Mr. H. Briggs, Bearpark. Balance-sheet read and adopted, showing a small balance in hand. Officers re-elected, and rules were gone into, and an amendment proposed and carried that in future the sec. be called the Northern Norwich Plainhead Club, and that all societies desiring our patronage must give six classes for champ. and two or more for nov., as we wish to encourage novices of this variety in the North if they will only join us. It was recommended to adopt closed rings. Members requiring same can get them from sec. We received an invitation from Newcastle C.B.W. to hold our table shows in conjunction with theirs for coming season. This will come up for discussion at our next meeting. I am still open to receive any subs. up to Aug. towards the cup fund. Please try and help the lovers of the Norwich Plainhead by making a good competition. Annual dinner and prize distribution, "Princess," Bigg Market, Newcastle, April 1; tickets, 2s. Next meeting, April 18.—F. W. Laidlow.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Annual general meeting, Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, Mar. 14. Mr. Charles Campbell (pres.), in the chair. Correspondence read from Messrs. McNaughton and Shillinglaw. Financial statement for past year was then submitted by treas., showing £5 19s. 4d. cash balance in hand, this being considered very satisfactory. Balance-sheet was passed unanimously. Gold and silver medals won during past show season were presented to winners by president, recipients receiving the hearty congratulations of their fellow members. A very spirited and interesting discussion took place in regard to club rule 12. Agreed to appoint a special committee, Messrs. Campbell, McLay, Barron, Smart, and Secretary, to revise rules and submit to general committee. A complaint from Mr. Thomson (Broxburn) about not having received schedules of patronage shows, was put to meeting, and sec. was instructed to see that in future each member be supplied with schedule of those shows getting patronage, otherwise support to be withdrawn. Mr. McNaughton proposed that subs. be paid by end of May, and that 1s. entrance fee should be added. The meeting endorsed the suggestion regarding the time limit, but not the entrance fee, the time limit not to be compulsory this year, or till revision of rules is completed. Mr. McNaughton also asked the meeting to consider the advisability of adopting closed rings, but as this matter affected every individual member, it was considered right that a ballot should be taken, secretary being instructed accordingly. Mr. McLaren (representing West Fife "C.B." League) brought to notice of meeting a move which was on foot against the exorbitant railway charges existing, and asking S.C.C.C. for their support. The meeting promised to give every support to the movement. The following were admitted to membership: Messrs. Wm. Scott, Gartsherrie, Coatbridge; Matthew Donaldson, Kilsyth; and Charles Noble, Kilmarnock. Meeting adjourned with a vote of thanks to chairman.—John Young, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

WALTON AND EVERTON C.B.S.

Extraordinary general meeting, March 11, to reorganise the affairs of the society. Unanimously carried that in future it should be kuown as the Walton and Everton C.B.S., will members please note change of name. Meetings second Wednesday in month at Mission Hall, 3, Priory Grove, Heyworth Street, Everton. In response to a circular sent to all members whose names were on the books (if any member missed will he kindly send his address to the undersigned) fully 60 fanciers turned up to give the society a good send off. Twelve new members were made. The Rt. Hon. F. E. Smith, K.C., M.P., has consented to be hon. pres. The new officials are: Chair., M. E. Hilson; vice, J. Holmes; committee, Messrs. Bell, Rothwell, Bush, Brindle, Steinart, Walker, and Handley, Auditors, Wilkins and Metcalf. New rules were drawn up and will be sent to members, with a syllabus of the year's lectures, in due course. A series of rambles in Lancashire and Cheshire will be arranged. For next meeting the committee have been fortunate enough to get the services of that well-known exhibitor, Mr. W. Young (Benson and Young), to open a debate on "Which is the best and most profitable Canary to keep, Green or Clear?" Mr. Young takes the Greens, and one of the greatest authorities in Liverpool is advocating the Clears. It will be a great debate, and we invite all fanciers to attend. A lot of new business was gone into, which will be dealt with by the committee, and brought forward next meeting. A most interesting lecture on "Canary Management" was given by Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, who dealt with the pairing up of the birds, detailing all points from the egg to the show bench. A general discussion followed. Numerous specials have been promised for the coming shows.—W. C. Robinson, G. Burns, joint secs., 7 and 9, Gerald Street, Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Meeting March 12, Oldham Hall, Mr. Maxwell in the chair. Seven new members made, and one nominated, Mr. Barker, Wallasey. Decided to have three nest feather night shows, one Saturday afternoon show, one novice night show, and one pair show; all points gained at these shows to count for season specials. There will also be a series of lectures and discussions. Anyone desirous of particulars can have same on applying to Sec. A night show of Brit. was afterwards held, 55 birds being staged, and judged by Messrs. Jones and Carruthers, who gave every satisfaction. Vote of thanks accorded the judges.—J. Lloyd, 33, Briardale Road, Mossley Hill, Liverpool.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Annual meeting, Feb. 19, Mr. J. Robinson presided over a very large meeting. The following elected: President, Col. H. M. Wilson, J.P.; vice-pres., A. L. Lees, J. Roy; chair., J. Robinson; sec., J. Davey; assist. sec., A. Colley; treas., W. Whittaker; committee, Messrs. Evans, Slater, Clarke, Dutton, Howarth; auditors, A. Cooper and J. Evans. Decided to have a picnic during the season. Particulars to be announced later. Pair show, Feb. 24, 15 pair of Yorks. and four pairs of Nor., judges, E. Dooley Yorks., and W. N. Turner Nor. Yorks. were especially good, and gave Mr. Dooley a lot of trouble. YORKS.: 1, 4, Howarth; 2, vhc, Evans; 3, c, Slowe; c, Clarke. NOR.: 1, 3, Robinson; 2, Swindells; 4, Jackson. Six members took part in the judging competition which was won by Mr. J. H. Woods. Vote of thanks was proposed to Messrs. Dooley and Turner for their services as judges. March 3, members were given a washing exhibition by Mr. Sam Cook, the well-known Nor. Fancier, who washed four birds, not before they wanted it. Mr. Cook answered various questions about the process. Mr. Robinson proposed a vote of thanks to Mr Cook.—J. Davey, hon. sec.

Twitterings.

We hear from Mr. C. Hunt, hon. sec., that the annual open show of the Doncaster C.B.S. has been fixed for Jan. 9.

We hear that Mr. H. J. Chick, Nottingham, will judge at Leicester Nov. 4, Nottingham Nov. 13, and Stoke-on-Trent Nov. 19.

I must compliment you on the sound advice given on front page of CAGE BIRDS, Mar. 14. —J. Steel (Queen's Park).

At Reading C.B.S. pair show, March 4, in Amat. Yorks. Class 1 won 1, 2, vhc, and sp. for most points, writes Sergt. A. Thomas.

Guisborough Priory C.B.S. has decided to hold its open show Oct. 17, writes Mr. Wm. Waraker, sec. Will secretaries and others, to avoid clashing, please note.

At a meeting of the Selkirkshire O.F.A., March 12, writes Mr. J. Robertson, sec., the date of annual open show was fixed for October 31.

We hear from Mr. J. G. Royce, hon. sec., that Messrs. T. Heath, W. Yardy and H. J. Chick will judge at the show of the Nottingham and Notts O.S., Nov. 13-14.

The open show of the Southampton C.B.S. has been fixed for Dec. 2 and 3, Mr. H. Norman judge, writes Mr. W. L. Page, hon. sec. Will secretaries in the south with dates not yet fixed kindly note to avoid clashing?

We have received manual of The North London C.B.A. for 1914. It is full of useful information, including list of fixtures, particulars of cups and trophies and members' names and addresses.

Mr. Bagnell has kindly consented to give our members a lecture on "Canary Breeding and Management," on March 28, at the Mail Coach Inn, writes Mr. J. Taylor, sec. Rotherham C.B.S. Fanciers and friends cordially invited.

We are holding a series of lectures, etc., monthly, writes Mr. Jas. Hulton, sec. Middleton C.B.S. The first is on the Norwich Plainhead Canary on March 30, by Mr. Sharples of Oldham. We shall be pleased to see other fanciers and friends among us.

I was very pleased to see my Marsh Troupial pictured on CAGE BIRDS front page, writes Miss A. B. Smyth. It is a most lifelike drawing and shows the character of the bird exceedingly well. It was 1st Palace, not 2nd.

Allow me to say how delighted I am with the coloured plate of Borders which appears in your "Hardy Annual" (excuse the joke, but I think it is quite in keeping). Every lover of the "Wee Gems" should not miss the opportunity of getting a copy of CAGE BIRDS 1914 Annual before it is too late.—Wm. Hornby (Leeds).

The Canary's Canine Friend.

A curious friendship has sprung up between two Canaries and a rough haired terrier belonging to Mr. J. Webber, Newcastle. The Canaries perch upon the dog and often peck it, but the animal takes it all in good part.

Progress at Inverness.

We have not paired up yet, as the weather keeps so cold, writes Mr. E. Harcombe (Inverness), but we are hoping, with good weather and the help of your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS, to have a successful breeding season.

Winners Change Hands.

I have sold my champion Goldfinch Bull finch Hybrid (The Monarch) for a big price to Mr. S. R. Oldham, of Manchester, also my champion winning Linnet to Dr. M. A. Wilson, of Pannal, near Harrogate, for a big price. I hope they will be successful with them.—T. H. Inman (Bradford).

My Canary.

Singing in his cage from morn till night,
Singing low and sweet, or loud and blithe,
He is the dearest of all birds to me,
My Canary.

He chirps soft love songs in a tender key,
Or crooneth lullabies when luring me
To slumber sweet in the pleasant noon;
But when I mad loud shrills a tune
To waken me.

E. G.

Champions Old and New.

A collection recently acquired by the Liverpool Museum, and now placed on exhibition, should prove of great interest not only to the local fancier, but to everyone owning a Canary or Mule. Here are shown some of the finest example of the graceful Yorkshire, the high coloured Norwich, and the compact Border birds of position, the Belgian and Scotch Fancy. The collection also contains some past champions of the local Fancy, the Liverpool Green Canary, and in the Hybrid section are birds that as local champions brought fame to their owners. A very interesting feature of the exhibition is the arrangement which illustrates the way in which special "fancies" have been produced by blending others, and that all the varieties have been originally bred by selection from the wild Canary. (Liverpool Evening Express.)

WHERE TO ADVERTISE.

"Please thank all those that answered my advert. in CAGE BIRDS. I had 11 replies on the day after paper came out, and they still keep coming every post. Wishing CAGE BIRDS the success it deserves."—J. KING (Grantham).

"Would you thank all those that answered my small advertisement last week. I got so many letters that I was unable to answer them all, but I have sent back all postal Orders. Birds were sold on the Saturday."—R. MACKENZIE (Kinghorn).

"I sold the whole of my Norwich to one fancier and have answered all letters with stamps enclosed. Others too numerous. My best thanks to them all for their response to my CAGE BIRDS advert."—H. GOODLAND (Bournemouth).

"I was told CAGE BIRDS was the best paper to advertise in by my cousin, Mr. Acton, Caversham, who is a fancier and a subscriber to your paper for I don't know how long."—ALICE WISE (Wanstead).

"Kindly thank through your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, all those who replied to my advert. re Roller Cock and Shutter Cage exchange. I have had offers from all parts of the United Kingdom, and have made a suitable exchange."—J. WATSON (Hexham).

"I thank you for introducing your Paper to me. I could have sold a dozen dogs through it, if I had them to dispose of, and I shall certainly use CAGE BIRDS whenever I have occasion as I consider it a very good medium, and your terms are MOST FAIR."—T. B. BROAD (Ilkeston).

"Cage Birds Annual" received, and I am highly pleased with it. Another feather in your cap. No fancier should be without one; it's well worth the money.—W. Connelly (Glasgow).

Your 40-page Palace Show number was a marvellously cheap twopennyworth. The coloured plate of the Goldfinch Bullfinch hybrid is exceedingly well executed, and is worthy a place in every fancier's room. Please accept my best wishes for the continued success of CAGE BIRDS, which is indispensable to the fancier.—J. B. Waterman (Dulwich).

Kindly accept my very best thanks for cheque, value £3 10s., prizes won under your Coupon Scheme at the Crystal Palace. I have been connected with, and an exhibitor of, Canaries for twenty-seven years, and I must say your Coupon Scheme has fairly topped anything previously attempted in the way of cash prizes, and the enterprise shown by CAGE BIRDS in offering such handsome cash prizes is sure to reap its reward. Independent of the three £10 10s. prizes, I think the twelve cash prizes of £3 each, or I should say £6 10s. in each class, established a record, which will be hard to beat. The very pretty hand-painted Diploma of Honour, which also arrived quite safely to-day, I am delighted with. It is most beautifully finished off, and quite a work of art, and I shall prize it very much indeed. Again thanking you, and wishing good old CAGE BIRDS the best of luck.—F. J. Green (Lowestoft).

East Ham C.B.S. Starting in Force.

I have much pleasure in submitting a few particulars of what the members of the East Ham C.B.S. are doing as regards breeding this year, writes Mr. F. Onslow, sec.:—Mrs. Ballard, 28 pairs Norwich and Yorks; Messrs. Parker, 30 to 40 Yorks; Farmer, 16 ditto; Pask and Webb, 30 Yorks and Mules; Potten, 28 Borders; Onslow, 10 ditto; Kybert, 8 Borders, Greens; H. R. Hammonds, 5 Borders, Cinnamons; Daw, 3 Borders; Stevens, 6 Borders, 12 Yorks; Bennett, 20 Yorks; Burrows, 7 Norwich; Wilkins and Son, 16 Yorks; Ferris, 8 Norwich; Wells, 3 ditto; Taylor, 12 ditto; Major, 10 ditto; Perry, 8 ditto; Fox, 20 Yorks; Baxter, 12 ditto. We have secured the Town Hall for annual show, Oct. 31, and several new members have joined since handbook was printed.

A Redpoll's Wonderful Record.

I was more than surprised when receiving my copy of CAGE BIRDS on Friday last, writes Mr. R. T. Campbell, Dunfermline, to see portrayed in life-like accuracy my winning Mealy Redpoll. As your footnote says, this bird has had a wonderful winning record during the last three years, and when we consider that he was competing along with those two wonderful Twites of Messrs. Sykes and McQuisten his wins were all the more creditable. Not until last Saturday at Bathgate was he ever led by another Mealy Redpoll, but he has stood second to either the one or the other of the aforementioned Twites at Palace 1913, Kirkcaldy 1912-13, Lochgelly 1912-13, Coaltown of Wemyss 1912-13, Bathgate, Buckhaven, Dysart, Kelty 1913. He stood first Dunfermline 1913-14, Dunfermline and Dis. 1911-12 (second in 1913), and Bowhill 1913. He has also carried a long list of specials, twice taking special for best British. I compliment your artist on his work, and wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

I am engaged to judge the Crest section at the Scottish National on Dec. 31, writes Mr. J. Brotherton.

Mr. J. Walsh, bird specialist, Blackburn, has been engaged to judge British and Hybrids at Cardiff open show, Nov. 18.

In Mr. Collingbourne's (East Sheen) advt. on page 276, in our last issue, the words "Winning Scarlet Madagascar won Palace" should read "Winning Scarlet Madagascar, win Palace."

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. Clempson, Hurley.

It is with regret that I have to write of the death of Mr. Jack Clempson, of Hurley, of Wells and Clempson, who passed away on March 17, after an illness of three weeks' duration, at 39 years of age. It is sad to think he has gone from amongst us, as Jack was ever to the fore where his hobby was at interest. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss. Fanciers' sympathy will go out to Mrs. Clempson in her bereavement, as no one who came into contact with her could help but admire her love for the birds, but now she will have to part with them. Fanciers will find the stock advertised in CAGE BIRDS. The funeral, which took place March 23, was attended by Mr. W. Wells, his partner, who is very much cut up, and has taken it very much to heart. Mr. J. H. Jones, sec., represented City of Birmingham Society; West Bromwich was represented by myself. I hope fanciers who require stock will write Mr. Wells; it will help the widow.—W. G. Andrews.

Mr. John Davison.

With the deepest regret, writes Mr. G. T. Lynn, sec. Dubmire Workmen's Club, I have to inform you of the death of Mr. John Davison, Free Gardeners' Arms, Colliery Row, Fence Houses, on March 15, at the age of 49 years. He was president of our C.B.S., also an expert judge, and he was much respected by all fanciers in the district. The members express their heartfelt sympathy with his wife in her sad bereavement.

SENSATIONAL RECOVERY OF MISSING NORWICH FROM GLASGOW SHOW.

This case was heard in the Sheriff's Court, Glasgow, Mar. 18. Mr. W. Hutchison, sec. of Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A., and of West of Scotland N. and B.F.C., M.B., and F.B.C., deponed that the former show was held Nov. 21st and 22nd, 1913. On the opening morning, about 8 o'clock, Mr. W. Griffiths, Springburn, Glasgow, offered his services, which were accepted. When the judge was making his awards it was discovered that one of Mr. D. Noble's birds was missing (a buff Norwich). A search was made for the bird, after which the case was found, inside of which was the voucher bearing the signature of the officials who had unpacked the box. The voucher was handed to his lordship, who examined it, and found it as stated. On the following Saturday, Mr. Noble paid a visit to the West of Scotland show, where he spotted his missing bird in the unflighted buff class. He therefore informed the secretary (the witness) that his missing buff cock was in the above class. Witness asked if there was any mark or marks by which he could identify the bird. The bird, it was stated, had been rung with a closed ring, but this had been removed, and the bird was lame as a result of tampering with the leg. The bird appeared a clear buff to the casual observer, but Mr. Noble explained that if the bird was handled and examined, a dark feather would be discovered on the shoulder. Witness then invited some of the Glasgow and Dist. committee, who were at the show, to attend at the examination of the bird, which was found to be marked exactly as Mr. Noble had said.

The detectives who had charge of the case also bore witness, and had Mr. Griffiths called in to make an explanation for himself, but as he had temporarily lost his voice, he could only answer by writing on paper. Mr. Griffiths' agent thought the mark mentioned as being on the bird would be a private mark, but Mr. Hutchison said it was a natural mark, and one which would be very hard to find similarly placed on another bird. Mr. Noble was then placed in the witness box, and stated that the bird in question was hatched in the month of May, 1913, and he rung it with a closed ring. It was shown at the City of Glasgow, where it was 3rd, and later, 2nd Kirkcaldy, 3rd Kelty, 1st Galashiels.

Councillor Gardener, Newtongrange, spoke to seeing the bird in Mr. Noble's house, and saw it with the ring on, and also the aforementioned mark on the shoulders of the bird when it was moulting; he was perfectly certain that the bird in question belonged to Mr. Noble. Mr. Noble's brother was then put into the witness box; he had examined the bird in court, and had not the slightest doubt that the bird was the property of his brother, because he had often told him that he did not care for it, as it was too long behind and a bit weak in head points. Mr. A. Chalmers, Kirkintilloch, said he had been a lifelong fancier; he had no trouble in recognising the bird, as he had judged it at the City Show, where he had awarded it 3rd, and was afterwards called in question for putting in a bird that was weak in head, but Mr. Chalmers maintained that it was good otherwise, and that one must allow a little. Mr. E. Barron stated that he and Mr. Matthew Craig had examined the bird very carefully under a glass, and found a mark on the leg just above the foot, which looked as if the ring had not been removed. Asked if he thought that the bird had been washed, he was certain that the bird had been washed, as Glasgow fanciers could not win unless they did wash. Mr. J. F. Park, president of the Glasgow and Dist., was next called into the witness box, and was being sworn, when Mr. Griffiths' agent asked leave to retire, that he might have a consultation with his client, and returning shortly afterwards, squashed the case, whereupon his lordship granted decree with expenses against defender, his agent asking that his client get plenty of time to pay up. Mr. D. Cook defended for Griffiths, while Mr. Strang, of Messrs. Miller and Strang, acted for Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A.

MODERN CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS FOR THE NOVICE.

By THOMAS LANE (Barnstaple).

SHE was not an old-age pensioner, but a bird of the current year. I took a nest from them; the hen hatched and reared two youngsters, a cock and a hen, both Plainheads. The hen was very dense in feather all over, but a bit short at the entrance; the young Plainhead cock was the better bird of the two. He had all the characteristics of a real good Crest-bred. His head feather was not only wonderfully dense, but well over the beak end. Unfortunately this bird hurt his hind claws, so I retained neither him nor the hen for breeding purposes, although, had he been all right I believe there would have been good possibilities in him.

The Feeding and Management.

The next step will be the feeding and general management of the birds. I am no faddist as concerns the feeding of my stock. I like the seed to be of the best quality procurable. Spanish seed should be short, full, and plump—not dull-looking. There should be something for the birds to eat, which there cannot be when the stuff is nearly all husk, as is the case with most of the cheap sorts. The German rape seed should be clean and bright, and of a reddish appearance, not blue-black and dull as many samples are. The hemp should be the best Dutch, and grey in appearance.

I may say that I am not a great advocate of hemp. This may be hard on the Dutchman, but I cannot help it. True, I use it during the breeding season, during the moult, and in very cold weather (my bird-room being a cold one), but in very small quantities. I find that many other breeders think with me that hemp seed does not agree with young Crests. They are all very fond of it though, and some feeding hens will not feed unless they have it ad lib. Linseed, maw seed, and niger or inga seed should look clean and bright, and be free from dust.

I make a practice every other day of blowing the seed husk from the hoppers, and twice a week I empty the latter of all seed and put into a sieve, which is made of perforated zinc, 12ins. by 8ins., nailed to a wooden frame 1½ins. deep. After thoroughly sifting the seed and getting rid of the dust, I blow away the husks that remain on top, returning the clean seed together with fresh to the hoppers after they have been cleaned out.

Rough on the Red Mite.

This is important if you wish to keep the red mite—that bug-bear of the fancier—in check. It is wonderful how they multiply if left to their own sweet will. In the hoppers they appear to be in the seventh heaven of delight! A very good plan is to wash your seed hopper in very hot water, to which has been added a few drops of Jeyes' fluid; this should be done every fortnight during the hot weather.

Do not forget to wash the perches as well. You will find that this will greatly reduce the pest. I should also mention that I sprinkle Keating's Insect Powder on the cage bottom, i.e., under the sand trays. I like all my cages to be fitted with sand-trays, as these can be drawn out and given a good scrub at the same time as the weekly wash. This is done by my wife, who takes the keenest interest in the birds, not only attending to their daily wants and hygiene, but also to their toilet for the shows. I say this, as credit should be given where it is due.

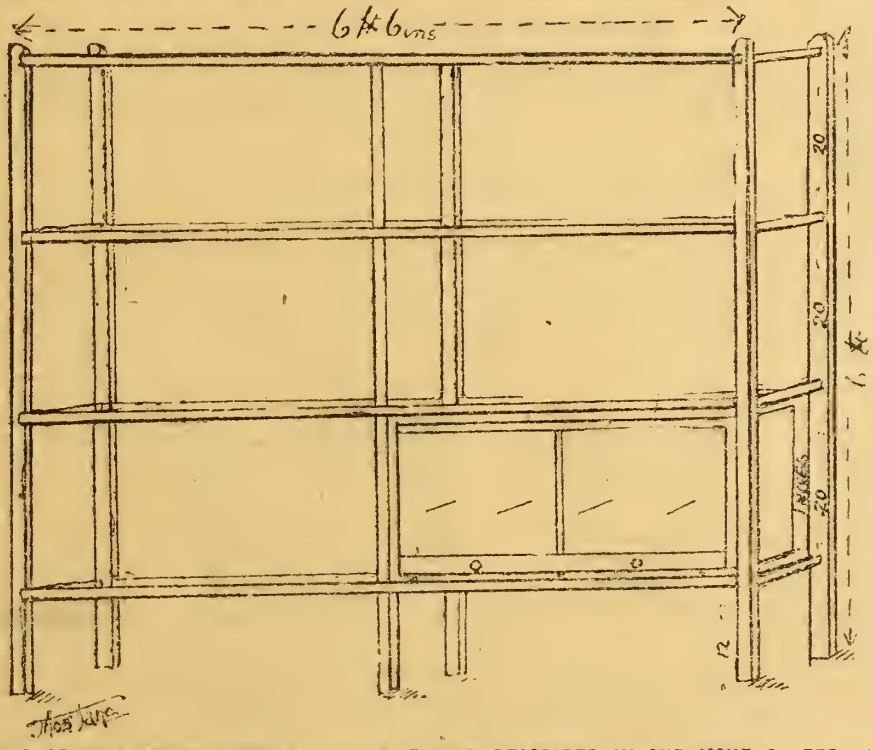
Keep the Drinkers Clean.

Another item which should not be forgotten is that of the drinkers. They should be washed out twice a week in hot water and soda, and be well rinsed. They should also be emptied and refilled every morning, and during the hot weather twice a day. This will repay you—if you doubt it, watch your birds and see. You should also make use of the bath. Hung up in the morning on a suitable day, it will do them good. I do not advise the use of the bath in the latter part of the day, as the birds have not time to get thoroughly dry before going to roost, and are liable to catch cold if their feathers are damp at roosting time.

Pairing the Birds.

In the beginning of February I take the hens from the flights and put them into the breeding cages, separating them from the cocks by a wooden slide. Towards the middle of March I withdraw the wood slide and replace it with an all-wire one. This will get them accustomed to one another, and will stop a great deal of the fighting which is likely to take place if this plan is not adopted.

In the meantime they should have been got into breeding condition, or what fanciers term, fed up. My method of feeding for this purpose is as follows. During the winter months I give my birds as a staple food the best Spanish canary seed, and twice a week mixed seed composed of rape, maw, linseed, groats, and a little hemp, if the weather be cold. These mixed seeds should always be given in a separate vessel, otherwise you will encourage your birds to scatter them all over the place in their endeavour to find the dainties they like best.



THE CAGE RACK RECOMMENDED BY MR. LANE, AND DESCRIBED IN OUR ISSUE OF FEB. 14.

Good and Bad Dandelion.

Twice weekly I give a piece of sweet apple, and once a week egg-food consisting of hard boiled egg and stale bread crumbs, or a little milk sop. In the beginning of March I give egg-food twice a week, and to the cocks young dandelion leaves, not forgetting just a pinch for the hens to make them "come to" as the saying is. The young dandelion leaves should be of the colour of lettuces, and should be picked from the middle of the hedgerows in back lanes away from the dust. Avoid dark, coarse leaves growing under walls; such leaves are rank and poisonous, and should not be used.

The Claws and Crest.

In the beginning of April I trim the bird's claws, to prevent egg puncture, and cut away vent feather to ensure coition, likewise cutting the crest close to the head. This allows the birds to see better. If the weather be favourable, and the birds are ready, I pull out the slide, after having noticed the cocks feeding the hens through the wires. The novice should be able to judge the right moment by the wing-flapping of the hens and shrill whistling of the cocks.

Why Some Norwich Plainhead Canary Breeders Fail.

A FEW "STRAIGHT TIPS" BY M. E. W. ALLSOPP (Cardiff).

HE tarries; with what result? During the time he has lingered in the House of Destruction we have succeeded, in too many instances, in deadening his perception, his moral tone has been impaired, and altogether the long rest and free indulgence in the good things provided have not fitted him for the real journey ahead. Only when he has been kicked over the fence to continue his journey does the pilgrim realise that it is a long and arduous one, and that sooner or later he must do battle with the giants. After a feeble endeavour to meet the real issues, he then with a sigh sinks into oblivion!

It must be patent to anyone in the Fancy that amongst the annual crop of novices there are many who are not fitted to do the journey. As far as we are concerned, they are the weeds: just the sort that the old breeder, in going through his stock, twists the necks of, with a contemptuous sniff, for coming along and disgracing his stock. Of course, we must not take such drastic measures with novices. As far as I can see, however, there is no reason why you should not tell them plainly, even brutally, that they have set out on no fool's errand, and that they must rely upon their own strength and ability to overcome all obstacles if they are to at last rest in the lap of the goddess who waits to caress the successful fancier.

Drastic, but Effective.

'Tis true that very few may reach the goal of their ambition, the rough wind encountered on the way blowing away a lot of dust, chaff and parasites. And, say I, a good job too, for instead of indulging in so much sickly sentiment and spending so much time, money and thought in trying to determine what should be mixed with the milk and water in the feeding bottle which is stuck into the mouths of a lot of sickly squalling novices, better by half be merciful and allow them to shift for themselves. Sweep away the whole machinery which professes to guard and help the novice, and what will happen? Well, you will have remaining a better and more solid fabric than is in evidence to-day; more solid bricks, held together with some really good solid mortar, a smaller edifice, it is true, but one in which you may put your trust.

It's Dogged that Does It.

How can the beginner measure his real position or strength, so long as he is content to remain in the novice section, where everything is much of a muchness? Contrast him with the novice who scorns the good things prepared for him, and who plods and plods, almost silently and unseen. With pride and care he tends his birds, each season marking some little progress, and should he dwell in or south of London, views with eagerness the day when he will test his strength in a small way, with Collings, of Devonport; Spillman and Gill, and Pethick and others of that ilk down Plymouth way; Baker, of Cowes; Houghton, of Gloucester; Redwood, of Newton Abbot; Hodder, of London; Rippon, of Chelmsford, and others worthy of his steel. He puts his strength against these stalwarts in due season, and upon each occasion something has been attempted and something done, even though his birds are still cardless. But some day these stalwarts must squeeze up and make room for another who is worthy to stand amongst them, one who has not turned to rest or imbibe at the Half Way House.

The Value of Roughing it.

I declare, after due deliberation, that the pampering of our novices has wrought much evil and mischief. Many promising beginners, those inclined to vacillate a little, have had false hopes raised, and I maintain that a frequent cause of non success is the fact that the beginner has failed to keep ever before him the fact that he has embarked upon a serious mission when he enters the Fancy with the idea of climbing. 'Tis far better to teach him as I have been taught, since I left my father's roof at 21, to go battle with life, and all it may hold, with nothing better than a trade to pursue, a tin trunk containing odds and ends representing my personal estate, a head always a wee bit smaller than my hat, but also full of odds and ends, with less than 20s. in my pocket and nothing in the bank, but enjoying a fair measure of health and strength. I can now review, after endeavouring for some few years to steer a fairly smooth course for myself, and, later for my wife and children, that Dame Fortune has both caressed and kicked me. Needless to say I have much appreciated the caresses, and can do with some more any time she is passing. Regarding the kicks, well, to be candid about it, though I still have a tender spot or so, I am nevertheless grateful for those she has administered, for have they not been the kicks of actual experience, which are freely dealt out for our ultimate good. Yet we wrap the miserable carcases of our novices in cotton wool. They are so precious, and difficult to rear, a little bump might break them! When I read the various reports, setting forth what is going to be done for the novice, I always feel that I should like to bag every committee sitting in solemn conclave, and arraign them before some fearful tribunal for being found upon the premises conspiring with evil intent. Just what the sentence ought to be when found guilty I cannot say, other than that it should be short and merciful.

The Best will Reach the Top.

Remember, I refer to this matter in a broad sense. I do not desire to wound the feelings of anyone. I readily agree that there are some fanciers who have climbed to success even by way of novice classes, and could mention the names of several, but let us have no ambiguity, for I say, "Yes, and the same fanciers would still have climbed to the top without novice classes!" They tarried no longer than they could help, glad to shake off the attractions held out and proceed upon their journey, which, to them, has only one end, that of success.

You may fling at me mountains of eloquent forceful language in defence of the novice, and I will retaliate by hurling at you one by one the names of the stalwarts of the breed who have scorned to enter the Half-Way House, and who, if about to set out again in the Fancy, would still scorn to do so. Remember, what they have accomplished you also may do, and perhaps better. These are irrefutable statements which I will bang on the counter because they cannot fail me. They have the genuine ring and are not spurious. No mercy have I for the weed, the parasite, he who dreads his entry into open competition, and who has only a lust for what he can grab easily; he who toils not nor spins.

In this way I could continue, but enough! Suffice it to say that whilst there is nothing I would not do within my power to render some little help if needed to the genuine novice, whom it is a pleasure to help, on the other hand for the weed I have nothing better than a good honest pair of winter boots, which I can guarantee possess other qualities than those the makers put forth, and which I should like to put to the test. If one of the milk-and-water breed of novices will only come forth, I am sure I could put into one hearty kick the pent-up feelings that I have had bottled up for years regarding this burning question, and which would ensure at least one black sheep being cast either into outer darkness, or landed bang amongst those champions he fears, who would perhaps mercifully finish him.

BIRD-ROOM APPLIANCES EXPLAINED.

By H. NORMAN (Carshalton).

FIGS. 17 and 18 show two types of egg-drawers, one of which, as everyone knows, should be fitted to all breeding cages, and, in the case of double and three-compartment cages, one to each compartment. The form of drawer is much a matter of individual choice; they are all useful, but in selecting one should see that the interior corners are nicely rounded, which facilitates the cleaning, and there is then much less likelihood of a small quantity of egg-food being left behind to become unfit for food, and quickly to contaminate the remainder.

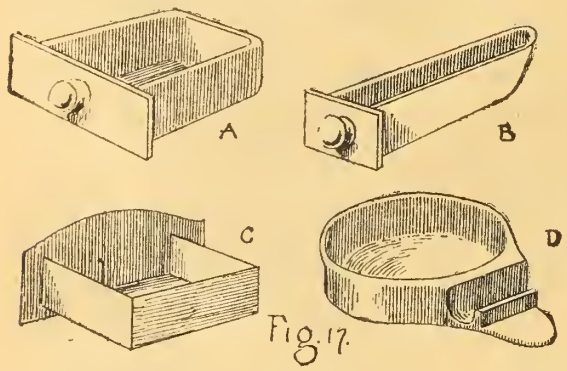

Fig. 17.

When I first took up the breeding of Canaries the only receptacle obtainable for giving the birds egg-food was one made entirely of tin or zinc, as depicted at C, Fig. 17. In the use of this, one required to be very careful; cleanliness was a matter of necessity or the young died off like flies. What with bad cages and worse fittings, the hobby in those days was carried on in a way that needed hard work and careful management to reap a modicum of success. Now it is otherwise, everything is made in the best possible manner, with thought for the welfare of the birds, and saving of labour to the Fancier.

Fig. 17A shows the form of glazed pan mostly in use, the best of them are beautifully made and glazed and fit for any purpose; they are usually fitted to the front part of the cage, a slot being cut in the woodwork for their reception; one should see that they fit nicely, are interchangable with others, and are easily removed, so that the brooding hen is not disturbed when giving her fresh food.

B is quite a small affair, and is mostly used for a single bird, either for giving just a little food or a pinch of choice seed. D and the one depicted at Fig. 18A are pans constructed on the same principle, but of different shapes. To make use of these one does not need a slot in the front of the cage, the door is slightly raised and the pan put in place, the door is then allowed to fall into the slot shown in the drawing, and this keeps the pan rigid and prevents it falling either into the cage or upon the floor of the bird room. Fig. 18B is a small oblong dish often used in flights or single bird cages, it is made in the same material, and those of the best quality are nicely rounded inside.

A group of nest pans is depicted in Fig. 19. Although to all appearance anything is good enough for a Canary to rest in, it is not so if one wishes to get the best possible results, and when dealing with high-class stock we must not neglect any matter that is likely to increase our success.

During the last year or two a nest pan has found its way upon the market something after the style of the one at Fig. 19A, but somewhat less wide at the rim. I consider this pan too deep and narrow for general use. Until the young ones are nearly ready to leave the nest they are unable to reach over the top, and the excrement falls back into the nest, thus fouling it, and if dirt is allowed to accumulate it will soon prevent the brood making progress, and possibly be the cause of the hen refusing to feed, so that in using too deep a nest pan one runs the risk of losing a valuable lot of birds.

If these deep nests are used they should be well packed with building material so as to raise the clutch halfway up the interior, and even then it would be as well to change the young ones to a more shallow pan as at B. when a few days old. The shallow pans have another advantage, that is, hens are less liable to sweat the young, which by a slight effort can put their heads out from under her and thus admit fresh air.

These two types of pans are generally hung up at the back of the cage by means of a wire hanger, mostly sold with them. One should see that these hangers are constructed of good stout wire to ensure firmness. The nest pan C needs no such contrivance as it is made to hang upon an ordinary nail. These pans are made rather deep, with ventilation holes in the bottom.

The old wooden nest boxes are still in use, some fanciers preferring them, especially for the early nests, as they consider them warmer than the terra cotta ones. Boxes similar to the one depicted at D can be purchased at most up-to-date dealers, the bottom is covered with perforated zinc and is somewhat smaller than the top. They are certainly very warm, as the birds usually carry a considerable quantity of building material into them for lining the interior. Unfortunately insects breed very rapidly in them.

Our list of nest arrangements would hardly be complete if we did not mention those made of wire and other materials mostly used by Roller Canary fanciers. Ordinary fanciers seldom make use of any of these, although the one of a similar shape to B, Fig. 20, but generally made entirely of wood, was at one time in use by breeders of Scotch Fancies in the North. This wire nest is now fixed to some of the all-wire cages of German construction, and finds favour with some on account of its freedom from red mite. The wire nest, shown at A, Fig. 20, can be hung at any part of the cage, and if a little nesting material or felt lining is placed in it the birds take to it quite naturally.

Following on the nest pans come the receptacles for holding the nesting material (Fig. 21). These are not absolutely indispensable but give a neatness to the arrangements in a room and prevent litter. One, it will be seen, is constructed entirely of wire, and the other of wire and metal combined. They are used not only for nesting material but are useful for holding green-food in the summer months, and apple during the winter. They are made to hang on the outside of the front of the cage, and are then easily filled by the attendant.

DRY HEAT FOR AILING BIRDS.

I MUST mention that my friend, Mr. H. Gray, M.R.C.V.S., has several times advised dry heat in the post-mortem reports in "Bird Notes," especially as a remedy for egg-binding, and I think he is the first to have done so in the public Press. He kindly permits me to quote him here.

"The cause of death was the so-called egg-binding (this closely resembles the uterine inertia of mammals), which is very common during the chilly, but not intensely cold, weather. When it occurs, place the bird in a metal cage, which should be covered with a piece of flannel, so that the bird can get a little air, and place it in immediate contact with a hot-water radiator, or even a boiler. If the bird is not too far gone before this is adopted, it generally relieves the creature, if not of the egg, of its suffering. I have left birds at night time in contact with the radiator, quite expecting to find them dead in the morning, but to my surprise found them all right, quite lively on the perch. In a few instances, although the bird seemed relieved of its suffering, it has not passed its egg until two or three days later. The so-called egg-binding is due to a muscular spasm of the oviduct, and not to the egg itself; the so-called lack of lime in the food plays no part in its causation. The usual method of steaming acts not by the moisture, but by the heat given off by the water. The normal temperature of birds being usually very high (106-110 degrees Fahr.) is the reason they can stand a very high artificial temperature. The smaller the birds, the higher the temperature, e.g., Swallow 112 degrees Fahr.; some water birds have a temperature as low as 100-102 degrees Fahr.; the Ostrich's temperature is 98 degrees Fahr. I have seen birds collapsed by the cold when first put out in the aviary, recover entirely after being wrapped in flannel and placed in the oven with the door left open."

Nearly the whole of the above appeared in "Bird Notes" for March, 1912, and I am much indebted to Mr. Gray for allowing me to quote.

Nestlings, Food & Feeders

I HAVE noticed that many breeders discontinue the egg food at too early a stage, and in types in which size is a desideratum I am sure this too sudden deprivation acts as a check on development, indeed, a similar method is adopted to stunt the growth of certain species of fowls and dogs in which lack of size is essential. As a green food I find the best results with tender dandelion leaves, but entirely discard these whenever the ripe seed heads of that plant are procurable, which I supply ad lib., and which I know to contain a large amount of nutriment in a very assimilative form, inasmuch as I have noticed that the first broods of the Greenfinch are reared almost exclusively on these, and I have repeatedly substituted Canaries and had them reared by the Finches.

In preparing the egg food care should be taken to thoroughly mix the crushed biscuit and egg, and I am indebted to Mr. Grewar, of Lochgelly, for explaining the best method of incorporating the materials in a manner which ensures its entire consumption, as most hens have a habit of picking out all the particles of egg and leaving the remainder. Mr. Grewar uses sponge biscuits, and by the careful use of a wooden pestle makes one of the finest samples of food I have seen; the light rubbing of the ingredients being entirely preventive of the stodginess which prevails in some samples I have seen.

I never deprive weaning youngsters of a continual supply of fresh water, but on the least sign of softness I isolate the affected bird and by observation of droppings and colour of abdomen endeavour to diagnose its trouble. If undue relaxation (scour) is evident I supply scalded milk sop, or egg food made sloppy by the addition of milk of magnesia.

Wild Seeds Good for Nestlings.

This latter I have found to be a valuable agent for digestive troubles in both Canaries and British birds when the droppings have been indicative of over-relaxation, but its use must be avoided when the opposite symptoms are evident, a slight addition of Glauber's salts to the drinking water, and a few drops of salad oil in the egg food, being much preferable to the old-fashioned method of administering castor oil direct.

I supply nestlings with plenty of ripe mouse-ear, and very rarely lose any at the weaning stage; last season I only lost one. The good properties of that plant are fast becoming recognised among Canary breeders here, and though it bears a close resemblance to chickweed (which I only use when in the seeding stage) it differs entirely in its effect, and does not decompose however long left in the cage, the foliage is never eaten. Shepherds' purse in the ripe state I give freely, but avoid supplying this while wet. Salads I avoid, except at the beginning of the breeding season, when, as I have stated, a tender leaf of dandelion or spray of watercress is supplied occasionally to the parent birds, slightly increasing the supply of the former to any bird which is back in breeding condition, the active principle in that plant (Taraxacum) having a stimulative effect.

I will conclude with this advice to the novice. Despite all I have said to-night, and all you may hear or read about systems of feeding, if you have a fair measure of success with the method you at present practise, stick to it, and if you would maintain any good feeding qualities your stock is possessed of, to say nothing of that quality which has no place in the class breeder's lexicon, stamina, there is only one method, elimination of the undesirables or unfit; metaphorically, the Jack Hammer.

A Noted Fancier of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries Interviewed.

THE hens, like the Norwich, were in flight cages, and of that stylish order indispensable for really satisfactory production. The yellows were absolutely superb—the buffs the most charming damsels you ever set eyes on. Space precludes further eulogy of the characteristics of these bonny birds, but it may be taken for granted that they were "all there"—captivating in the extreme, and exhibiting all the traits of good breeding.

Pairing Up.

"Yes," said Mr Barnes, "pairing up is by far the most important item. Success or the reverse depends entirely on how this is done. The matter is not as a rule thought out as it should be. Haphazard mating is disastrous. No matter what variety is gone in for the breeder should be quite clear in his mind as to what he wishes to produce. He should have the idea fixed in his eye. Old breeders know what they are aiming for, but the beginner is often somewhat in a mist. Now to the 'raw recruits' of the Fancy my advice is, whether it concerns Yorkshires or Norwich, study the standards set up by the Yorkshire Union and Norwich Specialist Clubs and endeavour to produce stock as near to them as possible."

The reason I say "near to" is that no bird is perfect, it may be almost so, but there is always some deficiency that a critical eye can detect. Type, quality, colour, substance, and carriage, must receive your keen attention at all times. Competition on the show bench was never so strenuous as it is at present, so don't leave anything to chance.

Instances: Should your cock bird fail in head character, pair up to a good bold headed hen, or if he fails in colour to a rich coloured mate, or if he is not the best of type, put to a hen excelling in this respect, or if too free in feather pair to a very close feathered partner, and so forth right along the line. Never breed with birds that are not sound; no matter how good they once were, discard them. For satisfactory attainments health must be in evidence.

Being in the company of a fancier as reliable as Mr. Barnes undoubtedly is, I suggested that a few tips for the benefit of young readers of CAGE BIRDS might prove very acceptable. Mr. Barnes expressed himself very willing to accede to my request, and detailed a number of hints relative to breeding, which he has accumulated in his many years of experience as exhibitor and judge.

Some Questions and Answers.

What age do you prefer your birds?—Mr. Barnes replied: The cock the older of the two, say a two-year-old cock with a one-year-old hen.

From which do you consider the best results accrue?—Yellow cock with buff hen or vice versa.

For size of progeny?—Buff cock with yellow hen. For quality?—Yellow cock with buff hen.

How do you get colour and quality of feather?—By judicious pairing. Selecting year after year, your best feathered stuff, and putting same together you will eventually fix this very desirable item of quality. Colour is got by using dark-blooded birds, green is the fountain head of colour. On many occasions I have won trophies for hottest fed, and most have been with marked specimens, hence my contention.

What do you consider the hardest point to obtain in a Norwich?—Undoubtedly the head, without which a bird is no use whatever as regards shows.

What about the Yorkshires?—Well, position; a bird should be straight. Many are apt to drop tail.

What are the great faults with the Norwich-Yorks?—In the former small heads, long bodies, and hook tails; in the latter snaky heads, thin necks, and frill breasts.

How many nests do you take; and why?—Generally two, because when more nests are run, your birds are apt to lose stamina and substance.

Do you recommend one cock with two hens? No, best run one cock with one hen. My candid opinion is that you retain size better than by having two hens with one cock.

Do you allow your cocks to feed the young?—Certainly, if they behave and don't molest either the hen or young. Two feeders are better than one.

What seed do you use? Best Spanish Canary as a staple diet, with mixed seed (three parts canary, 1 part hemp, half part German summer rape, half part maw seed) twice a week, given in a separate vessel.

What method do you adopt for feeding purposes?—Egg and bread crumbs, with a little maw seed added. Give twice or three times a day. Eggs to be boiled for 15 minutes. Allow to get cold, then chop up fine and add twice as much bread crumbs (bread two days old or more).

As to green food?—Dandelion or watercress. Both are good. I advise readers not to give any green food until the young are a matter of three days old. If given earlier it often does mischief.

When do you put birds together for breeding?—There should be no hard or fast rule. I mostly let the weather guide me. Approximately the last week in March.

As regards colour feeding, do you use tasteless pepper only?—No. I add 2oz. of hot Natal to each pound of tasteless.

In exhibiting, what mistakes do you consider the main ones a novice makes?—They vary. Some show Norwich with small heads, others birds too long in barrel, others stage birds too free in feather. In Yorkshires thin necks and bad position are very prominent failings. Again, some put down birds in poor form, often soiled in plumage, or staged in untidy cages, and so forth.

What do you consider the chief requirements to ensure healthy stock?—Cleanliness throughout; clean water every day; gritty sand, sweet and bold seed; plenty of fresh air and light; and a well ventilated birdroom.

Time was getting short, so I had to bid "Good-bye" to Mr. Barnes, after having spent a most enjoyable visit. I had many pleasant impressions to think over upon the return journey. One of the best private collections of Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires that I have ever seen grouped together provided ample evidence that close study had been given by Mr. Barnes to his subject, and that his success had been achieved only by judicious breeding.

CANARY BREEDING AND MANAGEMENT.

Lecture by Mr. Barker Clegg to the members of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.

ON March 16 about 50 members and friends of the above society heard a very interesting and instructive lecture. The following are a few of the points on which Mr. Clegg spoke. On commencing the hobby of bird keeping the bird-room, he said, is one of the first things to be considered. Of course, every fancier cannot arrange to have the ideal room, but it is best to try to have good light and ventilation, and the room should be as dry as possible and free from draughts. Cleanliness is of the utmost importance, both in cages and room. All cages should be cleaned out at least once a week, and plenty of clean sand and grit supplied. The number of birds to be kept should be in accordance with the size of room, and the amount of time the fancier can devote to them. Overcrowding is a great mistake, and is detrimental to the health of stock. In purchasing birds, the lecturer advised the beginner to buy best his means would allow. In all varieties it is best to have size and colour on the cock's side, and type and quality in the hen, and to have both birds as near to the standard model as possible. There has been much said and written as to when is the proper time to pair Canaries for breeding. The lecturer advised fanciers to watch their stock and to pair birds when ready, which can be easily judged by their actions. The cocks should be in vigorous song, and the hens jumping from perch to perch, flapping their wings and calling to the cocks. If the bird-room is situated over a kitchen and the temperature does not fall below 55 degrees breeding can be commenced any time after the middle of February. In colder rooms the birds will be later in coming into condition. In the Lizard variety early breeding is advisable, so as to have the young through the moult in time for the early shows. In pairing strange birds it is best to place same in a double breeding cage separated by a wire partition to prevent fighting and feather pulling. The lecturer stated that the best results were to be obtained from pairs that mated of their own free will, and advised keeping birds that are intended to be paired in sight of each other for some time previous to the breeding season. In cases of egg-binding the most effective remedy is to oil the vent with castor oil. In bad cases, and when the hen is otherwise healthy, the best way to save the hen is to oil the vent, and insert the round end of a hairpin, thereby breaking the egg, which the hen should have no difficulty in passing. A good way to prevent egg-binding is to keep a piece of mutton suet in the cage wires for hens to peck at. Green food should also be supplied to keep the birds in good condition. When young are hatched a watch must be kept to see that none of them get pulled out of nest, and also that they are being fed. In cases of poor feeding hens add a pinch of salt to the egg-food and water and keep a piece of rock salt in cage for hen to peck at. The young should be separated from parents as early as possible after leaving the nest, either with wire slide or by placing in a nursery cage so as to prevent feather pulling. If any youngsters show signs of going thick and puffy add a few drops of tincture of rhubarb to the drinking water and give one drop of Fellow's syrup direct into the beak. All young should be supplied with milk sop after leaving the hen, in addition to the usual egg food. The moult is the most critical time in a bird's life, and should start soon after the middle of July, according to the age and health of the bird. Birds should be kept quiet and comfortable to ensure a quick moult. In colour feeding the lecturer recommended using 2ozs. of hot Natal pepper to each pound of tasteless feed, this, he considered, helped to fasten the colour. To intensify the colour in the dark feathered varieties 2ozs. of Madder and ¼lb. of Turmeric may be added to each pound of colour food. Make the food as palatable as possible, so that the birds will eat freely of it. To assist the moult moisten the colour food with a few drops of the following tonic: Take 2d. worth saffron, 2d. worth cochineal, pour boiling water on same. When cool add ½oz. spirit of nitre, ½oz. tincture of capsicum, ½lb. honey and one gill rum and water to make up to three pints. In place of this tonic a piece of sulphate of iron the size of a pea may be placed in drinking pot. To get the best results in colour feeding the strong light should be kept shaded from the birds either by means of a blind or sheeting down the cages.

At the close of the lecture a number of questions were put to Mr. Clegg which he answered in a very masterly way, and a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Clegg brought to a close a very interesting evening.—F. Hayward, Hon. Sec.

A Seed Box that Prevents Waste.

Sir,—In his interesting article on bird-room appliances, Mr. Norman, describing seed boxes, mentions the fact that there is usually a waste of seed, and that he knows of no one offering seed boxes which prevent seed wasting. I would just like to call his attention and also readers of the article, to the fact that I am offering through your advertising columns a glass-fronted metal seed box which has this advantage. The arrangement is very simple, and does not add to the cost, while experience has proved it to be effective.

J. PITCHFORD.

P.S.—I enclose a sample; also one of my new wire hangers for earthenware nest pans, made of unrustable wire, no soldered joints to come loose.

Birds Shelling their Seed.

Sir,—I think none of the answers referring to the above gives a cure for the habit. It is not a case of birds being mischievous, but of there being something wrong, probably some bowel trouble. If I find any of my birds shelling their seed without eating it, I treat them as follows: Give them scalded bread and milk with a pinch of maw seed on it, and four drops of Friar's Balsam in the drinking water for a week; the following week six drops of tincture of gentian in the drinking water.

BUFF GREEN.

Very Early Greenfinch Mules.

Sir,—From a cock Greenfinch and a hen Canary I have already had two nests this year. The first brood were a week old when the Greenfinch pulled them out of the nest, and I lost them. The second clutch hatched to-day, March 17. Has anyone else bred Mules so early in the season? The Greenfinch was caught only this winter, and this makes the early breeding still more extraordinary. I shall take more care of the young this time, and shall part the Greenfinch from them.

The Artificial Improvement of British Birds at Shows.

Sir,—The show season being past, I think there are many subjects which might be profitably discussed in the columns of your popular paper, CAGE BIRDS. I am what might be termed an all-round fancier, but British birds are my favourites. I never miss an opportunity of visiting a show, and, of course, the British classes receive most of my attention. But I regret to observe that in this section the artists are increasing in numbers. The most glaring cases that I have noticed have been in Linnets, Siskins, Redpolls and Brambles, and the greatest number seen at any one show was at Bathgate, Feb. 23. Fanciers in Scotland like to see a Linnet with what is termed a solid front, and Siskins and Redpolls with big black bibs. Such birds were present in numbers at Bathgate, but evidently the judges failed to appreciate the artistic merits of most of them, which probably accounts for your reporter's remark that some grand birds were left cardless. The judges perhaps judged the birds on their merits as they appeared to them at the time of judging, and not according to the number of prizes they may have won previously, which is far too often done. I may here relate a rather amusing incident which occurred this last show season. A fancier sent a Siskin to a certain show, and on his arrival found that his bird was cardless. He asked the judge the reason. The judge promptly replied that the bird had an artificial bib, to which the exhibitor retorted, "Why! that's the same bird and the same bib which in your report of — show you said was the best bibbed bird in class, and should have won." The question arises, what is the cause of this regrettable state of affairs, and what the remedy for it? Is not this continual praising of solid fronts and big bibs, and condemnation by reporters of birds which fail slightly in those points, the principal cause of fanciers supplying the solid front and big bib which are so sternly demanded? Woe betide the judge who has the audacity to place a Linnet, minus the indispensable solid breast, or a Siskin lacking the monstrous bib. He is sure to be brought to book the following week. But what is the remedy? Some may say judges should disqualify instead of simply passing such birds. Perhaps they should, but the experience of some who have tried it has not been very encouraging. I know of one judge who disqualified some birds (not British) years ago, and he is still being boycotted by the owner of the birds and his friends. I know of another case where an exhibitor lodged an objection against another exhibitor's birds. The objection was upheld, and for his pains that exhibitor has been persecuted by the owner of the birds, and his associates, ever since. I am not a disappointed exhibitor, for I have been very successful in my time, but have done no exhibiting for some considerable time, although I am as keenly interested as ever.

The Goldfinch Class at Bathgate

Sir,—In CAGE BIRDS, March 21, a correspondent writing over the signature of "Steel" states that a number of fanciers have asked him why No. 6 Goldfinch at Bathgate was cardless. Strange to relate, quite a number have asked me why "Steel" or his friends should ask such a question, when with very little trouble they could have found out that No. 6 was vhe, and not cardless. But why ask "Steel"? Was he by any chance the reporter? He says £9 9s. has been refused for this bird, which may be true. I know a fancier who refused £10 for a bird and afterwards was glad to get 15s. for it. The first prize Goldfinch at the recent Palace show was catalogued at £6 10s., and a Goldfinch in the same class, winner of 28 first prizes, was cardless, although 16 cards were awarded. The friends of the owner did not rush to the Press with all manner of complaints, they are sportsmen, and can accord fair play to a judge, conduct in striking contrast to that of some would-be judges and infallible critics. "Steel" says No. 6 has been under 17 judges and only once beaten. I question this statement, and challenge him to prove it by giving a list of shows, dates, and judges' names. When he proves it I will send to the Editor cash equal to the first prize, to be sent to the owner of the bird. Here is a chance for "Steel" to benefit himself and his friend. I will go further, and allow him the choice of the whole class to find a bird that has accomplished the feat mentioned whilst in the possession of its present owner.

STEELYARD.

The Goldfinch mentioned was very soft and out of condition at the Palace Show (vide our report).—Editor.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

GOING BLIND (Old Joe).—Keep the bird in a comfortable place, free from dust and irritating fumes, and throw a light muslin cover over the cage just to tone down the light a little, but do not make cage too dark for the comfort of the bird, and see that the cage and perches are kept as clean as possible. Then infuse six or eight camomile flowers for half an hour in a teacupful of boiling water, strain off the clear liquid, add thirty drops of tincture of opium, and bathe the eyes with this for a few minutes morning and evening. Use a little fresh liquid and a fresh dossil of wool each time, and burn them after use. If the eyes are not considerably better in a week or so, write again, and say whether any whitish specks are to be seen in the centres of the eyes.

A POSER (J. H.).—Really, your question is quite too vague for me to give you any definite advice. You should have said how long the sore has been there, whether it was the result of an accident or not, and described its appearance as nearly as you could, and also have said whether the bird appeared otherwise in good health. You had better write again and give these particulars. Meantime add a small pinch of sulphate of soda to the water for three or four days, and anoint the sore daily with boracic ointment, being careful not to daub the plumage unnecessarily.

ONLY TWO CHANGES (Inexperienced).—Possibly the bird may not have a great number of changes, but at this season you can hardly expect a Roller to be at its best for quality of song, especially when it is in high breeding condition, as your bird appears to be. If you do not wish to breed with the bird your best plan to keep its song at its best as long as possible would be to keep it in a song-box during the next few weeks, and close the door for, say, a week at a time, more or less, according to the excitement, and loudness of song, of the bird. There is very little room to mend your dietary. Give a staple of equal parts good summer rape and canary, and for the rest go on feeding the same as advised in the Nutshell booklet on "The Roller." Give a spray of watercress, or fresh crisp chickweed or groundsel, daily. If the bird has really only two changes it is exceedingly doubtful whether you could increase them now the bird has its song fixed, and in any case you could only do so by keeping it in the company of a bird singing other tours.

FOUND WANTING (Thrush).—It is a pity you did not get another suitable mate for the hen when she began to build her nest, as by that means you might have saved the clutch being unfertile. The chances are all against these eggs producing a single chick. Still, I advise you to let the hen sit on them for her full time, and thereby prevent her coming into too forward condition again before the cock is in sufficiently good condition to play his part successfully in the next round. It will probably be the second week in April before the cock will be in this condition. When the hen has begun to sit, cage the cock by himself for a fortnight, give a small teaspoonful of soft food every second day, a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle on the alternate days, and two leaves of dandelion daily. In the water give six drops of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of steel every second day for one week.

FIRST ROUND CLEAR (A. G., Bristol).—Whatever may have been the cause of your failure last season, you can set down the cause of this clutch of eggs being infertile to mating too early, and before the birds were ready for mating. You need not separate them now, but treat them as advised to "Thrush," in this issue, until the hen has gone to nest again. But you will, of course, only give the gentian, etc., in the water for the first week. I suspect your management is at fault generally, so the best advice I can give you is to get our Manager to send you a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free for 7d., and adhere strictly to the advice you will find therein during the coming season, as it is impossible to go into full details here. The sample of seed you sent is totally unfit to form a staple diet for Canaries. The hemp it contains is not fit for use at all, otherwise it would make a tolerable mixture for occasional use as a tit-bit.

IS HE FIT? (C., Bosworth).—If the bird is in good vigorous health and active there is no reason whatever why it should not be quite fit for breeding with this season. I suppose you are doubtful whether it is too old at five years old; if this is so, then it certainly is not. See if its claws are much overgrown or not, and if they are trim them back to a proper length before mating it.

STOPPED SINGING (W.B.).—Certainly the bird's age, only three years, is not necessarily the cause of its loss of song. The moult is a much more likely cause. See that the bird is kept in a comfortable and healthy place free from cold draughts or extreme and rapid fluctuations of heat and cold, and treat it for two or three weeks the same as advised to "Thrush," in this issue, which should suffice to put the bird right once more.

SCRATCHES HIMSELF (Tilly).—(1) Your friends are wrong in telling you the birds are now moulting, only those in an abnormal condition are moulting at the time of the year. The proper moulting season is the autumn. If the bird is dropping feathers you are probably keeping it in a position where it is exposed to cold draughts, extremes of heat and cold or fumes from burning lights. Remedy these things, keep the bird in a comfortable place, not overheated, but fairly equable, and in addition to the staple seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. In the water give 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day during the same time. You can easily discover if lice are the cause by catching the bird and holding it in the hand a few moments, when the lice will soon be seen running about on your hand. In this case add a little quassia essence to the bath each time for a week or two. Examine the cage itself for red mites, and if any are found, touch the ends of the perches, joints of doors, etc., with the quassia essence three times a week for a time. (2) The overgrown claws are strong evidence circumstantial, at least that the bird saw the light long before last season. Anyway, it is not too young to trim them back to a proper length. You will find details for doing so in this column quite recently. (3) For a cheap book on general treatment of Canaries you cannot do better than get our Manager to send you "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free. For a more comprehensive work, "Our Canaries," of which you may see a full page advertisement most weeks in this paper. Sorry, I cannot tell whether this work is in your public library. Why not enquire?

HEN IGNORES NEST (E. G. S.).—As you made the nest for the hen I take it that she would not perform this domestic duty for herself, or is it possible that you interfere with her arrangements too much for her liking? When you have put a pair of birds together for breeding you should avoid all interference except what becomes absolutely unavoidable. You can do nothing whatever to make a hen sit against her will. The only way out when a hen refuses to sit is to give the eggs to some other hen that is just beginning to sit, for her to hatch and rear. But in a case such as this, where a hen ignores the nest whilst laying, she will frequently come into a more reasonable frame of mind as soon as she has laid her full clutch of eggs. The broodiness begins to develop strongly about the evening of the day the third egg is laid, so that if you make a comfortable nest and replace the eggs in it on the evening of third day, you will find in the vast majority of cases that the hen will take to it, and settle down to incubation quite naturally.

DOUBTFUL GENDER (H. C.).—It is certainly possible for a hen to sing as well as you describe. Some rare exceptions closely rival cocks in this respect. At the same time I should rather suspect the bird was a cock, but it is quite impossible to be dogmatic on the point without so much as seeing the bird. At this season you might form a tolerably sure opinion by examining the vent, and comparing it with that of a known hen, preferably of last season. If a cock the vent will be found rather more protuberant and pointed compared with the hen, which is flatter, and more on a level with the line of the abdomen.

STRANGE BEHAVIOUR (R. P.).—I am strongly inclined to think that the peculiar behaviour of the bird is simply due to it being in high breeding condition, and when it partakes of soft-food, or any special delicacy, it calls a real or imaginary mate to share the dainty with him. Does not he sometimes regurgitate half digested food and dab about the wires, perch, or his feet? Give a spray of watercress daily, and give very little sort food or mixed seed for a fortnight, and during the first week dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda in the water every second day. If this does not set things quite right, please write again. Glad to hear the last advice was quite successful.

A DOUBTFUL PAIR (B. C. P.).—It is quite possible for the clear buff to be a cock, and if you got them from a respectable dealer I think this will prove to be the case. Its silence may be due to several causes. At least, one thing is certain, that it was far from being in breeding condition when you mated it. Also the hen's abnormal laying points to her being out of condition. The fact is, you owe this failure to mating the birds too soon, and before they were in breeding condition. Separate them, and feed them up as advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," for backward birds, and do not put them together again until both are full of life and energy, even if it runs into the second week in April. (2) The turned claw, as shown on your sketch, will make practically no difference whatever to the bird breeding successfully.

SEED SAMPLES (Blanc).—The Canary is a trifle small, but is very clean, sweet, and of very good quality. Judging from this sample, the bulk would seem to contain a perceptible proportion of linseed, rape, and a sprinkling of millet. The summer rape is a very poor sample, and is not fit to feed high-class contest singers. I suspect the bulk is infested with seed mites.

COCK OFF SONG (Riverside).—(1) Yes, if the birds hatched last June are strong and healthy and in breeding condition, they will be quite fit for breeding this season. But you should not mate them until the beginning of April, nor take more than two nests from them this season. (2) Keep this bird in a comfortable place, not quite cold nor yet overheated, and fairly equable. Stop giving the mixed seed for a week or two. Continue the same staple, give the sponge cake, etc., every second day for two or three weeks, and on the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. If obtainable, give a small growing stool of dandelion daily instead of other green food. In the water dissolve a pinch of Epsom Salts daily for three days, and after this substitute six drops each of glycerine, oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine every second day for a fortnight.

A NON-SITTER (A Beginner).—Sorry, but I know no means of making a hen sit after she has laid her clutch of eggs when she refuses to do so voluntarily. You cannot reason with these creatures. If the incubatory fever does not develop naturally when the eggs are laid, the only way out is to put the eggs under some other hen to hatch and rear. See reply to another querist this week on this subject.

NORWICH HEN PANTING (A. E.).—It is quite useless to mate a hen in the condition you describe. Do you really mean that you give egg food twice a day, as you say, or is it a slip of the pen? If the former, the bird is probably very much overfed. Cage her alone in a fair-sized cage, give a diet of plain canary only, supplemented with a free supply of green food daily, and add as much Epsom Salts as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day for a week, and after this give twenty drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day for another week, still keeping to the above dietary. If bird is not better at the end of the fortnight, write again, and I will advise you further. Do not think of mating her until quite well.

ANXIOUS TO BEGIN (J. M.).—Your anxiety to begin breeding early is misplaced, and would be more usefully devoted to getting the birds into breeding condition. You can at least console yourself with the knowledge that you are losing no time, because there is not the least prospect of these birds breeding successfully just at present. I am inclined to think that they have been more or less ruined for breeding by being kept in the kitchen in unsuitable positions. I would advise you not to think of breeding at present, but complete the fitting up of the outdoor bird-room you mention and transfer the stock there about the middle of April, choosing a spell of nice mild weather for the removal. Meantime see that the birds are kept well away from the fireplace, where the fluctuations of temperature are the least violent, but at the same time see that they are not exposed to cold draughts from doors or windows, and do not hang them too high near the ceiling, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the staple seed diet, give half teaspoonful of egg food per bird, with half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days give about the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give two or three crisp young dandelion leaves to each bird daily. Continue this feeding until the birds have gone to nest, and by the time you are ready to move them to the outdoor room they should be in a more fit condition for breeding. For those that are ill and out of song, add three drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the egg food each time for a fortnight or so. In the water give a pinch of Epsom Salts daily for three days, and afterwards six drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and tincture of tolu every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid.

A STOCK EGG FOOD (Forward III.).—An excellent substitute for the usual fresh egg food is to get a pound of maizena, wafer biscuits and crush or grind them to a coarse powder, then add half a pound of desiccated yolk of egg and mix thoroughly together. Store this mixture in air-tight tins and keep in a cool dry place. When required for use, take the quantity required and slightly moisten it with a few drops of water. If properly stored, you may make sufficient at once to last three months or so.

LOSS OF FEATHERS (B. J. Daw).—It is very doubtful whether the lost feathers will now be reproduced before next moulting season, and you cannot treat it properly if you wish to breed with her at the same time. If you forego breeding for a time, you may try what the following treatment will do for it. In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake dusted with flour of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for three weeks, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts niger, linseed, teazle, and millet, and add to the water on these days as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. Give a small stool of growing dandelion four times a week. You may slightly anoint the bare places twice a week with sulphur ointment, but avoid daubing the plumage unnecessarily.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

AVIARY MATTERS (Derby).—I think you could very well manage a couple more pairs of birds in your aviary, and as you are a beginner I would advise the following:—Cock Goldfinch, cock Siskin, and two or even three more hen Canaries. If you have any difficulty in getting the Siskin, simply add the Goldie and one or two hen Canaries, the less you have the more likely you are to be successful. Give them plenty of nesting boxes, so that there will be no quarrelling among the hens for choice of site, and put in moss, cow hair, and short lengths of grass, etc., to build with. If you find any particular bird at all troublesome, you must take it out; one meddler spoils the harmony of the whole family. After you have had a season's experience with these you could try some of the more difficult crosses.

THRUSH OFF SONG (C.P.).—Your food is hardly good enough to keep a bird on continually. Buy a few good puppy biscuits, break them up, and soak in hot water, and give him this twice a week. Get a pound of good insectile food, make a little damp with scraped raw carrot or boiled potatoes, and give this also twice a week; on other days give the food you are now using, but mix a little green food or scraped carrot with it. Put as much crushed Glauber Salts as will cover a shilling in his drinking water for one day only, repeating the dose three days later. Make a mixture of equal parts honey, fresh lemon juice, and whiskey, and give thirty drops in the water on days that you are not giving the salts; discontinue when the bird is better. Hang him out on fine days and let him bathe frequently. Give a little fruit occasionally, also a house sunil. If you have not procured our Nutshell booklet, on the Thrush, I think you would find it of great use to you.

MOULTING HYBRID (Lucky).—I think your best plan is to let the hen fly all the summer in a good light or aviary, so as to keep her thoroughly sound and in good fettle before the moult. You might with advantage occasionally give her a tonic. would advise the Tincture of Gentian, three drops in a tablespoonful of water; but it is just possible that you will never be able to get her quite as tight in feather as you could in her youth. (2) I certainly would advise you to use the washed sand; one never knows what impurities are allowed to run into a liver, and it is as well to be on the safe side when catering for valuable stock.

HAWFINCH WITH DIARRHOEA (Wag).—It is just possible that the water you are giving your bird is the cause of the looseness of bowels; you had better boil it first and give when cold, but first would give him a dose of Epsom Salts—not a very strong one, about as much as will cover a sixpennypiece in his drinking water. Purchase from the chemist an ounce of Citrate of Iron and Ammonia. Dissolve as much of this as you can lay on a sixpence in twenty drops of port wine and give him in the water three times a week. Then miss a week and give again. I fear you treated your bird wrongly from the start. One of the benefits of hand-rearing birds is that you can bring them up to eat almost any seeds and foods you care to give them, whereas you say yours will only eat sunflower. You should persevere and get him on to something else as well, still giving sunflower as his staple food. Try a little sunflower, also good bold hemp, linseed, and a little canary and rape, see that the sunflower he has is perfectly sound and not musty to the taste or smell. Give him a little night and morning, and let him have the other seeds in the cage during the day. He will gradually take to them, and I do not think you will have much difficulty as regards the sunflower; it is much like sunflower in appearance, only smaller. You might offer a little green food during the summer months—watercress, chickweed, shepherd's purse, etc.; he will not eat much, but if he nibbles a little bit it will all help to keep him in condition, and if you possess a garden, let him have his share of the green peas.

BIRDS NOT SINGING (D. Dockray).—Blackbirds are naturally rather late in coming into song, and the age of your bird would possibly make him less tuneful than in former years. A little good insectile food and a few mealworms would help him considerably. Respecting canary seed as a staple food for Goldfinches, this was dealt with last week, but possibly you did not see it. Make the following seed mixture: Six parts of teazle and hemp, 4 parts canary, one of summer rape; put this in his seed box, and mix two parts of niger and one of maw, and give him half a teaspoonful every other day; in between give half a teaspoonful of a good wild seed mixture. You could also offer him half-dozen sunflower seeds three times a week; these you should crack for him, so that he can easily get at the kernels. He should also have a spray of green food daily, as it comes into season. Dandelion leaves are now quite plentiful, and later on you will be able to get the seed pods. Have you our Nutshell booklet on the Goldfinch? If not, I would advise you to send for one; it would help you considerably.

REDPOLL GREENFINCH HYBRIDS (Glasgow Lad).—You can hardly expect your birds to go to nest quite so early when in captivity as they do when at liberty, specially as you have paired different species together. Your fancier friend is right; there are more Hybrids bred in captivity in the month of July than any other, but that does not mean that your birds will not breed before; they may in May or June, and by your description, I should say your cock Redpoll is getting fit, and the hen will no doubt be ready presently, but you must have patience. It is impossible to rush these matters. Give them plenty of sunflower seed and wild food, such as dandelion, chickweed, groundsel, etc. This will help to bring the hen along, and then about the middle of next month introduce an old Greenfinch's nest in the centre of a small bush, and offer plenty of moss and hair. (2) The beaks of nearly all birds are changed in the breeding season, some much more than others, and you will find some little difference in yours when they are quite fit. (3) As regards your Linnets, the darker one would be the better for exhibition, that is, providing he is of good size and nicely marked. I do not think there would be any difference in them for breeding purposes; if they were mine I should certainly use the larger of the two, size is so important in exhibition Hybrids.

CHAFFINCH-CANARY (Chaffy).—The Chaffinch-Canary cross has not yet been produced, but I still would advise you to have a try for it, the cross will no doubt come some day. I think you would do right to leave him in your aviary for the second nest, but do not force him into condition. If you let him come along naturally, he will be in time, and he less likely to interfere with the other birds. If you think you would rather try him with a hen Bullie, you had better run them together, to see if they agree. Bullies are not easy to please, and yours may strongly object to a Chaffinch mate; if so, you must part them. (2) You do not say how you are feeding your Chaffinch; anyway, he should have mealworms, and all kinds of insect life, such as greenfly, small caterpillars, beetles, etc. The proper feeding of Chaffinches has been given several times lately. Perhaps you can look up back numbers, it may assist you.

JACKDAW WITH FITS (Jackdaw).—As you say you lost a Daw some time ago with fits, and you have one that has them now, there must be something radically wrong with your feeding. You say you are giving him dog biscuit, but you do not tell me what else; and, besides, there are so many makes of dog biscuits, good, bad, and indifferent, that your information is not much of a guide. First of all, shut him up for a day or two, and give a dose of Glauber salts; mix as much as will cover a shilling in two ozs. of water, repeat the dose in a couple of days. Purchase some good puppy biscuit, break up sufficient for the day, and soak in hot water, or a little gravy; also get some coarse chicken meal (best quality), mix a spoonful of meatmeal with it, and soak in the same way; this you can give for a change, also Melox soaked. Offer him scraps from the table, potato, pudding, cooked vegetables, scraps of meat cut up fine, or shredded, also give him two or three mealworms now and again, or any other insects you can lay your hands on, such as beetles, caterpillars, etc. Jackdaws are such general feeders that they will eat almost anything, but most people make the mistake in feeding them entirely upon one food; this is quite against nature. In a wild state they are having a constant change; try the same with your bird, give him a piece of apple and banana, and other fruits, as they come in season, and let him bathe frequently. With the above method of feeding you should have no trouble to keep a Jackdaw in the pink of condition.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (J. Pauley).—The beetles die after they have laid eggs, but I am sorry I am unable to tell you the exact time it takes for the cycle of reproduction. I should think it would depend somewhat upon the contents of the box, and the temperature in which they were kept.

BULLFINCH ROUGH AT THIGHS (W. H. Walsh).—At shows many Bullfinches are put back on account of being rough at the thighs. In some cases this is caused through nervousness, but certain birds never get over this, and are consequently always a trouble. If your Bullie is quite smooth at times, when at home, he may possibly be all right after another moult. For improving the feather and getting into condition, there is nothing to beat plenty of bathing, using rain water if you can get it. He must, of course, be properly fed and trained, so that he is quite steady when exhibited. If after next season's moult your bird is of good colour, but shows a bit of roughness at the first show, do not be discouraged; try him another time. There is nothing like exhibiting birds for steadying them, and giving them confidence.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

ALEXANDRINE (G. Jones).—It is perfectly natural for a Parrot to regurgitate and then re-swallow the partly digested food from the crop. Apparently your bird's digestive system is a little out of order, but this should gradually right itself under treatment. I should retain the oats in the seed mixture, but you can leave out the wheat if it persistently refuses it; otherwise continue the treatment given in our previous reply, and I shall be very much surprised if there is not a marked improvement shortly. There should be a continuous supply of seed in the cage; the other items can be offered at intervals. Do not fail to supply Parrot grit, cuttlebone, and pieces of wood for it to cut up regularly.

SILVER-EARED MESIA (J. G. Steele).—(1) Give this bird milk-sop, made from Horlick's malted milk and sponge cake. After the daily supply of soft food has been moistened, add ten drops of cod liver oil and well stir it in. Give the bird three drops of castor oil at intervals direct to the beak, till the bowels have been fairly well cleared, and if it has not gone too far, the other treatment should soon build it up again. Bring it indoors, and keep it warm till it is fit again, and do not put it out again till weather is fairly settled. While it remains thin, let it have 6 to 12 mealworms daily for a time. (2) Duly noted and complied with.

JAVA SPARROW (A. L. H.).—The White Java Sparrow goes to nest fairly readily in captivity, while the wild Grey species does not, hence the preference for the former. However, if a white hen be paired to a grey cock, they usually go to nest fairly freely, and the bulk of their progeny are pure Greys, with a few pied birds. If the young hens are paired with imported Grey cocks, the result usually is a free breeding strain, and only an occasional pied youngster is thrown. These pied birds, however, are really handsome. A coconut husk, Hartz travelling cage, or a small square box, with an elliptical hole cut out in one side for entrance, are mostly the more favoured nest receptacles. The Budgerigars would be the most likely to do the damage, but these two species usually agree to differ.

GREY PARROT (S. Steward).—It is a case of weak constitution, and it would be better without the sop, but of course you must continue this till it is eating freely of a more general seed mixture. Give it a mixture of canary seed, white millet, oats, sunflower, and hemp, and Indian corn; half the bulk of the mixture to be Indian corn, the other items in equal parts. If it will not take the mixture so, then give the Indian corn separately, and the other mixture in another tin; it will ultimately take to it. Apple is one of the most wholesome fruits it can have; do not stint it. It would have helped me if you had described the sop, but if it will eat a piece of biscuit, plain cake, or crust of bread, then give 5 drops of cod liver oil on one of these twice daily for some time, and if it will take it so, then you must give the sop as dry as possible, and put the cod liver oil with that. Put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in its drinking water every other day, and give occasionally one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia (in the drinking water), as required to keep the bowels moving freely, but the voiding must not be continuously liquid. Report progress later. It will keep its feathers as it gains in stamina.

BUDGERIGARS' NEW FEATHERS (A. G. H.).—(1) Nothing extra required, the feathers will be reproduced in the normal period. (2) If you put in a husk, it is very probable that they will breed, but to give the birds proper exercise, it should be at least half as large again; no birds get out of condition quicker for lack of wing exercise than Budgerigars, yet they are a very hardy species. You will have to fasten up a coconut husk in one back corner, and this will occupy about a quarter of the space of your present cage. (3) Budgies are plain feeders, when it is obtainable, flowering and seeding grain is what will most appeal to them as a tit-bit. At the present time, they might pick the seed from the end of a millet spray, if held against the wires. (4) It will be best to give them the opportunity to breed, and this will quite appeal to your little daughters, but your cage is certainly not large enough for four birds of the size of Budgerigars and if they breed the young, must be removed as soon as they are able to crack seed for themselves. A cage to accommodate two pairs of Budgerigars or 1 pair each Budgies and Lovebirds must be at least 3½ft. long, 1½ft. deep, and 2ft. high.

AILING AMAZON (N.F.A.).—Continue to treat as per our former reply, but in lieu of the oxymel of squills, get the following: ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine, in equal parts. Use half-teaspoonful of this mixture to each two tablespoonfuls of the drinking water, and continue daily till relief is given. Give the castor-oil as required, that is, sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery-loose. If the nostrils are moist, with a tendency to run, spray or bathe with a dilute glyco-thymoline solution. All the items you name of its dietary are permissible, but if the "etc." includes tea, coffee, or milk sops, or animal food of any kind, stop such at once. It can have nuts in variety, any kind it cares for, and it should have continuous supplies of grit, cuttlebone, and pieces of wood to cut up. I should continue the cod-liver oil till the bird is quite strong again. As soon as weather is more settled and regular, it can go out-of-doors during the genial warm periods of April days in some unexposed position. In the meantime, use precautions against draught and chill as per previous reply.

MACAW (Miss A. K.).—Re collar, I have sent you details per post. Macaws are hardy birds and can be kept out-of-doors most of the time from Spring to mid-Autumn, but even at these periods they should not be subjected to biting winds or deluging rains. At the present time, even in the South, I consider the weather too treacherous to subject birds in a cage or on a stand to it. About a month hence it can go out on all suitable days; in fact, will be all the better if out most of the time during the day. For a month at least give it five drops of cod liver oil daily, on a piece of cake, bread, biscuit, or anything similar the bird will take.

A FEATHER-PICKER (B.C.T.).—You give me no idea as to how you are feeding and treating it. The diet consisted of a good seed mixture (see other replies), ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, dry crusts, etc., with regular supplies of grit, cuttlebone, water and pieces of wood to chew up. Give the magnesia every fourth day so long as the voidings are not watery loose, and on the intervening days give half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. The powder bloom is quite natural, but the bird is evidently in a heated condition, but this should soon pass, and as soon as weather permits, let it have an airing out-of-doors on suitable days, but do not place it in a draughty position. If you have been in the habit of giving sops and table scraps, stop these at once. Get our Nutshell, "Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free, from our Manager; it will help you. Do not use a metal drinker when giving drugs.

RUSSIAN SPROSSER (G.E.L.).—You cannot do a great deal to assist the bird; it will probably get no worse, but you may help matters a little by paring away the lower mandible on the side where the pressure is, and thus prevent further pushing out of line. I take it from your letter that the formation is of much the same substance as the mandible. In such case it might be almost entirely filed away, or, at any rate, sufficiently so as to relieve all pressure. It would almost appear to me as if the lower mandible had been fractured while the bird was in the cage, and that the malformation was the result of the fracture. In such case the malformation is not likely to increase. It will be better to leave the formation alone if it is not growing up the side of the mandible and pushing it over, as in such case it is not likely to increase, and if such is the case it is not likely to cause the bird any inconvenience, though of course it mars its beauty. Perhaps on examination you could give me some idea of the character of the formation. Is it of a calcareous nature, or of what substance is it?

ROSETTE PARROT (Mrs. L. F.).—I presume your bird is a Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. The sample mixture is not a good one, dusty, and contains items which would be better left out. Try the following: One quart each canary, white millet, and oats, one pint each sunflower, hemp, maize, and paddy rice; half-pint dari and pea nuts; well mix the whole. Also supply ripe fruit (any kind it will eat), biscuit, stale crusts, nuts in variety, green food (table salads will answer the purpose), cuttlebone and grit must be regularly supplied. Cease giving the rice pudding. Continue the use of honey and horax. Of course, while the tongue is sore it will roll it about. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day for a month. Give five drops of cod liver oil twice daily on a piece of crust, biscuit, or anything similar the bird will eat. Keep it warm and out of draught, yet not away from light and air. On the days you are not giving the magnesia put half-a-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. Report progress in a month. Of course, if the bird becomes worse, write at once, or let your nearest veterinary surgeon see it.

WHAT PAROT? (Hibernia).—While your description reads very like a Festive Amazon, there is one feature lacking in your description, viz., the Festive has the lower back (just above the tail) crimson, like the forehead; if this patch is lacking in your bird, it is not a Festive and must be, I think, a Diademed Amazon—there are several species, which do not differ greatly from each other, and which makes it very difficult to make a definite pronouncement. If you could sketch out a rough diagram of the shape of the bird, and roughly mark out the different colour areas, writing the name of the colour in each part, I could possibly reach a definite conclusion, a very rough diagram would suffice. The values of the species referred to would be about that given in previous reply, one or two of them, 25 per cent. more.

BISHOPS (H.C.).—The Scarlet or Madagascar Bishop is a little darker brown, especially on the underparts, and more striated than the Orange Bishop. There will be no difficulty in picking out the sexes as soon as they don nuptial plumage about June, as then the former will be principally fiery scarlet, and the latter vivid orange and black. Millet and canary about meets their needs for seed. A millet spray is good for them, also seeding and flowering grass, and two or three live insects per bird per diem. They make plenty of noise during the nesting season with their rather raspy, screechy song, but tastes differ, for I once heard a juvenile who was watching the Weavers in the Western Aviary at the London Zoo, exclaim: "Can't they sing, mother!" So, perforce, I must say they have a song, or at any rate a noise which passes for such.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

C. Harrison.—Avadavat died as the result of a fit. The beak was broken at the edges through some cause or other. The bird was otherwise quite healthy.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Mary Scott.—We are much obliged to you for the sketch, which we will endeavour to utilise in the near future.

Proposed New Society (F.A.S.).—When you have decided on the date and place of the meeting we shall be very pleased to publish the notice, provided, of course, that it is authenticated with your own name.

Newspaper Report (Pro Bono Publico).—Sorry, but we cannot make use of cuttings forwarded without the name and address of the sender.

Newspaper Cutting (Visitor).—Thanks for cutting of which we have been pleased to make use.

Interested.—Your sketch is ingenious, but we are afraid its publication might stir up "trade jealousy," eh?

One of the Seventeen.—The allegations contained in your letter are libellous and, of course, actionable at law, as surely you must realise.

A Holder for Cuttlefish, Green Food, etc.

Sir,—I am sending you an illustration of a small green food or cuttlefish-bone holder. It has been designed chiefly to hold the small pieces of cuttlefish-bone: any small bits that break off when cutting larger pieces. It also holds green food down to a single leaf of dandelion. I hope it will commend itself to readers of CAGE BIRDS generally. I have had many good ideas from CAGE BIRDS, and I think I owe a little in return.

E. BAYLISS.

The Border Fancy C.C. and Rung Birds.

Sir,—I trust you will forgive me for again trespassing on your space, but I am surprised to find that my letter appearing in your issue of the 7th has either been overlooked or treated with contempt. I can hardly think that the latter is the case, but as I am still in doubt as to what my position is, as pointed out in my letter, I should be pleased if either the secretary would reply, or some other member who was present at the general meeting when the matter in question was under discussion. On the other hand, if there is nothing forthcoming, I have only one alternative left, i.e., to hand in my resignation to the Border Fancy Canary Club. Perhaps it might be of some interest to the officials to know that I have done a considerable amount of good in this district for the "Wee gem." In fact, I have just been successful in getting one or two prominent fanciers to take up the same and am sure that ultimately the outcome will be beneficial to the variety. I might further add that all the young birds bred around here will be rung.

ANXIOUS.

The Making of Seed and Water Holes.

Sir,—Perhaps some of your readers who make their own cage fronts would like to know of my method of making the wire holes for seed and drinking purposes. My method is as follows: Procure a screw stopper from a mineral water bottle (they can very often be found in the streets). Remove rubber band and drill a hole large enough to admit a piece of cage wire, close to the screw shank and through the top of stopper. Bend wire about ½ inch from the end at right angles and insert through the hole. Bend the main wire round shank until it meets the piece in the hole. Take off and bend the main wire in position for going through the punch bar. Clip off the projecting piece which was bent to go in the hole and you have a perfectly round ring of nice size for the purpose required. I enclose a ring made with above method to let you see the result.
